STOCKS CRASH FOR PAPER LOSS OF TWO BILLION

4,867,000 Shares Are Tossed on Market.

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—With volatile issues plunging headlong under a fresh torrent of liquidation, the stock market was again rocked violently today in the heaviest Saturday trading in history. During the two hours' trading on the New York stock exchange a total of 4,867,530 shares changed hands and the accompanying reaction was the severest since Dec. 20 of last year, as gauged by the average prices to which representative stocks were reduced.

It is estimated that the short session resulted in a paper loss of two billion dollars in the value of securities. The stocks which caught the full impact of the selling were driven down at a furious rate, some of them losing as much as 10 to 18 points in a perpendicular drop. The whole list was sharply depressed, falling without interruption during the greater part of the two hour period. There was a partial recovery in some stocks in the last 15 minutes, but the final quotations in most instances were at or near the lowest levels of the day.

Stock Ticker Swamped.

So enormous was the turnover that the stock ticker fell behind from the very start of trading, lagging so far that the tape quickly lost its usefulness as a guide to the market. The final quotations were not recorded until 1:56 o'clock, nearly two hours after trading ended. The curb ticker printed the last quotations at 1:41 o'clock. So far as the stock exchange was concerned, the tardiness was greater than it has ever been before on a Saturday.

The following table shows how 50 representative stocks on the New York stock exchange suffered:

The decline on the stock exchange started at the opening, when large accumulations of overnight selling orders were executed. Stocks were offered in uncommonly large blocks and the opening prices showed breaks of from a fraction to 6 points from the closing levels of the day before.

The initial transaction in Radio involved 30,000 shares at 54¼, an overnight decline of 1¾ points. U. S. ARRESTS W. R. NICHOLS AS TAX DODGER

William R. Nichols, whose name figured last week in the investigation of the office of Christian P. Paschen, city building commissioner, was arrested yesterday in pursuance of a campaign which United States Attorney Johnson is promoting to snare income tax dodgers. His arrest on a warrant charging willful attempt to defeat and evade payment of the federal levy is considered important by the prosecutor.

The accusation is not so dependent on the alleged amount of tax Nichols owes—$11,606.52, according to the warrant—as on the manner by which he gathered his income, it is understood.

He is said to be a friend of Commissioner Paschen and also of Assessor Gene G. Oliver. Oliver has already been indicted for tax fraud, and his case will probably go to trial on May 16.

Questioned by U. S. Officials.

Carrying a secret warrant, Special Intelligence Agent Clarence Converse of the internal revenue department took Nichols into custody on the north side late yesterday. Nichols was taken to Mr. Johnson's office in the federal building, where a group of officials questioned him for three hours, and later he went to the detective bureau, where he must spend the week end.

At the federal building he faced Mr. Johnson, Assistant United States Attorney Dwight Green, tax expert; Chief Special Intelligence Agent A. P. Madden, Mr. Converse, and C. W. Ooms, assistant to Green.

Report His Income Traced.

The five men informed Nichols, it is understood, that the government has traced income to him for 1926, 1927, 1928 as follows:

1926	$ 19,137.24
1927	49,216.79
1928	54,569.91
Total	$122,923.94

As a salesman for the Wisconsin Lime and Cement company, Nichols' salary is reported to be $6,000 a year. Based on the adjusted income, according to federal agents, he owes the government:

1928	5,926.44
Total	$11,606.52

All that went on in Mr. Johnson's office is not known, but it was reported that Nichols was closely questioned on his connections with both the board of assessors and the board of review.

Tells of Tax Adjustments.

Nichols said he had worked with a lawyer on tax adjustments, it was reported, and had accepted fees for such services. He was hazy on names and dates; could not remember to whom he had given his services, and could not recall individual cases. Some of the questioning is reported to have gone like this:

"You are a close associate of Gene Oliver, are you not?" Nichols was asked.

"I have been in close contact with Mr. Oliver," was the reply.

"You've even occupied a desk in his office, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Which one?"

"Mr. Oliver's, most of the time," he is reported to have replied.

Investigate His Accounts.

Government agents are investigating to determine whether the $122,923 income which they say has already been traced to Nichols represents all the money he received during the three years in question. In inspecting his accounts the special agents are reported to have run across one batch of checks that totaled more than $43,000, written over a short period. The investigators also are seeking to learn whether any others shared in the money.

The name of the lawyer whom Nichols mentioned was being closely guarded by the prosecutors.

Nichols paid the regulation tax on his $6,000 income, the agents said, but made no mention in his returns of the other sums.

Placed in Police Cell.

After the three hours of questioning Nichols was taken to the detective bureau, where he was closeted briefly with Chief of Detectives Stege and thereafter taken to a cell. He is to remain there until his arraignment tomorrow morning before United States Commissioner Walker.

Mr. Green indicated that he may

U. S. OFFERS PAY FOR SNOOPING ON TAX DODGERS

Money is offered to Chicagoans who wish to become informers—not dry snoopers—for the government. All that is required is information regarding persons who fail to pay income taxes or conceal assets in filing their returns.

A. P. Madden, chief of the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department, made this announcement yesterday, recalling the payment of $213,000 in customs fines by Mrs. Robert L. Dodge of New York. A French informer is reputed to have received $50,000 for reporting on Mrs. Dodge, who smuggled in undeclared cosmetic wares.

Mr. Madden said that 10 per cent of the tax collected from any person as the result of information turned over by an informer would be paid as a reward. This law is not new and some Chicagoans have been paid as high as $10,000 for such information, he said. The identity of the informer is not divulged, nor is he required to testify.

INDIANS MARCH TO PAY TRIBUTE TO DEAD CHIEF

Post Oak Mission, Okla., May 3.—[U. P.]—Hundreds of Indians, some in business suits and some in blankets, started their march to this little missionary post tonight to pay tribute to their dead chieftain.

Tomorrow these red men and their squaws will gather around a granite slab in the Indian cemetery here and see the veil lifted from a monument erected to the memory and deeds of Quanah Parker, "Comanche Man of Destiny."

Members of the I-Zee-O Indian American Legion post and a squad of Fort Sill soldiers will fire salutes to Quanah, a chieftain who once led his people in warfare against the whites, but who later told them to get "educated, know work and make living."

The veil will be lifted from the monument by two of the chief's granddaughters.

FLYING BOATS TO MAKE TOUR OF GREAT LAKES

Detroit, Mich., May 3.—[U. P.]—An airplane tour of amphibian planes which will touch thirty or more points on the great lakes, was announced here tonight by the Detroit Flying club.

The cruise will start Aug. 6 and end Aug. 17. Wayne J. Sheldon has been named commander of the cruise, and Paul Strasburg will referee. The pathfinding trip, on which arrangements for housing and entertainment will be made, will start May 26.

The great lakes trip will mark the first venture of this nature with amphibian craft, according to Sheldon, who said manufacturers were particularly interested because of the excellent field for flying boats to be visited.

Opera-Movie Depicts Life of Columbus

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 3.—The Prussian State opera, the favorite theater of the former kaiser, saw the art worlds of France and Germany unite today to pay homage to Christopher Columbus, discoverer of America. A rehearsal was given of a new form of opera, an operatic biography of Christopher Columbus, assisted by moving pictures.

Paul Claudel, French ambassador to Washington, wrote the drama; his friend, Darius Milhaud, French composer, wrote the music; Prof. Franz Ludwig Hoerth staged it, and Erich Kleiber was conductor. M. Claudel, for the first time in modern opera, made ample use of films as a background to accelerate and liven up the action of his drama. The Berlin opera house did a fine job in the staging and production of the huge opera, with its 27 pictures, 51 soloists and a big chorus. Aravantinos designed the scenery.

Movie Portrays Working of Mind.

Columbus' life is presented symbolically in the opera. His first name, Christopher, meaning bearer of a new idea, and Columbus, derived from the word "dove" are used as an analogy to the biblical story of the spirit appearing in the form of a dove. In the opera, a dove which Queen Isabella played with as a child, is released. It flies to Columbus at Genoa, and is symbolical of his mission.

The workings of Columbus' mind are portrayed on the screen: past, present and future thoughts, together with those of his contemporaries, are often presented simultaneously. In one scene Columbus is the central figure on the stage; and the chorus, using the ancient Greek method, elucidates the action, while on the screen Columbus as a youth, middle aged man and old man, is seen in a rapid succession of characterizations.

Modernists Defend Work.

Modernists defend the new opera declaring that it has everything from deep religious feeling to wild jazz. Old timers do not share this view, and express great disappointment that the Prussian Opera house has devoted months of energy and vast funds to produce it.

"For politeness sake," they say, "our critics will not dare to say just what they think of the music, while, if M. Claudel had produced the opera at Paris first, nobody would have been scared to whistle at parts which should rouse the idignation of art lovers. But the Germans succumbed to French flattery when M. Claudel told them that there was no chorus in the world that can rival the chorus of the Berlin Opera house."

COP'S PROPHECY BORNE OUT WHEN YOUTH IS SHOT

A police lieutenant's prediction was fulfilled yesterday when George Petrick, 22 years old, was taken to the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island with his body torn by shotgun slugs.

Only a few weeks ago Lieut. Walter Storms, who knew Petrick as a "copper hater" from frequent encounters, prophesied that unless the young man reformed there would "be a bullet with Petrick on it within a month."

Petrick was taken to the hospital a short time after a shooting had been reported at 1746 West 95th street, where Gresham police found a broken shotgun stock inside the shattered window of a dress shop. There were blood stains on the sidewalk and the police found a shotgun, both barrels of which had been discharged. Although Petrick refused to talk, investigation led the police to believe that he had shot himself accidentally in an attempt at burglary. He was removed to the Bridewell hospital, where, it was said, his condition is serious. Police are seeking two of his companions.

STILL IS FOUND IN OHIO PRISON AS REVOLT DIES

Columbus, O., May 3.—(AP)—A still containing two gallons of potent liquor was found today in the White City idle house cell block of Ohio penitentiary, where revolting convicts held sway for several days following the disastrous fire.

The still was secreted in a radio cabinet in one of the cells. Ohio National Guardsmen, inspecting the cell block, which had been damaged by the unruly prisoners, discovered it.

At the penitentiary the passive rebellion entered into by about one-fourth of the prison population of 4,000 to enforce their demands for the dismissal of Warden Preston E. Thomas seemed to have been broken after nearly three days of military control.

After many difficulties, Pence completed the enumeration. Then along came the Winchester tornado Thursday night and gave his entire report a wide circulation. His house, too.

County of Hoover's Birth Minus Marriages in April

Tipton, Ia., May 3.—[Special.]—Not a marriage license was issued in Cedar county, President Hoover's birthplace, during the month of April. It was the first time in the more than fifty years' history of the county. The stork also seems to have fallen down on the job. The vital statistics show a decrease in the birth rate since Jan. 1.

Mother Jones at Peace with Rockefellers

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—Mother Jones, militant woman labor leader, who celebrated her one hundredth birthday Thursday today dictated a friendly reply to a telegram of congratulation from John D. Rockefeller Jr., son of her former bitter enemy.

The Rockefeller telegram said:

"Please accept my heartiest congratulations on your one hundredth birthday anniversary. Your loyalty to your ideals, your fearless adherence to your duty as you have seen it, is an inspiration to all who have known you. May you have continued health and happiness as long as life lasts."

Mother Jones Replies.

Mother Jones' reply read:

"Your good wishes and hopes for continued long life on my one hundredth birthday was a happy surprise and among those messages most appreciated by me. Knowing all the responsibilties on your shoulders, it was a human act to think kindly of me at this time, and your message was the expression of a Christian heart."

Mother Jones said today that several years ago John D. Rockefeller Jr., invited her to his home for dinner, but that she did not go because people would have said that she "had sold out the workers."

Forgives, but Can't Forget.

"Mr. Rockefeller has a Christian heart, and his message to me shows it is still beating," she said. "I can't tell him that the past is buried and we are friends again but I want him to know I appreciate his message. I forgive them, but I don't forget. Why, John D. Rockefeller had me put in jail."

Mother Jones began her bitter fight against the Rockefellers after mine guards at Ludlow, Colo., fired on a group of strikers in 1914, killing 33 persons. As a result of agitations against the Rockefellers she served a jail sentence.

VARE ACCUSES PINCHOT IN LOSS OF SENATE SEAT

Philadelphia, Penn., May 3.—[U. P.]—William S. Vare, titular head of the Philadelphia Republican organization backing James J. Davis for the senate, and Francis Shunk Brown for governor, charged in a radio address here tonight that the United States senate seat to which he was elected in 1926 was "stolen" from him "by the unwarranted action of Gifford Pinchot," one of Brown's gubernatorial opponents in the May 20 primaries.

Vare, broken in health and making his only public speech of the campaign was referring to the famous "certificate of doubt" signed by Pinchot, who was governor at the time of the 1926 election.

Divorce Bill Says Wife Has Friend on Every Battleship

Joseph S. Windall, 1433 East 109th street, yesterday filed a bill for divorce against Mrs. Peggy Windall in the Superior court charging that she has a friend on every battleship in the navy. The Windalls were married in California when his enlistment in the navy expired Jan. 11, 1928. After their marriage he found that his wife received letters from sailors on almost every ship in the navy, Windall alleges. He left his wife two months later when she refused to drop her correspondence, the bill states.

HOUSE DEFEATS SENATE CLAUSE ON DEBENTURES

Keeps Flexible Plan President Wants.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—President Hoover won a complete victory today in actions by the house on controversial administrative provisions in the tariff bill.

The house, by a vote of 161 to 231, defeated a motion to accept the senate export debenture amendment, inclusion of which in the final bill to be sent to the White House probably would have resulted in an executive veto.

The house, by a vote of 154 to 232, rejected a motion to accept the senate amendments repealing the flexible provisions of the present law. The President has strongly advocated retention of power in the executive to make emergency changes in duties on the recommendation of the tariff commission.

Sent Back to Conference.

By unanimous consent the house sent back to conference provisions relating to the reorganization of the tariff commission. The disputed senate amendments restored a bipartisan commission of six members in place of a proposed nonpartisan commission of seven members which President Hoover originally suggested but which he has not insisted upon.

A letter from President Hoover, which was interpreted by Representative John Q. Tilson [Rep., Conn.], majority leader, to whom it was addressed, as meaning that a tariff bill containing an export debenture provision would be vetoed, figured prominently in the debate.

In the letter the President reiterated his contention that the export debenture proposal, which consists of a bounty equal to one-half the tariff duty upon such exported farm products as might be designated by the federal farm board, would eventually depress prices instead of elevating them. The President presented a new estimate by the tariff commission that the plan might cost as much as 280,000,000 dollars annually.

Senate May Eliminate It.

As a result of the decisive action by the house it is expected that the senate, which on several different occasions during the consideration of the farm relief and tariff bills, has declared for the export debenture plan, will consent to its elimination from the final conference report.

The senate also is expected to accept flexible tariff and tariff commission provisions which are in accord with the desires of the house and of the President. Today's action by the house meant that these provisions go back to conference. It is within the power of the conferees to submit to the two houses a modification of the original house proposals. There have been reports that a compromise under which the President would retain the power to change duties but subject to a veto by congress might be acceptable to the administration and that a concession of this character would make it more certain that the senate would agree to the elimination of the export debenture provision.

President's Power Is Issue.

Under both the house and senate flexible tariff provision the tariff commission would continue to make investigations and recommendations as to changes in duties necessary to equalize costs of production, the difference between the two being that in the one case the President would retain the right to increase or decrease duties as not more than 50 per cent, while in the other the congress alone would have authority to make changes.

Today's actions disposed of all tariff controversies so far as the house is concerned. In the three days the subject has been before the house a partial conference report on all items agreed to by the house and senate conferees was accepted. The lower senate rate on sugar was accepted, retention of lumber and shingles on the free list was approved, a compromise rate on cement was favored and a senate duty on silver was rejected.

Separate Vote Planned.

The parliamentary status now requires the conferees to submit a final report on a number of these items. Under promises made by the senate leaders the senate will be given an opportunity to vote separately on the export debenture and flexible tariff provisions. The tariff conference report and disputed items will reach the senate next week.

Today's house session ran for seven hours. Two and one-half hours were allotted to the export debenture debate and three hours to the flexible tariff debate.

In the vote on the export debenture provision 48 Republicans deserted the administration to vote in favor of the debenture, while 37 Democrats joined the administration against it.

Majority Against It.

Among representatives of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Wisconsin 23 votes were cast for the debenture provision and 41 against it.

The votes of members from these five states were:

Illinois—For debenture: Hall and Irwin, Republicans; Arnold, Rainey, and Sabath, Democrats. Against debenture: Adkins, Allen, Buckbee, Chindblom, Denison, De Priest, Holaday, Morton D. Hull, William E. Hull, McCormick, Michaelson, Ramey, Reid, Sproul, and Yates, Republicans; Igoe, Democrat.

Indiana—For debenture: Canfield and Greenwood, Democrats; against debenture: Elliott, Hall, Hickey, Hogg, Johnson, Purnell, Vestal, and Wood, Republicans.

Iowa Vote Split.

Iowa—For debenture: Campbell, Dowell, Haugen, Robinson, and Thurston, Republicans; against debenture: Cole, Kopp, Letts, Ramseyer, and Swanson, Republicans.

Michigan—For debenture: Ketcham, Republican; against debenture; Bohn, Clancy, Cramton, Hooper, Hudson, McLaughlin, Mapes, Michener, Vincent, and Woodruff, Republicans.

Wisconsin—For debenture: Browne, Cooper, Frear, Kading, Lampert, Nelson, Peavy, Schneider, and Merlin Hull, Republicans; against debenture: Schafer and Stafford, Republicans.

In the vote on repeal of the flexible tariff only 12 Republicans turned against the administration to support the senate amendment. Eight of these were from Wisconsin. Eight Democrats voted for retention of the flexible tariff.

Westerner Makes Motion.

The motion for acceptance of the senate export debenture provision was made by Representative Samuel B. Hill [Dem., Wash.], while the motion for acceptance of the senate flexible tariff repeal amendment was offered by Representative Heartsill Ragon [Dem., Ark.].

The debate on the flexible tariff centered on the question of whether the taxing power which under the constitution is delegated to congress should be conferred upon the executive. Although the present flexible provisions have been upheld by the Supreme court, several Democrats undertook to question their constitutionality.

Representative Ragon asserted that the flexible clause was put in the Fordney-McCumber tariff act as a "temporary provision" to be invoked for the reduction of rates which might be made too high in the uncertain conditions which followed the world war. It was never intended, he argued, to give the President power to increase rates, but that the provision had been used almost exclusively for this purpose. The big question, he said, was whether congress should surrender its control of taxation to the executive.

Representative Carl A. Chindblom [Rep., Ill.], Frederick M. Davenport [Rep., N. Y.], and Frank Crowther [Rep., N. Y.] were among those opposing acceptance of the senate provision.

Letter from Beck Read.

Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.] read a letter from Representative James M. Beck [Rep., Pa.], who was absent on account of illness, reiterating his opposition to the flexible tariff. If present Mr. Beck said he would have voted for the senate provisions "which vindicate the constitutional prerogatives of congress, and against the house provisions, which virtually surrender the taxing power to the President, and against any suggested compromise which vests a power in the President to impose a tax." Mr. Beck led a lone fight against the flexible tariff when the bill was in the house a year ago.

Representative Tilson, in reading President Hoover's letter during the discussion of the export debenture, said that there was no question what would happen to the bill if it reached the White House with this provision in it. In response to a direct question by Representative A. J. Montague [Dem., Va.] as to whether the bill would be voted if it included the export debenture provision, Mr. Tilson said he was sure it would be. Mr. Tilson said that the tariff bill without the export debenture provision will be beneficial to agriculture through many increases in rates on farm products.

Hoover's Letter Quoted.

President Hoover's letter to Representative Tilson was as follows:

"I have your letter of inquiry as to whether I see any reason to change the views which I expressed on April 20, last year, upon the so-called debenture plan introduced by the senate into the tariff bill. I do not.

"Some minor alterations have been made in the plan which do not go to the essential facts that the practical working of it will depress and not elevate prices to the farmer. The plan in the present bill presents an additional objection in that the export subsidies proposed vary with different agricultural products and thus are widely different to different farmers. They vary from about 9 per cent upon the cost of production of rye to apparently near 100 per cent on tobacco. In the latter case growers could apparently afford to raise their product and export it for the subsidy alone.

"Since my previous statement the tariff commission has estimated the cost of the plan to the treasury, if put into operation and on the basis of present exports, at about $280,000,000 per annum."

Fort Opposes Plan.

Representative Franklin W. Fort [Rep., N. J.], who, as a member of the committee on agriculture, was the chief spokesman for the administration in opposition to the debenture scheme during consideration of farm relief legislation a year ago, presented to the house detailed figures from the tariff commission in support of the estimate that the scheme as embodied in the senate amendment might cost $280,000,000 annually.

DISFRANCHISED CHICAGO FIGHTS NEW TAX POWER

Ready for Downstate Siege in Assembly.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Leaders of the Chicago delegation in the Illinois general assembly said yesterday that they and their associates are prepared to withstand a siege indefinitely rather than vote for an amendment to the state constitution such as is to be proposed to the special session next week.

Expression of this character came from both Republicans and Democrats, both senators and representatives. They were emphatic in stating that the amendment resolution now being formulated by the special commission on revenue will fail to receive the two-thirds majority required for it in each house. They say the whole delegation from Chicago and its suburbs will be called upon to stand against it despite pressure that may be exerted by the state administration or by local taxing bodies crying for relief legislation.

Such views were expressed by Senator Roy C. Woods and Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Republicans, and by Senator Thomas J. Courtney and Representative Michael L. Igoe, Democrats.

Would Lift Restrictions.

The special commission created by the last regular session will submit to the special session a proposed amendment to the revenue article of the state constitution which will remove all reservations and empower the assembly to impose taxation, including an income tax, by a mere majority vote.

A similar proposal was smothered in 1928 when Cook county legislators protested that such an amendment would be unfair because its citizens would not have an equal voice with the citizens in the smaller cities and the rural sections in protecting themselves against unfair taxation.

The Cook county legislators pointed out then that since 1901 one assembly after another has refused to reapportion the state into senatorial districts as required by the constitution, depriving Cook county for years of five seats in the senate and fifteen in the lower house. It is said that the present census may show the metropolis and its suburbs entitled to an even greater number of additional votes in both houses.

Siege is Threatened.

Some of the legislators interviewed yesterday used the expression "withstand a siege" because of reports from Springfield that efforts will be made to compel them to pass the constitutional amendment resolution before the downstate majority will act upon appeals from the city of Chicago and other local governments for financial relief legislation.

"I hope," said Senator Woods, "that these reports are not true, that neither Gov. Emmerson nor any of the other forces favoring the amendment will attempt to take advantage of the crying needs of Chicago, our public schools, and our county government.

"All we are asking is for legal authorization to spend our own money. We are not asking for money from the state or from downstate. Therefore, our bills should be considered without reference to the constitutional amendment. The amendment should stand or fall on its merits alone.

"Such an amendment might be adopted if the assembly were constitutionally organized, if every citizen had the same voice there as every other citizen. But under the present conditions the Chicago man's vote counts only four-fifths of a vote from a downstater in the election of the assembly. We must have our full voice in legislation before such a radical change is made in the constitution."

Courtney Points to Census.

"The state must be reapportioned not only in new senatorial districts but also in new congressional and new Supreme court districts," said Senator Courtney. "The situation has been unjust for years and the opportunity for curing it comes with the approaching completion of the 1930 census.

"Incomplete census reports already show that the population has dwindled in many of the downstate districts during the last ten years, while Cook county districts have grown. Chicago is not alone in asking reapportionment. Other cities are joining in the demand and it will come with certainty in a few years, but the time for it is with the completion of the present census.

"So far as I can see there is no emergency about the constitutional amendment at this time. It is one of those matters that can be handled to better effect in the regular session next January."

"We cannot give a free hand to the legislature in such an important field as that of taxation unless we are given our full vote," said Representative Schnackenberg.

"We cannot surrender our right to equality," said Representative Igoe, minority leader of the house. "I am sure every man from Cook county realizes that and will stand firm."

ask that Nichols be placed under $10,000 bond at that time, but it is not considered likely that any details of the charges against him will be heard then. Green will probably ask for a continuance, it was said; perhaps to have the case heard by the May federal grand jury.

The details of Nichols' connection with Oliver will probably be heard at the assessor's trial, the prosecutors have intimated. Oliver was named last November in four indictments charging that he owes approximately $42,000 on a net income of $272,616.88 for 1926, 1927, and 128.

Named in Building Quiz.

Nichols' name was brought into the investigation of Building Commissioner Paschen's office after Jules K. Masse, an architect, had testified in a civil suit before Judge Kavanagh that he was told he would have to contribute $10,000 to Paschen's campaign fund in order to obtain a building permit. Nichols so informed him, Masse testified, and a grand jury investigation of the bribery charge was immediately instituted. Masse at first refused to testify before the grand jury but later appeared.

Masse testified in the civil suit that he had gone to the building commissioner's office with Nichols and that Paschen had told him then that Nichols would "get in touch with him in a few days." Nichols has denied Masse's charges.

The May county grand jury will continue the investigation into Paschen's office on Tuesday. Assistant State's Attorneys Homer Dodge and Grenville Beardsley yesterday communicated with the chief of police at Miami Beach, asking that he attempt to convince Roy F. France, head of the architectural concern bearing his name, that his testimony is vital to the inquiry. France's concern drew plans for an apartment building, and Masse worked on the plans. The unpaid salary he was to have received for this work led to the civil suit.

TAX RATES CUT IN 6 OF SOUTH COUNTY TOWNS

Reductions Made to Meet Increased Valuation.

County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer yesterday made public the 1928 tax rates for Chicago Heights, Glenwood, Homewood, Steger Flossmoor, and South Chicago Heights. All the towns except parts of Homewood and Flossmoor are in the township of Bloom. Taxpayers received a marked reduction in rates because six of the local governments reduced their rates to conform with the increased valuations under the reassessment.

The rates for the six suburbs for each $100 of assessed valuation as compared with those of 1927 are as follows:

	1928.	1927.
Chicago Heights	$4.92	$6.25
Glenwood	3.79	4.83
Homewood	4.56	5.53
Steger	4.75	5.76
Flossmoor	2.82	3.88
South Chicago Heights	4.48	5.83

The taxing bodies which voluntarily reduced their rates are the township, road and bridges, hard roads, sanitary district, school district 161 and high school district 206.

$6,000,000 Boost in Valuation.

The total assessed valuation of the township increased from $9,029,584 in 1927 to $15,658,219 in 1928. The rates of the tax levying bodies common to all the suburbs are:

	1928	1927		1928	1927
State	$.30	$.30	County	$.46	$.45
Town	.05	.12	Forest pres.	.10	.08
Hard road	.13	.33	Road-bridge	.15	.32

The rate for the sanitary district is 6 cents. The township was not in the sanitary district in 1927. The rate is applied in the computations against all the suburbs, although portions are not in the district. The rate for school district 161 was $1.20 in 1927 and fell to $.60 in 1928. The high school rate dropped from $1.18 to $.79.

The various village rates and school rates which are fixed against the several suburbs are:

	1927.	1928.
Chicago Heights	$1.09	$1.01
Chicago Heights Park	.38	.30
Glenwood	.67	.67
Homewood	.94	.73
Steger	.95	.92
Flossmoor	.67	.63
South Chicago Heights	1.05	.97
School bonds, Dists. 153-161	.00	.07
School Dist. 153	1.81	1.72
School Dist. 167	1.38	1.08
School Dist. 194	2.00	1.79
School Dist. 170	2.00	1.47
Non High School	.30	.25

The village of Homewood was the only one of the suburbs to reduce its rate by lowering its levy. The rates made public yesterday do not apply to that portion of Homewood which lies in the township of Bremen or that part of Flossmoor which is in the township of Rich. These rates are to be announced later.

The remaining suburbs made no reduction in their rates voluntarily. The decreases were made by the county clerk in adjusting their levies to the increased valuations.

Swanson Warns Officials.

State's Attorney Swanson yesterday warned officials of governments who have failed to reduce their levies that they cannot spend the surplus revenue. Only 40 of the 400 country township taxing bodies have made the reductions in levy requested by taxing officials.

"Those officials who have failed to make the cuts will have more money than they need," Mr. Swanson said. "The money for corporate purposes has already been spent during the delay in tax collection. When the taxes bring in far more than the amount spent the officials will have a surplus.

"The officials have passed their budgets. Any attempt to spend the excess, which is not provided for in the budgets, is contrary to law. The surplus should be turned over for the expenses of the current year and that amount deducted from the coming levy. Meanwhile the officials will have to explain the unnecessarily high taxes to their publics."

More Bills Out Tomorrow.

The office of the county treasurer mailed no bills yesterday. County Treasurer Harding announced that a large number of personal property bills will be mailed tomorrow. The staff of the county clerk will work today in preparation of bills.

Mr. Harding said that he expects to collect tomorrow on the bills mailed out Friday.

RANDOLPH ST. VIADUCT TO BE DELAYED AGAIN

Need Court Order on Land Division.

Actual construction on the Randolph street viaduct, delayed now for more than two months, will be further postponed pending court action, representatives of both the Illinois Central railroad and the south park board said yesterday.

This project, which would create a broad highway 128 feet wide to replace the narrow wooden structure connecting the outer drive with Michigan avenue, was finally approved by the Illinois commerce commission on Feb. 14 as a part of the lake front ordinance. The ordinance, a vital plank in the Chicago Plan commission's platform, was passed by the city council last October.

Must Draw Boundary Line.

At the time the commerce commission ratified the ordinance it was predicted by officials that work could be started by the opening of the working season this spring. The sole barrier preventing it, the railroad said, was the approval by the Circuit court of an order establishing the land rights of both the road and the south park board. The park board wishes to beautify a strip of made land along the lake front south of the river, a plan the railroad agrees with, but which involves the fixing of a definite line dividing the two properties.

"But the fixing of that line is no small task," George E. Gorman, attorney for the south park board, said yesterday. "We must first obtain the consent of the war department to moving the harbor line, now a short distance from shore, farther out, and we are not assured that the department will grant this immediately. It may be necessary to go to Washington to get consent. It may also be necessary to ask that the line be moved about 400 feet.

Rush Plan for Court Order.

"All interested parties—the Illinois Central, the Michigan Central, the city of Chicago, those who hold claims against the railroad, and the south park board—must be consulted and the amount of land the railroad retains and that which the board may use must be agreed upon. We are using every means of rushing this, and it will eventually be placed in the courts, with the request that the order be approved. That assured, we can go ahead."

Vice President Fred L. Thompson of the Illinois Central said that the road could probably go ahead with construction now, but hesitated to do so while the court order had not been entered.

Road "Anxious to Start."

"We are anxious to get the viaduct built and our new suburban station constructed," he said. "We've already spent $2,000,000 in excavation and preliminary work. Our attorneys are working with Mr. Gorman and trying, with him, to get the order drawn as speedily as possible."

Mr. Gorman was recently appointed attorney for the board, succeeding Elmer J. Schnackenberg, state representative.

THIEF KILLS GIRL AS SHE SITS IN AUTO WITH COP

Policeman Chases Slayer Into Basement.

Shot by a Negro bandit as she sat in front of her home with a policeman friend in the early morning hours, Miss Alice Voight, 25 years old, 5419 Ingleside avenue, died at the Chicago hospital yesterday without regaining consciousness. The murderer escaped after Patrolman Herbert Last, 29 years old, of Hyde Park station, the girl's escort, pursued him into a basement and fired four shots at him.

Miss Voight was a clerk at the Oakland telephone exchange and had been going about with Last for five months, he told Assistant State's Attorney Nathan Ruvell and Capt. Richard Gill. They had driven to Joliet during the evening and were parked in front of her home after their return when the bandit poked a gun through the door of the coupe, Last said.

Girl's Scream Is Warning

"I didn't see him until Alice screamed: 'Herb, Herb, look out!'" the policeman said. "I turned and saw a light skinned Negro at the window waving a pistol."

"'Don't move, this is a stickup,' he told us, and then he must have seen my uniform, for the gun went off and he started to run. Alice's head fell against my shoulder and I raised her chin and felt blood on my hand. Then I knew she was shot. I jumped out of the car, pulled my gun, and took after him."

The Negro ran into an areaway of the building in which Miss Voight lived and, finding no exit, Last said, dived through the glass of a basement window. Leaning down, the policeman fired four times as the man went out of sight and then ran back to the car, not knowing how badly the girl had been hurt. A patrol wagon called by neighbors who heard the shots arrived shortly and she was taken to the hospital.

Story Is Corroborated.

Last's story was corroborated at the inquest in the afternoon conducted by Deputy Coroner Raymond Connerty at undertaking rooms at 5203 Lake Park avenue. There Philip B. Bregstone, a retired lawyer living at 5421 Ingleside avenue, told of hearing the first shot, the noise of running feet on the walk, and getting out of bed he saw the Negro dive through the window as Last fired at him. Eight year old Jack Hillman, 5423 Ingleside, gave similar testimony, adding that he later heard the Negro running down the alley after he broke another window in the rear of the basement and escaped.

Last retold the story he had given to his superiors and Coroner's Investigator Francis Donahue reported to the jury that a ballistics examination of the bullet which killed the girl and the policeman's gun showed that she had been wounded by a .32 caliber copper jacketed slug, whereas Last's gun shoots only .38s. The jury's verdict held an "unknown person" guilty of the murder.

Claim Important Clews.

After the inquest Capt. Gill admitted that he had several important clews to the identity of the Negro, but would not disclose their nature. Lieut. John Treacy and a squad searched the basement, finding the second broken window, but could not find blood marks. However, physicians and hospitals were warned to watch for a wounded Negro. Last described him as a well dressed man wearing a gray hat and topcoat.

Late in the day police arrested John Goodwin, Negro, 19 years old, and a vagrant who will be questioned later. Miss Voight's mother, reported to have depended much on her daughter's support, was in a state of collapse at the home.

Mr. Stimson added that Minister Massey had been a most useful representative of Canada.

POLICE ATTACK CALCUTTA MOBS; BREAK UP RIOTS

Several Hurt; Officers Swing Staves.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CALCUTTA, May 3.—Several persons were injured today in two riots in connection with the arrival here of V. J. Patel, who recently resigned as speaker of the Indian legislative assembly, to join Mahatma Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign for home rule in India. At Howrah, a suburban station, where Patel left the train, British police charged independence volunteers when they attempted to organize a procession in the independence leader's honor. Upon refusal to disperse police attacked.

Later in the day police, swinging clubs and staves, broke up a crowd of demonstrators who had gathered to hear Patel. Thousands threw a cordon about the speaker's platform, but were finally dispersed. Patel did not speak. One native was reported to be in a critical condition as the result of police blows.

Indian Newspapers Shut Down.

All Indian newspapers at Calcutta, Lahore, Delhi, and numerous other papers in other towns have ceased publication owing to press regulations. As a result the native population is greatly alarmed, and wild rumors are circulating everywhere. Calcutta editors are meeting daily to discuss the question. They issue a joint paper giving a summary of the news without comment.

The Moslems have not yet decided upon what attitude to take, and are asking for minority safeguards before pledging support to Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhi will soon go to Bombay, but he has stipulated complete discipline among his followers and abstention from drink under a permanent pledge. He has also decreed that his followers shall spend an hour every day spinning material for their own clothes.

Orders Legislature Stopped.

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

SIMLA, India, May 3.—Viceroy Lord Irwin has prorogued both the executive council and the legislative assembly. The immediate effect of this step is that the Indian legislature will not meet again before the general elections at the end of the year.

Lord Irwin's action may be called an extreme measure, but it is believed he has the soundest reasons for making his decision, which was far from unexpected in well informed circles. Both the British and the Indian governments desire a round table conference to be held in London during the coming fall and now it will be possible to place concrete constitutional schemes before the electorate, instead of continuing to fight over the revolutionary plans of the extremists.

Imperial Delhi appears deserted. The departure of the viceroy and his government for Simla, perched high in the hills, has left the magnificent buildings of the new city empty. Old Delhi, which is pursuing its normal commercial activity, is a city without a newspaper. The only English paper ceased publication some weeks ago owing to the formation of a new press combine, while the censorship ordinance has fallen like an ax upon the Hindustan Times, the congress party's organ, which is accused of publishing seditious propaganda during the last few days of its appearance.

Demand Britain Seize Leaders.

BOMBAY, India, May 3.—[U. P.]—Renewal of street fighting in Calcutta and in Amritsar prompted European residents to press the government tonight for a firmer policy against Mahatma Gandhi's civil independence campaign, which the mahatma himself predicted may become more serious soon.

The committee of the Bombay branch of the European association, in a letter to Sir Frederick Sykes, governor of Bombay, asked the government to maintain the law more strictly and to arrest all inciters against the government, presumably including Gandhi.

The present government policy in declining to arrest Gandhi for fear his martyrdom would unite the nation in rebellion was characterized by the committee as "likely to leave the impression of weakness and to bring the law into contempt." The government was asked to ban all processions as "a grave menace" to Bombay.

Urges Police Receive Support.

The committee also urged that counter propaganda favoring the government be undertaken and that communiques be issued stating the actual position of the government. The government, it said, should announce that it will support the police officials in opposition to Gandhi, especially in view of recent cases in which police have been victimized in attempts to carry out the law without violence.

The committee said it was somewhat aprpehensive because authorities had not responded to its previous offers of assistance.

Gandhi, who published a statement offering to lead the home rule movement in Bombay under certain conditions, said his forthcoming raid on a government salt deposit will be "nonviolent." He said, however, that "innocent raids may be fraught with consequences perhaps more serious than those flowing from a violent raid."

"Peshawar Day" Scuffle.

The mahatma's statement also protested the recent press restrictions, which caused some newspapers to suspend publication.

The most recent disturbances were not serious, but served to show the tension existing in the northwestern frontier district as well as Calcutta.

There was a scuffle between police and native volunteers at Amritsar when the sultan of Amritsar observed "Peshawar day" at memorial services for the natives killed there ten days ago. Many persons were arrested and police and soldiers patrolled the streets.

Sir Norman Bolton, commissioner of the northwestern frontier province at the time of the Peshawar rioting, sailed for England today. His physicians forbade him to remain on duty due to the strain of the Peshawar situation. Stewart Edmund Pears, former political agent in the province, will succeed Bolton. The foreign secretary of the government of India remained at Peshawar pending arrival of Pears.

RIVER TO CARRY ARCTIC QUARTET ON TO HAVANA

St. Paul, Minn., May 3.—[U.P.]—Two men and two children who have come half way on an 8,000 mile trek from the Arctic circle to the tropic of cancer prepared tonight to shove off down the Mississippi on the second leg of their journey.

The voyagers, Charles Planinshek, Frank O'Grady and Planinshek's children, Tony, 11, and Inez, 9, started their journey from Chesterfield, 1,500 miles north of The Pas, Man., on March 21, 1929. They expect to arrive in Havana, Cuba, in about 10 months.

About half the distance so far has been made by dog team and the rest by canoe. The remainder of the journey is to be by water.

Son Finds Father Dead at Wheel of Auto; Blame Gas

Accidentally asphyxiated by carbon monoxide gas, the body of Louis Valbracht, 68 years old, retired cabinet maker, was found yesterday afternoon at the wheel of his car in a garage at the rear of 2636 North Francisco avenue, by his son, the Rev. Edward F. Valbracht, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Evangelical church, at that address. The clergyman's 14 year old son, hearing the motor running from outside the closed garage, summoned his father.

BEAM BOUNCES THROUGH WINDOW.

A steel beam fell from a derrick and bounced from the sidewalk through a window at 545 South Wabash avenue yesterday. It narrowly missed several pedestrians, and showered a workman inside with glass, cutting his face and hands. The workman is Walter Nolting, 35 years old, 1615 North Major avenue.

SOUTH SIDE OUTER DRIVE OPENED TO TRAFFIC

Paving Finished

The south park outer drive was opened to traffic late yesterday between 39th and 51st streets. It had been closed for the paving of a mile stretch that was not finished last year because of the autumn storm on the lake. This is the first major paving project in the metropolitan area to be completed this season. The inner drive, which also was closed for paving between Soldiers' field and the 23d street viaduct, was opened yesterday.

The temporary repair of the storm damage on Lincoln park's outer drive will be completed this week. Permanent paving awaits the construction of breakwaters to protect the drive. This drive has been open during rush hours only for several weeks. By the middle of the week the lights will be on and the drive open during the 24 hour period for northbound traffic only, except from 7 a. m. to 10 a. m., when it will be used for southbound traffic only. Last night the section from Fullerton to Belmont avenue was lighted.

UNION ENDS COAL TEAMSTER STRIKE AT ALWART BROS.

The strike of coal teamsters hauling for the Alwart Brothers' Coal company, which was called last Friday for alleged violations of union rules, was ended yesterday by agents of the coal teamsters' union, Paul Alwart of the coal company announced last night.

Several years ago the Alwart company withdrew from the Chicago Retail Coal Merchants' association and since that time labor disputes are said to have hindered its business. The strike was ordered Fonday, according to John Sheridan, head of the teamsters' joint council, because the concern which does the Alwart hauling neglected to adhere to union conditions.

The strike was called by Charles Rickett, a business agent of the coal teamsters' union. Yesterday George Barker, senior business agent of the teamsters, failed to keep an appointment with Assistant State's Attorney Homer Dodge to explain the strike.

TYPHOON WRECKS 500 BOATS; 200 FISHERMEN DIE

TOKIO, May 3.—(AP)—Nearly 200 Japanese fishermen are believed to have perished in a sudden typhoon which lashed their big fleet last night between the islands of Saghalien and Hokkaido.

Dispatches to the Rengo News agency said ninety-four bodies were recovered, but more than 100 men were missing. Five hundred fishing boats were wrecked, and damage estimated at $2,500,000 was done.

Lured by herring schools within the bay, 10,000 fishermen aboard 2,000 boats put to sea from Odomari, a fishing town of southern Saghalien. Without warning, the typhoon struck with terrific violence. Some boats went down quickly, others were swamped as they ran for the harbor, while still others were smashed upon the rocky shores of Odomari bay.

At the height of the storm, landslides fell fcrm the bluffs upon the city, destroying numerous homes.

WOMAN ACCUSED AS TIPSY DRIVER WINS PROBATION

Miss Ruth Perry, 28 years old, of St. Louis, yesterday was placed on probation for one year when she was arraigned before Municipal Judge Fairbanks in the Speeders' court on a charge of driving while intoxicated. She was arrested on Good Friday after her car had battered fenders on four automobiles in 63d street. She agreed not to drink liquor during the period of probation.

"I want to be courteous to visitors to Chicago," the judge said, "but the drunken driver is the one who kills. You are fortunate not to be charged with manslaughter."

With no deaths reported yesterday, the 1930 Cook county motor toll remained at 296.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS.

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pickup, instant starting, smoother running motors, and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999-290-A Third St., Milwaukee, Wis., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. He also needs men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for sample and big money making offer.—Adv.

WIFE OF BRITISH LORD FOUND DEAD AT FOOT OF CLIFF

Body Crushed by Rocks; Police Baffled.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRIGHTON, England, May. 3.—British police tonight were baffled by mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Lady Haldon, 61 year old wife of Lord Haldon, also 61, head of a prominent old English family. Lord Haldon, former army captain and world war veteran, has been in the public eye many times during his stormy career. He ascended to the peerage in 1903.

Lady Haldon, who was the former Edith Castle, widow of Ernest Charles Brightman of Bristol, was identified today as the woman whose mutilated body was found jammed between two rocks at the foot of a high cliff at this popular seaside resort last Thursday. Lord Haldon made the identification.

Accident, Suicide, or Murder?

The aged nobleman, whose wife had disappeared Thursday morning, hurried to Brighton when he heard that a woman had fallen over a cliff. He arrived on the verge of a nervous breakdown and nearly collapsed with grief when he was shown the broken body in a local morgue.

Lord Haldon was unable to throw any light on the tragedy, which the police as yet have not been able to classify as an accident, a suicide, or a murder. Two details puzzle both the authorities and the husband—the presence of a man's hat beside the body and the absence of Lady Haldon's handbag. They are inclined to believe, however, that the presence of the hat was a mere coincidence. They think it may have blown over the cliff several days previously.

Poor Health and Poverty.

Relatives of Lord and Lady Haldon tonight said she had been in poor health recently and had suffered considerably from insomnia.

It was revealed tonight that the couple had been living in impoverished circumstances in a single room in a boarding house. Lord Haldon did the marketing and cooked the meals, according to the landlady, who said Lady Haldon apparently had been accustomed to a better life and was unable to do the simplest kind of housework. When they engaged the room, they registered as Mr. and Mrs. Haldon, dropping the use of their titles. They brought only two suitcases, but said they intended to remain indefinitely.

Married Year Ago.

The grief stricken nobleman declared that he had never had a quarrel with his wife since their marriage slightly more than a year ago. He was unable to understand, he said, why she went to Brighton, which is on the southern coast of England.

Lady Haldon was his second wife. His first, Lidiana Amalia Crezencia, noted actress and daughter of Col. Jacob W. Maichlie, once of the Russian imperial army, died in 1928. They had been married in 1893. The first Lady Haldon created a sensation in London society circles in 1905 by returning to the stage. She had acted in America in the Drury Lane dramas before she married the lord.

Served in Boer War.

Lord Haldon served with the Royal Fusiliers in South Africa during the Boer war in 1901-'02, and in the world war in 1915-'16 with the Northumberland Fusiliers.

At the time of his ascension to the peerage in 1903 Lord Haldon was in jail at Pretoria, South Africa, on charges of selling glass as diamonds. He was acquitted on the ground that he was the tool rather than a confederate of a gang of swindlers. At the time of his arrest he had been working as a checker and conductor on a railroad.

Some years previously Lord Haldon had been in trouble in London, where he had forged his mother's name to a check cashed by a money lender. Later he was the promoter of patent medicine concerns.

In 1915 Lord Haldon was again in difficulties when he tried to close an undischarged bankrupt case in order to enter the army. At this time he was barred from his seat in parliament.

ROOSEVELT REPORTS UNEMPLOYMENT IN NEW YORK INCREASES

Albany, N. Y., May 3.—[Special.]—Before he left for Warm Springs, Ga., Gov. Franklin Roosevelt sent a telegram to R. P. Lamont, secretary of commerce at Washington, in response to a wire asking for data on the unemployment in this state. The governor stated that there is more than usual unemployment in the state and the best information indicates that unemployment has increased rather than decreased since January. The governor also indicated to Secretary Lamont that during May the suffering from this unemployment would be lessened because of normal seasonal changes.

GARDENS LURE BEAUTY LOVERS VIRGINIA-WARD

Polite Southerners Are Entertaining.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Richmond, Va., May 3.—[Special.]—Virginia is sitting in the garden this week and welcoming the nation.

For this is "Garden week" in the Old Dominion and terraced walks and boxwood hedge rows and glowing pärterrés of color and fragrance are open to the public. Some of them date back to the reign of James the Second. In some of them the founders and early presidents of the republic walked, and in some the seventeenth century magnificoes of tidewater Virginia sleep now their long sleep beneath marble shafts deep chiseled with stately epitaphs which record how they were patterns of "the well bred gentleman and polite companion, the prudent father, and the constant enemy of all exorbitant power."

Festival Wins Fame.

This garden week in Virginia is a new fête in our country's calendar of festivals and within three or four years it has taken an emphatic hold upon the imagination of travelers from all over the land. Hitherto they come to see what they can see nowhere else in the United States—gardens which in their stateliness, their abundant beauty, their architectural background and their historic settings preserve the suavest tradition of English floriculture.

The nationwide response to this fête should be a lesson to the professional go-getters and boosters who disturb the peace of innocent communities and commonwealths.

Show the people not fleeting, flashy "sensations," but serene beauty and they will flock to you from coast to coast. This morning at Westover plantation on the James river, ancient of the Byrds of Virginia and now owned by Richard Crane of Chicago, I counted cars—scores upon scores of them—from twenty-one states and the District of Columbia.

Come from Many States.

Thus:

Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Masaschusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvaia, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin.

That kind of response to Virginia's garden week has crowded the state's good highways from Winchester in the north to Yorktown in the south ever since last Monday. It has been national reunion in the name of beauty—a picnic of the states—with the mother of states as hostess.

Urbanity and graciousness distinguish the fête, and great skill in management makes it easy to enjoy.

Guards Are Unknown.

Both the guests and the receivers of the guests represent "the quality"—to use a phrase still current down here—of the land. They don't talk loud. The landscape is free of shrilling women and yowling children. There is not a guard or a policeman anywhere except on the highways, and this in the face of the fact that the furnishings of one of the colonial mansions which this week is open to the public represent, so a villager told me, a value of one million dollars.

No papers or lunch boxes are strewn over the lawns where hundreds of travelers are daily refreshing themselves. Not a twig of the noble boxwood hedges that it took two centuries to grow is broken, not a flower is disturbed.

Ladies of Gentry Receive.

Ladies of the gentry of the countryside—Bollings and Fairfaxes and Brians and Harrisons and Carters and Christians and Tuckers—receive you in these gardens. They are ladies of leisurely and melodious diction and high grace of manner, but they are not on the scene solely for ornamental purposes. They work. Some are sitting under canopies at the garden gates to receive the admission fees which this year are to go in part to the fund for the restoration of Stratford hall, Gen. Robert E. Lee's birthplace in Westmoreland county on the Potomac, and in part to local charities. Some are serving the travelers with delicious luncheons—sold at low prices—which are spread on trestle tables on the lawns. To help in this work some of the hostesses have brought their old Negro servants, many of the women among whom wear turbans, while the men display a courtliness and courtesy not often encountered among the race conscious Negroes living in the North.

In short you are back in the old days when nobody, high or low, was too high or too low or too busy to fail of being polite.

Ready to Outline Routes.

And some of the hostesses are back in the hotels of nearby towns doing the most important work of all. They are all enthusiasts about the gardens—and General Lee—and they will patiently and cleverly sketch you a route that will take you to the most celebrated gardens of a given area in the least time. Hence the perfection of arrangements of which I was speaking. Tables and desks in the hotel lobbies are piled high with folders, leaflets, brochures and maps. These are all free. The thorough traveler will want to buy Paul Wilstach's "Tidewater Virginia: Its history, traditions and romantic plantation mansions" [$5.00], and "Homes and Gardens of Old Virginia" [$3.00], by Suzanne Massie and Frances Carter. These are on sale in the hotel lobbies. Local pamphlets written by local notables can also be picked up along the way for a quarter or so apiece.

Highways Well Marked.

The highways are the best marked, as to historic sites of any American state I ever traveled in. Colonial revolutionary and civil war scenes are indicated by large and readily legible metal signs, each one carrying a large key letter. If you have a demon chauffeur who loves speed and hates history you must remember, if you come to garden week next spring, to ask for a copy of the 111 page pamphlet [free] called "Key to Inscriptions on Virginia Highway Historical Markers," published by a state commission. Then, when you catch only so much as the key letter on a marker you can balk the demon chauffeur by turning to the little book and comfortably reading the whole inscription while he steams on.

Greenery Makes Gardens.

A typical Virginia garden means a formal design in all the year 'round greenery touched with floral color. The greenery is the dominating note rather than the flowers. The design is usually surrounded by ivy clad terraces and steps of dull red brick which blend beautifully into the color scheme of the growing things.

Between Fredericksburg, fifty-five miles from Washington, and Yorktown are more than seventy Virginia gardens so celebrated as to be points of pilgrimage. Fifteen of them are in Albemarle county, in which are also located the seats of Presidents Jefferson and Monroe, which are open to the public. At least twenty-five of the most notable and most accessible gardens in the state are carefully grouped in a four page folder [free] that gives every detail of traveling time, distances, and locations. The Garden Club of Virginia, 612 West Franklin street, Richmond, Va., will send you all those data.

Region Has Many Attractions.

The key points of the four day ride of nearly six hundred miles I am taking are Fredericksburg, Charlottesville, Richmond, and Yorktown. Where in this country you can pack in more sedate thrills, heroic history and floral beauty than between Fredericksburg and Yorktown—plus the detour to the west to Charlottesville—I know not. Here, all compact and vivid, are hundreds of volumes of the glory and the tragedy of our annals. A bit of frescoed lettering over the dining room doorway of the Princess Anne hotel in Fredericksburg epitomizes rather neatly the Plutarchian tale, "Historic Virginia: Her Sixteen Immortals," the list is headed, and thus it reads:

"Capt. Jno. Smith, the Founder; Geo. Washington, the First Citizen; Thos. Jefferson, the Philosopher; Jas. Madison, the Statesman; Jas. Monroe, the Diplomatist; Jno. Marshall, the Jurist; Patrick Henry, the Orator; Geo. Mason, the Patriot; Geo. Rogers Clark, the Pioneer; Meriwether Lewis, the Explorer; Math. Fontaine Maury, the Scientist; Robert E. Lee, the Soldier; Cyrus McCormick, the Inventor; Edgar Allan Poe, the Poet; Walter Reed, the Doctor; Woodrow Wilson, the Internationalist."

Henry Clay Omitted.

Why Henry Clay is omitted I cannot understand. Perhaps because he early became a son of Kentucky.

Anyway, the point is that during Virginia's garden week those names and a dozen more almost as illustrious cease to be mere names and become vivid personalities moving across a background of the mansions, gardens, and farms which knew them when they were living and which Americans from dozens of states come to view under the happiest auspices—that is to say, the auspices of the garden club of Virginia. Every American, I think, owes it to his culture to make the tour the club maps, and if he is a father he owes it to his children to bring them along. They will never get a more spacious picture of their national inheritance.

To an Illinoisan, of course, the tour is like a homecoming, for, less than a century and a half ago Illinois belonged to Virginia. What a contrast! For then Virginia had three-quarters of a million inhabitants and ranked first in population in the Union. Today Illinois has probably eight million inhabitants and ranks third in population in the Union, while Virginia holds only about the twentieth place.

Stops at Monticello.

My first garden stop was President Jefferson's Monticello, three miles outside the university town of Charlottesville. The whole estate has the aspect of garden, and the fields lying below Monticello (little mountain) carry out the garden theme for miles around. For now the peach orchards are in bloom and softly they irradiate the red soil so characteristic of this section of Virginia. 'Tis like miles of flowers strewn over a rug of dull crimson. The long driveway leading up to the house is bordered with woodlands that are flecked with white dogwood, yellow scotch broom, and white and purple iris, and it is shrilled with the whistle of birds.

Everything Thomas Jefferson said and did was in a lordly strain. And lordliness is the note of Monticello.

FLYER TAKES PHOTO OF MT. RANIER 270 MILES SOUTH OF IT

Washington, D. C., May 3.—(AP)—The successful photographing of an object 270 miles distant from the camera's eye, and far beyond the range of human vision was announced today by the war department.

The picture was one of Mount Ranier, and constitutes a new record in long distance aerial photography. It was taken by Capt. A. W. Stevens of the army air corps while in flight 20,000 feet above Crater lake, Oregon.

"Shooting at Mount Ranier from a distance greater than that between New York City and Washington," Captain Stevens said, in describing the taking of the picture, "is much like shooting at the moon, with the difference that you can see the moon."

Stevens said he believed a camera would soon be developed that would record even great distances.

STOCKS CRASH FOR PAPER LOSS OF TWO BILLION

487,000 Shares Are Tossed on Market.

and rapid declines the last two weeks, brokers said, have wiped out hundreds of margin traders and the number of such casualties today was said to have been greater than on any day since the break began. Brokers scrutinized their books with unusual care Friday night and many thousands of margin calls went out as a result. Where customers failed to respond today with additional funds, they were in a great many instances sold out. Necessitous liquidation went on throughout the two hours of trading, but was heaviest at the opening and just before the close. Brokers reported in the afternoon that the weak spots among the margin accounts had been eliminated and, barring another bad break, should not be an unsettling factor at the beginning of a new week.

Bear Traders Blamed.

Short selling by Wall street professionals was blamed to a large extent for today's upheaval. The "bear party" is probably larger and more powerfully equipped than it has been at any time since the break of last autumn, and it has been becoming increasingly bold during the last ten days. The demand for stocks in the stock loan market was unusually heavy, indicating that reports of the extent of the short selling in the last two days had not been exaggerated.

After the close of trading today spokesmen for commission houses and other Wall street interests expressed the opinion that the storm had probably spent itself in the day's aggressive selling movement. They held the view that no comparison can properly be made between present conditions and those which preceded the disturbances of last October and November.

They stressed the point that there has been no such inflation of values as occurred prior to last year's break. Also, they asserted, the market is in a stronger position technically than it was at that time. Financial leaders generally were disposed to look upon the present unsettlement as a corrective reaction.

ENGLAND OF TWO MINDS OVER JOB OF KING'S POET

Foes Claim Post Prisons Singing of Free Spirit.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 3.—England is much exercised over the selection of the next poet laureate, and while Prime Minister MacDonald is occupied with the task of filling the post vacated by the death of Dr. Robert Bridges, many serious minded guardians of the country's sacred traditions have been rudely shocked by the irreverent clowning of the "untamed intellectuals" who want the office abolished.

The controversy which always arises upon the death of a poet laureate has been renewed this time more briskly than ever. A campaign of jeering and wise cracking has been carried on since Dr. Bridges' burial, through cartoons and jibes at a job which is ridiculed as unworthy of any free mind such as a poet is supposed to have. Most men of letters have been registered on one side or another.

Recall Commons Debate.

Hugh Martin dug up the minutes of a house of commons session in 1920 in which some member protested that Dr. Bridges had not produced any hymns eulogizing the war heroes. Lloyd George, who was prime minister at the time, said that he had written many, which apparently the gentleman had not read. The nettled member of the house then proposed that a new poet laureate be appointed, and recommended a colleague, James Sexton, member of parliament for St. Helens, who had written war doggerel. He was known in the United States under the signature of "Tatters, M. P."

Mr. Martin now remakes this nomination, contending that the office, instead of giving free rein to the country's best writers of songs, imprisons what should be an essentially untamable spirit. But he adds that he doubts whether "Tatters, M. P." would have the job.

G. K. Jokes at Post.

Gilbert K. Chesterton, although "opposed to the abolition of traditions," thinks that the thing is in a sad state.

"But let the poet laureate be appointed," he said. "There was a time when he gave expression to the best creative impulses of a cultured nation. Who knows? We may become a civilized nation again."

One of the most scandalous of the newspaper cartoons represents Mr. MacDonald with a "Wanted" sign outside of his office door, guaranteeing small pay to the right party. Well known poets are shown lined up outside, while the Socialist prime minister is listening on the inside to a fat politician reciting the worst possible verse imaginable about Labor.

Stiff editorials contend that even if the job doesn't mean much, the post should be filled just to show the world that the government has culture and is ready to encourage art.

Many recall the famous words of Robert Browning:

> Just for a handful of silver he > left us.
> Just for a ribbon to stick in > his coat.

These lines were supposedly written when William Wordsworth accepted the laureateship, and are taken as still expressing the attitude of writers toward one of their number becoming England's hired verse writer.

Kipling Is Mentioned.

The fact is that a poet will be appointed and Mr. MacDonald is now wrestling with the knotty problem. Rudyard Kipling, who has always heatedly refused the place has been mentioned, but the most prominent mention has been given to John Masefield. Alfred Noyes, Walter de la Mare and Henry Newbolt are still others thought to be possibilities.

SPRING BLOOMS AT BEST NOW IN CHICAGOLAND

Spring flowers are now in their prime around Chicago, according to Paul C. Standley, associate curator of the herbarium at the Field Museum of Natural History. Virtually every type of spring flower may be seen in the parks or forest preserves. The first to appear was the pussy willow, which is now being followed by the bluebells and violets. The violet is the state flower of Illinois.

Also of interest to nature lovers is the spring migration of birds, now at its height. Colin Campbell Sanborn of the zoölogical staff of the Field Museum of Natural History, writing in the current issue of Field Mueseum News, says that about 200 species are to be observed in the Chicago area. Half of these are flying through to their nesting places farther north. About sixty species of birds nest in this area in May.

BANKER HARRIS OPTIMISTIC ON CAR FRANCHISE

Sees 200 Million Assured for Extensions.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Albert W. Harris, banker, returned from California yesterday and indicated a more favorable attitude toward the proposed unified transportation program than has been ascribed to him at any time in the last seven months. He is the chairman of the protective committee for the first mortgage bonds of the west and north side surface lines.

"What is your view on whether $200,000,000 of new money can be obtained to provide extensions and improvements under the proposed indeterminate franchise?" Mr. Harris was asked.

"I think the $200,000,000 can be raised under that ordinance," he replied. "I have read it through carefully."

Calls Valuation Conservative.

Attorney James G. Skinner told the local transportation committee on Friday that there is 'a lot of wind and water' in the 1907 valuation of $55,000,000 for the surface lines," Mr. Harris was told.

"One who is not experienced in financial matters is liable to start with the wrong premises," was the banker's comment. "The $55,000,000 was conservative. It took away much stock value and depreciated securities. It curtailed or denied interest return to many investors."

"Mr. Skinner urged that the new company be required to put up $100,000,000 to insure extensions and other improvements," Mr. Harris was next informed.

"I do not see the point of thinking up new ways to make the car rider pay a higher fare," he replied. "Where is $100,000,000 of extra money to be obtained? But suppose it could be secured, it would have to be added to the capital account. That would prevent a consolidation.

The Company's Guarantee.

"I presume Mr. Skinner desires to get more assurance that the new company will get and spend $200,000,000—a sort of guarantee of good faith. The best evidence of good faith is the fact that the company agrees to spend $65,000,000 in the first three years and that there shall be no increase in the rate of financial return to the company during that period.

"After the first three years the financial return to the company is to be decided by a commission appointed by the mayor with the consent of the city council, and anything over a just and reasonable return goes to the city. What better evidence of good faith can be asked?"

View of Another Banker.

Another banker who asked that his name be not used said yesterday that the Skinner proposal to raise an extra $100,000,000 is preposterous.

"The merger value of the properties," he said, "is $260,000,000 and if another $100,000,000 of nonworking money is added, capital will be boosted to $360,000,000. So the earnings on the $260,000,000 of working capital will have to pay a return on $360,000,000.

"Assuming no boost in carfare, and no increase in total earnings, the Skinner plan would depreciate the $260,000,000 by 28 per cent, or $72,000,000. But, perhaps, Mr. Skinner wants a fair return on both the $260,000,000 in property and the extra $100,000,000. That means an increase in fares, and every thinking person wants to keep fares down.

A Secret on Car Earnings.

"We have had extensive experience with securities and I have never heard of a case where a utility operator refused or hesitated to spend the money he could get for improvements. In our judgment they spend more money at times than we deem prudent in the interest of investors.

"Let me put you in on a secret: these transportation properties cannot be made good earners until the new company has spent $200,000,000. It is to the financial interest of all concerned to obtain the $200,000,000 and spend it for improvements. My guess is that the spending will continue after the $200,000,000 has been spent."

Surface Extension in Ordinance.

The proposed extensions of surface lines and buses are to be stipulated in the franchise. That decision was reached yesterday in lieu of a general provision that 30 miles of extensions are to be made yearly for 10 years.

James Simpson of the citizens' transit settlement committee, who returned to the city on Friday, is said to have insisted that all possible information regarding the meaning and expected results of the ordinance be given the public. He is said to have argued that the carriers, property owners and the public are entitled to know just what extensions are contemplated in the first 10 years.

Accordingly, exhibit B will detail the surface and bus lines' extensions and will probably be in complete form next Wednesday. At the same time schedule C, dealing with subway construction, is expected to be finished.

Resume Hearings Tomorrow.

Chairman Joseph B. McDonough of the city council's local transportation committee said yesterday that eleven civic and business organizations have requested a hearing on the proposed franchise before the committee tomorrow morning.

The Amalgamated Improvement associations, of which August Knickels is president, wrote the aldermen yesterday that it is opposed to the proposed indeterminate franchise. This organization fought the enabling legislation before the city council and the house and senate of the state legislature. Knickels in his letter asserts that the permit will become a perpetual franchise and will increase fares.

Referring to a referendum on certain question submitted by this organization, the letter says to the aldermen: "Your committee has wilfully disregarded this mandate in your efforts to give Samuel Insull and his associates what they want."

The letter adds that the organization predicted Nov. 13 last that the city council "has nothing under consideration except to surrender to the transit companies when the time comes."

Another Baby Abandoned in Hotel

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

A blue eyed boy, 2 months old, was abandoned yesterday in a room of the Princess hotel, 339 South Clark street. The room had been occupied by a young woman who registered as "Mrs. C. E. Morgan, Chicago."

She arrived at 7 o'clock on Friday evening and was last seen in the hotel at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Louise Weber, a maid, heard the baby crying. She called hotel authorities, who notified the Central police. The child was taken to St. Vincent's orphanage, La Salle and Superior streets. He was dressed only in a sleeping garment.

The case is somewhat similar to that of "Jimmie Taylor," about one year old, who was abandoned in the Stevens hotel on April 5. He was left by two women, who had the appearance of mother and daughter. He also was taken to St. Vincent's orphanage.

MORE CONGRESS CRITICS RISE TO SMITE SEA PACT

Senate Opens Inquiry Tomorrow.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—More opposition to senate ratification of the London naval agreement was manifested in congressional circles today as the senate naval affairs committee completed preparations for an investigation Monday into the provisions of the treaty.

Both Senator Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.] and Representative A. Piatt Andrew [Rep., Mass.] criticized the agreement.

"I have been studying the treaty," said Senator McKellar. "I greatly regret that it makes no mention of the freedom of the seas, the British naval bases at our very doors, or the arming of merchant vessels, of which Great Britain has a big preponderance over this country. Apparently the arming of merchant ships is legalized by the treaty. If this is true, such a thing as parity with Great Britain is preposterous."

Suggests a Reservation.

Senator McKellar suggested that a reservation might be desirable to the treaty clause which provides that either Great Britain, the United States or Japan can increase its strength in certain categories if menaced by competitive naval building.

"I notice that Great Britain is permitted to increase her cruisers without limit and if this is done Japan and the United States are given the right to make a proportionate increase in the same category if they build the same type of ship," he said. "To exercise our right under the treaty we would have to build the same kind of a ship as Great Britain, regardless of whether it was a type useful to this country, or not build at all."

Representative Andrew's attack was directed at the section of the treaty which permits the United States only 180,000 tons of 8 inch gun cruisers out of a total cruiser tonnage of 323,500.

"The treaty," Mr. Andrew said, "requires that we build 6 inch gun cruisers, which the naval general board has declared undesirable, or not build up to the treaty tonnage. I think the pact should have permitted this country to build the type of cruisers it considered best fitted to its needs."

Some Fireworks Ahead.

All indications today are that the cruiser sections of the pact are to furnish the fireworks at the hearings before the senate committee. Chairman Hale has found radical differences of opinion among naval officers on the question of whether the United States should abandon its present naval policy, which calls for building only 8 inch gun cruisers, in favor of the treaty provisions, which limit our 8 inch gun cruiser tonnage to eighteen ships of 180,000 tons.

Admiral William V. Pratt, the leading exponent of the treaty plan, is depended upon by President Hoover to outline the argument in behalf of the six inch gun vessel.

Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, American delegate to the abortive Geneva three power conference in 1927 and an advisor to the American delegation at London during the five power negotiations this spring until illness forced his retirement, will uphold the 8 inch gun cruiser as the ship which must be built if American naval needs are to be met.

A few admirals and a number of junior officers are expected to back up Admiral Pratt, who on Oct. 10 will become chief of naval operations. The admirals of the general board as well as Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations, will support the position taken by Rear Admiral Jones. From the beginning the general board, the highest advisory body in the navy, has been solidly for the 8-inch gun type. The policy adopted by the board and approved eighteen months ago by former President Coolidge calls for only 8-inch gun cruisers in the future and totally eliminates the 6-inch gun type.

During the British-American preliminary naval negotiations last spring, the general board finally agreed that as many as fifteen 6-inch gun cruisers could be utilized by the navy, but it set this country's minimum needs in 8-inch gun 10,000 ton cruisers at twenty-one. When the board declined to go below this figure its services in an advisory capacity were virtually dispensed with.

Chairman Hale as well as Chairman Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.], of the house naval committee are strongly opposed to any treaty provision limiting the types of cruisers which the United States can build in its allotted tonnage. Mr. Hale's expressed position is that approval of such a provision would make it impossible for the United States to attain cruiser parity with Great Britain. Board members in testifying before congressional committees have repeatedly stated that except for use with the fleet, where twelve or fifteen can be employed, the 6 inch gun vessel is not of much value to this country.

Big Cruiser Arguments.

Advocates of the big gun cruiser take the position that this country's lack of naval bases, its small merchant marine and its geographical position make it imperative that it build cruisers of the maximum size allowed by the Washington treaty and arm them with guns inferior in striking power to no other cruiser. The argument advanced is that a cruiser is of little value for protecting trade or important position if its armament is so light it has to run before the enemy.

Proponents of the small gun cruiser argue that as the smaller guns can be fired faster and the smaller ships can be maneuvered more easily, this type of cruiser is better than the 8 inch gun vessel in protecting the fleet against destroyer attacks and in attacking destroyers at short range. It is also argued that the 6 inch gun vessel can put up a good battle with the bigger ship at close quarters.

Statistics placed at the disposal of Chairman Hale by the navy department disclose that the big gun cruiser is far superior in fire power, radius of action and armor protection.

What British Think.

An indication of the British view of the battle efficiency of the 8 inch gun cruiser is found in the latest edition of Brassey's naval and shipping annual, a British publication.

"One of the naval lessons of the late war," the editor states, "was the overpowering advantage of a heavier armament. The battles of Coronel and the Falklands showed that under normal conditions the weaker vessel is sunk without doing her stronger adversary any appreciable damage. In a straight fight between two cruisers, one with 6 inch and the other with 8 inch guns, it would be anticipated that in nine cases out of ten that result would be arrived at. No nation will deliberately accept the risk of such a disaster."

NAVY TREATY GETS VOTE OF APPROVAL BY WOMEN VOTERS

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—[Special.]—Unanimous approval of the London naval treaties, now before the United States senate, was expressed here today by the National League of Women Voters through a resolution adopted at the concluding sessions of its convention.

Two other resolutions were presented to and passed by the assembly, one of which comprised indorsement of the bill now before the house of representatives amending the Cable act of 1922 which more fully established the principle of equal nationality rights for men and women.

The last of the resolutions concerned the maternity and infancy legislation that has been promoted by the league since its inception ten years ago. It expressed gratification at President Hoover's annual message to congress, in which he recommended continuance of the purpose of the Sheppard-Towner act for the protection of maternity and infancy, which expired last summer. It urged, further, passage of "immediate legislation for the promotion of maternal and child hygiene, with provision for continued coöperation between health and education agencies of the government and administration of the act by the children's bureau."

ECONOMISTS SEE BUSINESS PACTS AS AID TO PEACE

Want to End Rivalry for Raw Material.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 3.—[Special.]—How world peace may be attained through commercial and tariff policies and through elimination of rivalry for strategic metals and raw materials occupied the attention of speakers at the closing sessions today of the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

While one speaker was of the opinion that some measure of "economic disarmament" may be achieved through commercial treaties, another maintained that only recently many foreign nations have manifested a new intensification of the spirit of economic nationalism which may augur ill for a liberalization of commercial policies in the near future.

Would Control Supplies.

Emphasis was placed by speakers on the economic interdependence of nations, especially in their raw material needs, and it was suggested that such a situation might come close to war unless the important mineral supplies of the world were placed under some form of international political control.

Among those who contributed papers were William C. Redfield, former secretary of commerce; Dr. Lynn Ramsay Edminster of the Brookings institutions, Dr. Charles K. Leith of the University of Wisconsin, and Dr. Edgard B. Brossard, chairman of the United States tariff commission.

Tariff Bill Defended.

Dr. Brossard, who spoke on "Commercial Policies and Tariffs in Their Relation to World Peace," defended the 1930 tariff bill framed by congress, which, he said, should be congratulated for its wisdom and judgment. He minimized the suggestions that the American tariff might be followed by retaliatory tariffs in Europe and declared that "an examination of the actual conditions throughout the world shows no justification for serious criticism of the tariff and commercial policies of the United States."

Says Husband Broke Into Baby's Bank; Asks Divorce

Mrs. Jeanette Lenobel, 180 North St. Louis avenue, yesterday filed a bill for divorce in the Superior court against Charles Lenobel, charging that he broke open their baby's bank Christmas day, 1928, and gambled the money she had been saving for a baby buggy. She also alleges that he gambled away $3,000 she received for injuries in an auto accident. Mrs. Lenobel is represented by Attorney Irving Eisenman.

3 GUNMEN ROB LANDLORD.

CAMP ALGONQUIN MAKES READY FOR HAPPY VACATIONS

Advance Staff Plans for Many Children.

Camp Algonquin slipped into its camp clothes yesterday after waking fresh as the May morning from an eight months' nap. It looked about and saw—oh, any number of grand new out-of-door secrets to show the first little campers from the back o'yards.

It's only a few weeks now until the hills where the Algonquin Indians once roamed will ring with the laughter of children who don't find so much to laugh about on drab city streets. Until the first visitors arrive in June, THE TRIBUNE's camp 40 miles up the Fox river will be dusted and scrubbed by the advance staff directed by Mrs. Astrid Save. Mrs. Save, superintendent for years, took up her residence in camp last week.

Beauty Is Appreciated.

Algonquin has a beauty all its own, unknown to most Chicagoans, but appreciated by the tired mothers who spend their vacation there each summer with their children. Yesterday the willows were in full regalia of pea green along the lazy river. Over all the camp's acres was a thick carpet of new bluegrass mixed with clover, and there were wild flowers everywhere.

In the trees and thickets, where they were easily seen because the leaves are young, were cardinals, robins, bluejays, flickers. Rabbits bounded out of hiding places and squirrels chattered.

In the wide bluegrass arena where the lower camp borders the river, and where shortly 200 all summer children will rebuild their undernourished bodies, five ducks from Farmer Nichols' barnyard, annoyed by intrusion into their sanctuary, ran honking down to the river's edge. (Farmer Nichols raises spinach, lettuce, and carrots in his garden for Algonquin's children.)

Other Secrets Await Visitors.

Those are a few of the secrets to be told curious Halsted streeters in June. Others will come with their own discovery of strange stones, animals, and pollywogs that turn into frogs.

Yesterday Mrs. Save, with Mrs. Teresa D'Sousa as helper, made inventory, and planned for the new season. Mrs. D'Sousa is, among the helpers, the veteran of them all.

Mrs. Save, with an eye to the comfort of her charges, was concerned over the swimming pool. She remarked that it is inadequate and hoped that soon there will be a new pool with heated water.

"We hope for so many things for Algonquin—things, needed desperately. And we have a dream, too, that in a year or two, Camp Algonquin can function the year round—become a convalescent camp in winter, or a place to reconstruct the lives of problem children," she said.

Assign Research Workers.

For all her needs, Algonquin, Mrs. Save pointed out, has gained an advantage for the coming season, with the addition of psychiatry, which, she said, is taking an important place in the summer camp curriculum. Two workers from the Institute for Juvenile Research will take up quarters in the camp to help solve the problems of children, and to collect valuable material for research.

The service which Camp Algonquin performs is shown in the 1929 report of the United Charities of Chicago which administers the yearly fund raised through TRIBUNE readers. From June until September 1,808 vacations of two weeks duration were given to Chicago's under privileged. The high health rating of the camp received special congratulations from Health Commissioner Kegel in a letter to Samuel Insull Jr., chairman of the United Charities summer outing committee.

Other Agencies Coöperate.

Coöperating agencies working toward efficiency included the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund, the Chicago board of education Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, Infant Welfare society, Field Museum, Art institute, and the staff of thirty-five volunteer counsellors.

It is time for all good friends of Algonquin to help again. The fund starts anew to bring happiness this year to another 1,800 under privileged. Will you help?

YELLOWLEY'S DRY PADLOCKS SNAP ON 4,309 PLACES

Enforcer Lists Works for Four Years.

Use of the padlock injunction, regarded by Prohibition Administrator E. C. Yellowley as "one of the most effective weapons in the enforcement of prohibition," has resulted in the closing up of 4,309 wet spots in this district in a little more than four years.

Mr. Yellowley made this revelation yesterday in a statement regarding his padlocking achievements. The figures cover his period of service as dry enforcer here.

Although the dry chief ventured only "an enormous investment of money in real estate" in speaking of the value of the places closed for one year, Assistant United States Attorney LaVerne Norris, who handles padlock suits, said that $100,000,000 was a conservative estimate. The Rainbo Gardens alone, padlocked on May 3, 1928, was valued at $1,000,000; and several drug stores valued as high as $250,000 have been closed.

Many Classes Affected.

The dry locks have been snapped on hotels, rooming houses, beer flats, drug stores, office suites, barber shops, bowling alleys, garages, groceries, tailor shops, radio stores, tire repair shops, confectioneries, cigar stores, and hundreds of grog shops coming under the heading of saloons.

Mr. Yellowley's statement lists some of the more notorious cabarets in the Chicago vicinity whose darkening was regarded as noteworthy. They include the Moulin Rouge, Silver Slipper, Tearney's Town club, Plantation, Hollywood Barn, Frolics, Chez Pierre, Samovar, Ansonia, Colosimo's, Kelly's Stables, and others. These revelry centers were prosecuted under the new "observation evidence" method.

The injunction applies to any place where liquor is kept, sold, stored or bartered, and the courts have granted wide powers to the drys. Testimony of the dry spies that they saw patrons drink liquor—their own—on the premises, is all that is required. Even though the proprietor may not condone drinking in his place he is liable.

Yellowley's Annual Report.

Mr. Yellowley's last annual report to Washington, detailing an average year's endeavor, showed that 6,110 arrests were made, 1,250 stills and 214 breweries were wrecked, and 372 automobiles were confiscated.

The dry chief expressed enthusiasm yesterday over the filing of actions to confiscate two large downstate farms by United States Attorney Walter M. Provine at Springfield.

"If we are successful in these cases, farmers in the future will be more reluctant to permit bootleggers to operate stills on their places," he said.

The farmers are Joseph Engelhaupt at Spring Valley and Elmer Flaherty at Ladd.

FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL.

Edward Keenan, 45 years old, yesterday was found dead of heart disease in a room at the Arlington hotel, 517 West Madison street, where he had registered Friday. His former home was in Montreal.

Start for Europe

Mrs. Helen Simkin, 67 years old, of Salem, Ia., arrived in Chicago on the Burlington railroad's Aristocrat last night, the first of the Gold Star mothers to pass through on their way to New York. From there they will sail for France on a pilgrimage to cemeteries where sons they lost in the world war are buried. The tour is sponsored by the government.

Mrs. Simkin, the mother of four children, explained that two of her three sons were in the service, while another was in a training camp at Ames, Ia. Her son, Frank, 23 years old, of Company M, 325th infantry, was wounded in the Argonne offensive, dying later in a hospital in France.

Groups of wives and mothers of men who died in the war will arrive in Chicago today. Mrs. Simkin will sail May 7 on the America with the first group to leave New York. The first group from the Chicago territory will sail May 21, others from here sailing June 14 and July 11.

Judge William E. Helander entertained ten Chicago Gold Star mothers at luncheon in the La Salle hotel yesterday. Judge Helander was a lieutenant in the 74th company of the Sixth marines. Eight of the women present were mothers of boys in the Fifth and Sixth marines who died in France. Of the group, Mrs. Jennie Lake will sail for France May 21.

SUES LOOP STORE FOR $50,000.

Mrs. Kate Green, 72 years old, 140 North Dearborn street, yesterday filed a $50,000 damage suit in the Superior court against Marshall Field & Co. Her attorney, Irving Breakstone, declared that the action is brought for injuries alleged to have been received when Mrs. Green fell as she was going through a revolving door to enter the store last April.

RAIN DELAYS BOY IN HIS FLIGHT ACROSS NATION

Colton, Cal., May 3.—(AP)—Frank Goldsborough, 19 year old flyer of Jackson Heights, N. Y., was halted temporarily in his record breaking junior transcontinental flight today by heavy rainstorms.

The youthful aviator, son of Bryce Goldsborough, pilot of the ill-fated trans-Atlantic plane, Dawn, attempted this morning to fly the remaining 40 miles of his cross-country flight from Westfield, N. J., to Los Angeles, but rain forced him to return to his impromptu bean field landing place.

He has clipped about 15 hours from the 48 hour record set by Dick James, and with but a half hour flight ahead of him, it seems that only a disabling accident can keep Goldsborough from cutting more than 14 hours from the present record.

Goldsborough started Monday, and according to his computations, had been in the air 33 hours when he made an emergency landing here last night.

Mayor Brzygot of La Salle Is Dead; War Gas Blamed

La Salle, Ill., May 3.—(AP)—Mayor Joseph S. Brzygot, 33, died today after an illness that began last October. Brzygot was elected in 1927, the youngest mayor the town had ever had. He was gassed during the war and to that experience his illness was laid. He was sent west for his health, but the trip proved futile and he had been in bed since his return. He leaves his mother and several brothers and sisters.

PRESIDENT ASKS $600,000 AID FOR LAKES RUM WAR

Includes Cutter to Ply on Michigan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—A further outlay of government money to strengthen the anti-rum running activities of the Coast Guard on the great lakes was asked by President Hoover today in a message to congress submitting a request for a supplemental appropriation of $1,794,720 to the treasury department.

The President's proposed appropriations included an item of $128,800 for pay and allowances during the fiscal year 1931 to the crews of thirty new anti-smuggling motor boats. An initial appropriation of $302,000 to construct the speed boats and man them during April, May and June of this year was approved last January. The proposed new appropriation is to pay the 100 guardsmen in their crews until June 30, 1931.

Message Urges Action.

In his message last January the President stressed the fact that the boats were needed because "the situation regarding liquor smuggling on the great lakes calls for definite action."

The President in his message today also asked for a new allotment of $450,000 for a cutter "suitable for service in assisting shipping" on Lake Michigan. It is planned to start building the cutter next November and finish it by Sept. 1, 1931. Its final cost will be not to exceed $650,000.

Another item in the requests was $28,890 to be used for studies incident to the establishment of two new narcotic farms and for maintenance of the annex to the Leavenworth penitentiary now used almost exclusively for housing criminal drug addicts.

Biggest Item for Customs.

The largest item in the treasury department requests was that for $856,280 for the customs service, of which $662,740 is asked for field service, $172,540 for the Washington bureau, and the remainder for travel services.

At the request of the federal farm board an extra appropriation of $1,000,000 was asked for the department of agriculture to provide for employment of extension specialists in economics and marketing.

GIRL PREPARES TO TELL RAPE STORY TO JURY

South Bend, Ind., May 3.—[Special.]—In preparation for her testimony before the grand jury next week, Miss Esther [Sally] Henry, 19 year old South Bend girl who says she was raped by five boys at a gin party attended by high school students here last Saturday night, has engaged counsel.

Ed W. Hunter, South Bend attorney and son of John N. Hunter, postmaster of this city, stated this morning that he will represent Miss Henry.

Echoes of Slaps on Hip Make Irritated New Yorkers Laugh

New York, May 3.—[U. P.]—The question that filled the air with controversy here tonight was whether customs agents slapped hips and seized liquor when the North German Lloyd liner Bremen sailed early today, or used all their resources to capture toy trains and stuffed dogs from persons who had gone aboard the vessel to bid friends bon voyage.

You could take any one of a number of versions of what happened in Brooklyn at what New York calls a formal "sailing." Dispatches from Washington indicated Assistant Secretary of Treasury Seymour Lowman had accepted the one about the customs agents grouping themselves on the pier to search everybody who left the vessel just before she sailed for the 12 mile limit and Europe.

A Climax to "High Carnival."

Lowman said the agents had acted after receiving reports that there was "high carnival" aboard the Bremen. Now "high carnival" at ship sailings has become part of the social routine of New York the last three years. People flock across the gangplank just before big liners sail to talk to friends in the ship salon, and sailings almost invariably are delayed a half hour or more.

This morning the newspapers carried accounts of how "hip slapping," a quaint method of search inaugurated by customs men, started as the guests were leaving the Bremen. They told in detail how the customs agents patted the guests on the hip to see if there were any glassware, how women's coats were opened and parcels searched, and how several irate husbands almost came to blows with the federal employés when wives who were carrying candy were searched on the chance that there was something else in their packages.

Customs Men Deny It.

Three men read these stories at the breakfast table and leaped for the telephone so eagerly that they almost sprayed themselves with hot coffee.

They were Thomas Whittle, surveyor of the port; Henry C. Stewart, deputy collector of the port, and H. Scheungel, general manager in America for the North German Lloyd line. They were agreed that some one had blundered. But hip slapping? Not a single blow was struck, they chorused, as they began what has come to be called a "joint investigation."

Meanwhile several guests on the Bremen stuck to their stories. They had been slapped, they said, and it was idle for anybody to deny it, for once slapped—one never forgets—particularly the bluebloods who attend "sailings." Then rose Mr. John Cronin, a roundsman of customs guards, and told how he had made some seizures at the pier.

"Some liquor and some merchandise," said Mr. Cronin, "and a few toys that people were trying to smuggle into the country. I got one bottle of champagne, still cold."

Short Sea Trips Arranged.

And while New Yorkers were chortling at the vision of Mr. Cronin with a bottle of champagne in one hand and a stuffed dog in the other, there came news of a cruise where there can be no hip slapping.

The Cunard line announced that three of its vessels will sail around outside the 12 mile limit this summer. The chief attractions, Cunard officials said, will be Rudy Vallee and his orchestra, plus the invigorating sea air. Pleasing and healthful trips, they'll be, according to the officers. Drinking? Perish the thought. Of course, there will be liquor on the British owned Cunard boats, but a person will have to ask for a drink of it to get it. And if a lot of passengers insist on drinking, well, "live and let live" is the way the Cunard folk feel about it.

GUNMAN, NAMED AS SLAYER, GETS GUN TOTING TERM

He Still Faces Trial for Easter Killing.

Frank Delbono, alias Frank Dale, who was indicted on Friday by the grand jury for the murder of Walter Wakefield, slain with two other men on Easter morning in a saloon at 2900 South Wells street, was sentenced to the maximum term for gun toting yesterday. Delbono and Louis Anderson, who was with him when he was arrested on April 14, were sentenced to one year each in the bridewell by Judge John Sbarbaro in the Felony court and fined $300 and costs.

"There is something funny about this case," remarked Judge Sbarbaro. "At the first hearing right after the arrest the testimony was that the sawed off shotgun and three loaded revolvers were within easy reach of these defendants. This morning the story seems to be that the weapons were not so close."

Find Error in Records.

Assistant State's Attorney Frank Mast had just finished presenting the evidence for the state when he happened to look at the records in the case. The records failed to show that the defendants had been arraigned, pleas entered and jury trials waived.

The prosecutor asked leave to amend the records and the attorneys for the defendants objected because had they not been amended a conviction could not stand. It was then this situation was called to his attention that the judge remarked, "There is something funny about this case."

"I remember distinctly the first time the cases came up that the defendants were arraigned and jury trials waived," he said. "I will allow the record to be amended to speak the truth."

It was later explained that the entries were not made at the time because of a "clerical error."

Guns Found in Car.

The two men were arrested by Detectives Francis O'Malley and Herbert H. Burns at Turner and Ogden avenues. When the police searched their automobile they found the four weapons. The pair told the police that the car, which was found to be a stolen one, belonged to a friend, who had just left them.

Delbono and Anderson are both former inmates of the Jefferson City, Mo. penitentiary Delbono served 10 years for second degree murder and Anderson nine years for robbery.

The murder case pending against Delbono depends almost completely on ballistic testimony concerning the alleged similarity of bullets fired from one of his guns and those which killed Wakefield.

College Freshman Hit by Auto Dies of Injuries

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 3.—[U. P.]—Maurice C. Page, 19 year old Carnegie Tech freshman, Pontiac, Mich., died tonight from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile Friday while walking barefooted along the William Penn highway as part of a fraternity initiation stunt. County detectives held Thomas Riffler, 30, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., on a charge of reckless driving.

COP ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Patrolman Emmett Ferguson, 27 years old, 2517 Winnemac avenue, accidentally shot himself in the foot on Friday night while pursuing two youths he suspected of being auto thieves. After he had stopped the pair at Belmont and Sheffield avenues they fled down an alley.

McErlane Freed After Hotel Uproar

Limps in Court

Frank McErlane, south side gunman and beer baron, and a woman companion, Marion Miller, 28 years old, were acquitted of disorderly conduct and statutory charges by Municipal Judge Samuel Heller in Grand Crossing court yesterday. They had been arrested on Friday evening at the Crest apartment hotel, 6724 Stony Island avenue.

McErlane and Miss Miller had registered at the hotel as Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sebastian. Policeman James Wolf testified he found McErlane "staggering drunk" and causing an uproar in the apartment.

McErlane limped into court yesterday with the aid of a steel brace he has been compelled to wear upon his leg since he was shot some time ago. Miss Miller was clinging to his arm. Assistant State's Attorney Henry J. Samuels consented to dismissal of the charges.

MADRID STUDENTS STONE POLICE; 20 LEADERS JAILED

MADRID, May 3.—(AP)—University students, who often created disturbances in the six years that the late Primo de Rivera was dictator, declared a 24 hour strike today over police conduct at a railroad station last Thursday night where students assembled to welcome Miguel de Unamuno, rector of Salamanca university, who was expelled by the dictatorship, but now is in Spain speaking for a republic.

The students of San Carlos Medical college wrecked furniture in some of their classrooms this morning and then adjourned to the campus. One faction formed a parade behind a red flag but another group, objecting to the flag, started a fight.

The police came and the warring undergraduates banded together against the common enemy. They rushed to the street in front of the school and began stoning the police, tearing up cobblestone pavement for ammunition. Some of the stones struck street car windows, frightening passengers, but none of the police was injured. Some of the rioters were slightly hurt and about 20 of the leaders were arrested.

CITY VICTOR IN APPEALS COURT ON MOVIE ISSUE

The Appellate court ruled yesterday that the Circuit and Superior courts cannot issue injunctions to restrain police from interfering with moving pictures denied permits by the police board of censorship. The ruling was made in an appeal from a decision of Superior Judge William J. Lindsay in granting an injunction for the showing of "Party Girl."

The judge granted an injunction early in April. The city fought to dissolve the injunction and was supported by a number of women's clubs objecting to the moral tone of the film. On April 16 the judge banished the film after he had seen the film, not because of its moral tone, but because he found children being freely admitted to the theater contrary to the terms of the injunction. The appeal was taken by Assistant Corporation Counsels James N. Kearns and William V. Daly before the injunction was dissolved.

The decision of the Appellate court states that the purpose of an injunction is to protect property rights. In the case of moving pictures property rights are not involved, since they are allowed to be shown ordinarily under a privilege, the customary permit. The proper relief lower courts may allow is in a mandamus to force the censorship board to grant a permit. The decision was prepared by Justices David M. Matchett, John M. O'Connor, and William H. McSurely.

Farmer Kills Employe for Threatening to Quit

Valparaiso, Ind., May 3.—[Special.]—Fred Wade, 35, farmhand, was killed today by his employer, Nick Vanderaa, 45, at the latter's farm home, six miles west of this city. Vanderaa hired Wade a month ago through a Chicago employment office. The motive for slaying as far as Porter county authorities could learn tonight was that Wade angered Vanderaa by saying he was going to quit. Vanderaa was lodged in jail to await action bya Porter Circuit court grand jury which will be impaneled Monday.

DISMISS PLEA OF C. B. & Q. TO DROP 4 TRAINS

The Illinois commerce commission in an order issued yesterday at Springfield dismissed the application of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad to discontinue trains Nos. 14 and 19 between Mendota and Galesburg, and trains Nos. 180 and 181 between Mendota and Galesburg.

The commission also struck from the active docket the complaint of the Illinois Central railroad versus the Royal Rapid Transit company relative to operation by the transit company of a motor bus line between Chicago and Rockford without a certificate from the commission. The commission dismissed the application of the Royal company for a certificate to operate buses between South Beloit, Rockford, Cherry Valley, Belvidere, Graden, Marengo, Harmony, Elgin, Bloomingdale, and Chicago.

FIREBUG CAUSES $100,000 LOSS.

Seat Pleasant, Md., May 3.—[U. P.]—Fire starting simultaneously in two places in the warehouse of the S. L. Watkins Lumber company early today caused damages estimated at $100,000 and resulted in the injury of a policeman. The fire was believed of incendiary origin.

BEAUTIFUL TREES TO LINE COOK COUNTY'S ROADS

Ambitious Program Is Planned.

BY PAUL POTTER.

[Pictures in Rotogravure Section.]

Chicago and Cook county will boast one of the world's most outstanding tree flanked highway systems in years to come, plans for the newly dedicated Forest Way created by Cook county forest preserve officials and the citizens' advisory committee, headed by Gen. Abel Davis, indicate.

This scenic route, which will skirt the entire metropolitan area when completed, is destined to serve future generations when the elms, maples and oaks now being planted reach the grandeur of full maturity.

Will Resemble Roads Abroad.

Sponsors of the thoroughfare plan not only for paved roads, tree lined, but for sectors of naturally situated reforestated lands at least 660 feet wide to connect each of the county owned forest preserve areas from the Des Plaines region on the north to Palos hills and eastward on the south.

In the splendor of their full height, the trees along this Forest Way are to be likened to such famous roads as the Unter den Linden in Berlin, the Champs-Elysee in Paris, or the Villa d'Este at Tivoli, according to officials in charge. Forest preserve commissioners are providing, according to President A. J. Cermak, that this new forestated strip of land shall surpass the older highways, however, by providing natural woods along the road, and paths for pedestrians or those on horseback as well as motorized travel.

The first sector of the Forest Way, dedicated on Arbor day, April 11, with the pomp and ceremony of county and state patriotic and civic leaders, is to be a memorial of living trees called the Soldiers' section. It extends from Roosevelt road near Maywood to the 31st street entrance of the new zoo near Riverside, on 1st avenue, passing just east of the U. S. Veterans' hospital.

To Honor Hero Dead.

Each tree will be memorialized by a Legion post, gold star mother or father, church, hospital, school or other group, in honor of the 3,000 Cook county veterans who lost their lives in the world war or other conflict. Preliminary plantings have been made along this route.

Beautifully tree lined highways in other localities of the nation have been pointed out by local authorities as examples of the foresight of community leaders years ago. The lasting benefits to such localities from carefully planted roadways is regarded as ample return to future generations for the initial expense and careful maintenance required in establishing such forestated tracts as the Forest Way, they declare.

Girl Shot by Suitor Who Killed Himself May Live

Sally Kuta of 2619 Evergreen avenue, who was shot Friday night during a lovers' quarrel in Humboldt park, may recover, according to physicians at the Lutheran Memorial hospital. A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of suicide in the case of Albert Brown, 22 years old, who shot the Kuta girl when she refused his proposal of marriage and then turned the gun on himself. William Lehman, a friend of Brown, testified that the dead man had been mentally unbalanced. Recently, he said, Brown had made trips seeking buried gold.

U. of I. Salutatorian

WILLIAM K. MAXWELL JR.

Urbana, Ill., May 3.—[Special.]—George F. Drake, Rockford, Ill., was today named valedictorian of this year's graduating class at the University of Illinois by Judson A. Timm, president of the class of 1930. Drake, a student in the college of engineering, has never made a grade below "A" in any subject during his four years. William K. Maxwell Jr., 1262 Pratt boulevard, Chicago, has been named salutatorian. In the university's system of grading, the highest possible grade—meaning perfect in every respect—is 5, and consequently Drake's record of making "A" in every subject gave him the 5 ranking. Maxwell's average is 4.949. Class day exercises will be held Monday, June 9.

VETS OF RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN WILL MEET IN DETROIT

The 300 Chicago members of the Polar Bear association, composed of United States veterans of the Russian campaign during the world war, are expected to move to Detroit May 29, 30, and 31, to attend the annual convention of the organization. C. A. Risley, 209 West Jackson boulevard, Illinois representative of the "Bears," said yesterday that he hopes to have a full roster of the local group at the meeting.

As a part of the meeting a memorial monument to the organization's war dead will be unveiled at Whitechapel Memorial Park and fifty-five men who died in Russia will be buried in a plot reserved for them. The bodies were brought back from Russia several months ago and were placed in a mausoleum.

Bandits Try to Stick Up Town; 2 Slain, 12 Injured

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, May 3.—Two persons were killed and a dozen wounded in the town of Santo Domingo, 40 miles from here, when two cars filled with bandits attempted to hold up the town's richest merchant, Francisco Lira. Lira refused to divulge the hiding place of his money. The bandits hung him to the ceiling and started a search for it. The population attacked the gang. Four of the bandits escaped and two were captured.

Chicago Youth Is Killed in Kansas City Holdup

Kansas City, May 3.—(AP)—A 19 year old youth, who said his name was Jimmy Callahan of Chicago, was shot and killed here late last night by one of three patrolmen who fired at him after he held up and robbed a street car motorman.

ENVOY MORROW TO REFUSE SEAT IN SENATE NOW

Plans to Run Next Fall, Go to Mexico.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow will not accept appointment to the senate at this time but will stand for nomination in the New Jersey senatorial primary on June 17, it was announced officially here today.

Mr. Morrow will leave tonight for New Jersey and rest about ten days before beginning his campaign. He will hold himself ready to appear before the senate naval and foreign affairs committee in behalf of the London naval agreement.

Ambassador Morrow had planned to return to Mexico for a few days immediately on his return from London and then return to Washington and accept the offer of Senator David Baird's seat in the senate during this session of congress. According to the statement issued today, the unexpected prolongation of the five power conferences at London and the shortness of time remaining before adjournment of congress prompted the ambassador's decision to refuse the senate appointment promised him by Gov. Larson of New Jersey. Senator Baird [Rep., N. J.], appointed by Gov. Larson some months ago, will remain in the senate.

Mr. Morrow will not return to Mexico City until after the primary campaign. Late in June, however, he will go to the Mexican capital to take up a number of important matters still pending.

"It will be recalled that in the statement he gave out last December Mr. Morrow said that on his return from London he would go to Mexico for a short time to complete unfinished duties there before entering into his primary campaign in New Jersey," it was said in a statement given out at Mr. Morrow's hotel. "The prolongation of the London conference, has, however, made it impossible for him to go to Mexico until after the close of the primary campaign in June. Moreover, he feels that he should be available in this country to give such testimony and information concerning the naval treaty as may be required of him."

Mr. Morrow's principal opponent for the Republican senatorial nomination is former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen. Frelinghuysen, who formerly supported the dry cause, has come out for modification of the dry laws, declaring they have not been a success.

Mr. Morrow's friends have urged him to take the wet side of this issue. Sentiment in New Jersey is regarded as strongly wet.

Army Officer Silenced.

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—Col. Alexander J. MacNab, U. S. A., senior military instructor on duty here with the New York National Guard, has been instructed by his superiors in the army to refrain from making public speeches on the achievements of Dwight W. Morrow in Mexico, it became known today.

Col. MacNab was formerly military attaché in Mexico City. Complaint was made recently to Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the army, that Col. MacNab in making public speeches here and in New Jersey on Mexico lauded Mr. Morrow for his successful diplomatic work. As Mr. Morrow is now candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States senate from New Jersey, friends of former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, also a candidate in opposition to Mr. Morrow, felt that Col. MacNab was violating army regulations forbidding officers to participate actively in politics.

INSURANCE FIRM, OFFICERS FACE LIQUOR CHARGES

Springfield, Ill., May 3.—(AP)—As the result of an allegedly wet convention of insurance men in Peoria on March 29, indictments naming the president and sales manager of the insurance company sponsoring the convention, the insurance company itself, a fraternal group and a reputed bartender have been returned by the federal grand jury at Peoria, United States Attorney Walter Provine announced here today.

Persons and organizations indicted by the grand jury are charged with possession of liquor, conspiracy to violate the dry laws, and conducting a nuisance.

The charges are based on the report of prohibition agents.

B. G. Moutier, president of the Reliance agency; William A. Pfeiffer, sales manager of the agency; the Reliance Agency corporation, Sud Seite Turn Verein, and A. M. Murphy, alleged bartender, were named in the indictments.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Chicago builders report that construction activities both in the city and suburbs are increasing and indications now are that 1930 will be a fairly good building year, according to E. M. Craig, the executive secretary of the Building Construction Employers' association.

Mr. Craig said that since the first of January more than $150,000,000 in contemplated work has been announced, with approximately $30,000,000 of the work already awarded to contractors. "Building conditions are now favorable for builders," said Mr. Craig. "The reasons are obvious. Prices of materials are low and there is an ample supply of efficient building trades workers to fulfill any construction program. A few months ago many contractors were inclined to be pessimistic over the construction outlook, but now these men are of the opinion that building is fast regaining a healthful and normal condition.

"Home building is being encouraged on all sides by public utility interests and home modernization is progressing. People owning unincumbered property should build now."

Sees World's Fair Stimulus.

Mr. Craig pointed out that the construction of the World's Fair buildings, which will approximate in value $40,000,000, will act as a stimulus of local building and relieve some of the unemployment among the resident building trades workers.

In contemplation of an extensive program of elimination of slum neighborhood districts, Mr. Craig yesterday devoted the day to research work on the tenement districts of the city. This program, he said, will be worked out in conjunction with the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Marshall Field Veterans Bid Good-By to Old Quarters

FIELD WHOLESALE HOUSE OPENS NEW HOME TOMORROW

Quits Place Occupied Since 1887.

The Marshall Field & Co. wholesale house has moved from the building it had occupied for nearly half a century at Adams, Quincy, Wells, and Franklin streets to the Merchandise mart at Wells and Kinzie streets and will be open for business in its new headquarters tomorrow morning.

George W. Young, vice president, announced that the removal of all the merchandise and equipment would be completed over the week-end without any interruption in business. The Merchandise mart, just completed, is known as the largest structure of its kind in the world.

Recall Opening of House.

Veteran employés who have served the Marshall Field wholesale house for more than 50 years expressed feelings of regret at leaving the old building. They recalled how the concern, back in 1887, had pioneered in opening the building in what was the beginning of a new wholesale district in Chicago. When the old wholesale structure was opened it was believed that all of the space could never be utilized.

Stage for Style Shows.

The company's new display rooms are in the south part of the Merchandise mart. Each floor has three display rooms, each one of them covering more than a square block of space. In the north end of the building, adjacent to each department's display rooms, are the open stocks of merchandise. An interesting feature of the silk section will be a specially built-in stage, similar to a stage in a theater. Here fashion pageants will be staged.

LIES HELPLESS UNDER ELEVATOR FOR FORTY HOURS

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—With his left leg and left arm fractured, Joseph Moriset, 66, lay helpless at the bottom of an elevator shaft in a First street loft building for forty hours, fearing that somebody might lower the elevator and crush out his life.

Moriset, superintendent of the building and residing directly opposite it, disappeared Thursday night. Tenants arriving for work next morning found the elevator stopped at the second floor level, but since none knew how to operate it, they used the stairway. Finally, at 10 a. m. today, the victim's groans attracted a stenographer and he was rescued.

He was semi-conscious and whispered repeatedly, "Don't lower the elevator on to me." It is believed he stepped into the shaft accidentally.

YOUTH KILLED BY TRACTOR.

Waukon, Ia., May 3.—[Special.]—William Mullarkey, 16, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mullarkey, Lafayette township, Allamakee county, was killed late Friday evening when he left a tractor running to clean a plow. The tractor started ahead, dragging the youth forty feet.

PASTOR WHO SHOT HIS SEXTON ASKS FOR NEW TRIAL

Ottawa, Ill., May 3.—[Special.]—Charging that the verdict against him was one of prejudice and not based on the evidence, the Rev. James A. Wilson, convicted pastor of the Mendota Methodist church, today filed in the Circuit court here a motion asking a new trial. The Rev. Mr. Wilson was convicted on a charge of attempting to murder his church sexton, Amos Elliott. Arguments on the motion for a new trial, which was filed by Attorney C. E. McNemar of Peoria, contains sixteen points.

AVIATION SHOW OPENS NEW ERA IN AIR PROGRESS

Great and Small Craft Vie for Attention.

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—Eclipsing all previous aviation exhibits with the greatest and most varied fleet of airplanes, gliders, engines and equipment ever assembled under one roof, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America formally opened the doors of the New York air show in Madison Square Garden tonight.

The opening followed a day of unprecedented activity in the sky over New York as part of the ceremonies, seventy-seven flying duplicates of the models on exhibition, among which were six of the largest air transport planes in the world, circled above the city, flying in formation and passing over the exhibition site at the crossing of a great figure eight.

The opening ceremonies took form in the lobby of the Garden shortly before 8 o'clock, headed by Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen with his squadron of thirty-one members of the aviation precinct. From the main floor of the show he made the opening address over the radio.

Planes of Bright Hues.

Unfolding before the procession were the forty-nine brightly colored airplanes, the motor exhibits of fifteen different types, the tiny gliders hanging from the rafters or hovering beneath the wings of the huge air transports, the airport sections and accessory departments of the show.

From the midst of the galaxy of multi-hued wings aeronautical leaders and city officials commented on the progress made in aeronautics since the last show sponsored by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce more than ten years ago. Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker said that the fleet of planes which flew over the city during the day was exemplary of the enthusiasm shown by New Yorkers during the last year. He pointed out that the scheduled arrival of eighty-seven fighting and bombing planes of the army and navy had been delayed until next Wednesday, and that the seventy-seven plane commercial squadron was recruited within twenty-four hours from airports within a fifty mile radius of the show, to take the place of the scheduled military exhibition in the air.

Commissioner Whalen said among other things that his newly formed aerial police section has proved successful and was being copied rapidly by other cities throughout the world.

Big Planes on Show.

The exhibition itself was declared inspiring by its reviewers. Resting on huge wheels, with tires in sizes almost grotesque, noses tilted high in the air, as if with dignity, the Fokker F32, the Curtiss Condor, the Keystone Patrician, Ford tri-motors, the Consolidated Commodore, the Sikorsky Amphibion, all spread their wings over the smaller planes as typical of the largest air transports in regular service over established American air-lines. The present show marks the first instance in which these planes have been exhibited jointly, and observers remarked that it is the first opportunity of many for accurate comparisons.

In contrast to the larger air transports a great variety of training, sport, and lighter commercial planes completed the powered aircraft section of the show. Their bright colors and luxuriant interiors vied with each other for the most popular appeal. Almost every well known type was represented, from the smallest plane with its tiny thirty horse power converted motorcycle engine to the ultra fast mail and passenger planes and the crack pursuit and observation type flying fighting units of the war department. Land planes, seaplanes, and amphibians, exhibited every known modification or adaptation of the theories of flight advanced since the first flight of Orville and Wilbur Wright at Kitty Hawk, N. C., more than twenty-six years ago.

Loops 344 Times

MISS LAURA INGALLS.

[Associated Press Photo.]

St. Louis, Mo., May 3.—(AP)—Miss Laura Ingalls, 25, of New York City established a new women's record for consecutive loops in an airplane by executing 344 loops at Lambert-St. Louis field late today. The former record of 46 loops was held by Miss Mildred Kauffman of Kansas City.

BODY FOUND IN RIVER.

The body of John Janush, 52 years old, 2083 Canalport avenue, was taken from the Chicago river at 16th street yesterday by coast guardsmen. Death was caused by drowning, according to the Maxwell street police.

LINDBERGH BACK AFTER INAUGURAL AIR MAIL FLIGHT

Says He Doesn't Plan to Span Atlantic Again.

New York May 3.—[Special.]—Completing his inauguration of seven day mail service between the principal cities of this continent and those of South America, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh brought his record breaking Lockheed Sirius monoplane to rest on the Roosevelt field here today at 4:35 p. m., daylight time. He had made a nonstop flight from Miami in 8 hours and 58 minutes.

During his week of flying, the colonel clipped two days from the mail schedule by driving his monoplane straight across the Caribbean sea from Havana to Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, and thence to Cristobal, Central America. When he landed today he said that the new schedule should be maintained easily, but that any further cuts in time would have to await the development of faster planes.

Forced to Hunt Hangar.

After Lindbergh landed, field officials advised him there was no room in the hangar at field No. 1, where he had come down. Accordingly he took to the air again and flew half a mile to field No. 2, where there was space available.

Lindbergh was a trifle tired as he climbed down from his seat this afternoon, for he had fought a steady battle up the coast against head winds. Beyond this constant struggle, however, he said the voyage had been without incident. He said that he probably would remain in New York for three or four weeks attending to routine business.

Plans No Long Trip Over Sea.

More than 2,000 persons, many of them having waited since morning, were on hand to greet the colonel.

He was asked about persistent reports that he is planning another trans-Atlantic flight.

"There is no basis for these reports," he said, "and I have no plans for any long trip over the sea. I have no intention of any trans-Atlantic hop."

12 MEN, WOMAN FACE CHARGES OF KIDNAPING

Kenosha, Wis., May 3.—[Special.]—Warrants charging kidnaping will be prepared by District Attorney Morris Barnett for the kidnaping suspects being held for trial in Chicago on May 19, he announced here today. Twelve men and a woman are in custody after confessions of four men that they brought Theodore Kopelman, wealthy Chicago insurance agent, to a cottage at Camp Lake, Kenosha county, where they demanded $5,000 on threat of torturing him.

The alleged offense was committed in Kenosha county Feb. 28 and the district attorney's office is ready to bring the defendants to Kenosha for trial should they be released in Chicago.

2 FRENCH FLYERS RESCUED FROM DEATH IN SAHARA

Found by Caravan After Crash in Sand Storm.

LISBON, Portugal, May 3.—(AP)—A French airplane came out of the skies today and placed tenderly upon Cintra airdrome the aviators of the ill-fated Coulette expedition, which it had lifted from the white death of the Sahara desert.

The rescued airmen, Lieuts. Marchesseau and Coulette, were suffering intensely from their experiences and not for a long time after their return to France will they dispel the horror of their experiences of the last week.

Lost in Sandstorm.

The birdmen were lost when a sandstorm reached up and drew them from the air to the middle of the desert. They were flying at an altitude of about 200 feet when the storm overtook them. The sand overwhelmed their plane and they crashed. The aircraft was wrecked, but the flyers escaped unhurt.

Stunned, they lay in the wreckage until the sandstorm subsided and then, with the coming of daylight, started out afoot to seek rescue. They were lost many hours before coming upon a caravan of Meharists. Meanwhile, the blistering sands had burned the shoes from their feet and the aviators were suffering greatly from lacerations.

Saved by Moors.

The caravan offered them aid and they traveled with it for four days before finding water, of which the camel train had exhausted its own supply. On the sixth day they arrived at the Taureg village of Gao, where the Moors gave them generous hospitality, treated their wounds and provided them with soft sandals.

Aviators Bailli and Reginsensi, who presently arrived at Gao, picked them up and conveyed them first to Algiers, by way of Reggan, and then to this port, on their homeward flight.

Messenger's Delay Balks Bandits Raid for Pay Roll

A bandit entered the Enterprise Oil Burner company at 1420 South Michigan avenue yesterday noon and demanded the pay roll, amounting to $800. He didn't get it. A messenger who had been sent to a bank for the money had not returned. Lining up Harry Schaeffer and Henry A. Mast, 6329 South Albany avenue, the owners, and other employés, the bandit took $50 from the cash drawer and escaped.

RAT POISON KILLS CHILD.

CIVILIANS RUSH 85 PLANES TO A SHAM ATTACK

New York, May 3.— [Special.] —A graphic demonstration of the mobility of air squadrons was made today by the Curtiss-Wright Flying service when it swiftly gathered a fleet of eighty-five airplanes, valued at $2,000,000, on twenty-four hours' notice after the army's scheduled air attack on Manhattan proved to be a genuine "sham."

Forty Curtiss Falcons from Mitchell field were scheduled to stage a sham battle attack between 12 and 1 p. m., on Manhattan as a prelude to the opening of New York's air show tonight at Madison Square Garden. At the last minute, military authorities admitted that they were unable to go forward as planned.

Swiftly commandeering every available airplane from as far north as Portland, Me., the Curtiss-Wright organization took charge. Ranking officers of the Curtiss-Wright organization manned the airplanes themselves. Among them are Richard F. Hoyt, war time flyer; Charles L. Lawrence, Walter Beech, Maj. E. H. Brainerd, and Lieutenant Commander George Chapline.

The theoretical attack on the city lasted for an hour and provided a great spectacle.

46 ARE INDICTED FOR OPERATING A BIG LIQUOR RING

Indianapolis, Ind., May 3.—[Special.]—Arrests in connection with widespread operations of an alleged liquor ring in Vigo and Vermillion counties were expected tonight as a result of federal indictment of 46 persons for participation in its activities. Operations of the ring are believed to have had a bearing on four or five murders since 1926.

All 46 were named in one indictment which charged conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, while four other indictments charging manufacture, sale, transportation and maintenance of a nuisance named groups from the 46.

The ring is said to have operated 38 stills in Vigo and Vermillion counties capable of producing approximately 10,000 gallons of liquor daily and to have maintained a protection system supported by tax levies on each still which covered the manufacture and guaranteed delivery of the liquor to all points supplied by the "system."

ASKS DIVORCE AND CHILD.

James J. Jambazoff, 13460 Baltimore avenue, yesterday filed a bill for divorce in the Superior court against Aleksandra Jambazoff, 10716 Green Bay avenue. Jambazoff asks custody of a daughter, Bernice, 5 years old, declaring that the mother is unfit to care for the child because she was found guilty of shoplifting.

DOES CHICAGO WANT FASTER TRAINS TO N. Y.?

Two Railroads Say They'll Have to Be Shown.

Travel time by rail between Chicago and New York will not be reduced until the railroads carrying passengers between the cities are convinced there is a public demand for 18-hour or 19-hour service. This was the opinion expressed yesterday by passenger traffic managers of the New York Central and Pennsylvania railroads.

The two officials were questioned concerning the speculation that better schedules were being considered by all railroads following the recent establishment by the Canadian National of an 18-hour train from Montreal to Chicago, said to be the fastest service in the world for the distance of the run.

"No Serious Consideration."

"Reduction of schedules is of vital interest to us," said D. M. Bowman, passenger traffic manager for the New York Central in Chicago. "The possibilities have been discussed by our officials from time to time, but there is now no serious consideration being given to the betterment of the present 20-hour service."

Asked if he did not believe that the public wanted faster service to New York he said:

"I have not been able to make up my mind. In my personal observation I have not been able to discover any particular clamor on the part of the public for faster service."

"You cannot come out in the open in matters like these; the public cannot understand all the angles involved," he said when told that efforts to get a definite statement of policy from the New York office of the railroad were unsatisfactory.

Asks Evidence of a Demand.

C. E. McCullough, passenger traffic manager of the Pennsylvania lines in Chicago, said that his railroad wanted evidence of real public demand for faster service before an effort to cut schedules is made.

"Safety, comfort and dependability must be assured in maintaining schedules," he said. "When the public is ready for faster service and is willing to pay for it and when we can be assured that it can be done with assurance of these factors, new schedules will be started."

Mr. McCullough said that the Canadian National in its new service traveled the 848 miles between Montreal and Chicago in 18 hours and 15 minutes, making an average speed of 46.4 miles an hour. The Broadway Limited and the Golden Arrow of the Pennsylvania lines cover the 908 miles between Chicago and New York in 20 hours with an average speed of 45.4 miles per hour, he said.

20 Hour Service Since 1902.

Records of the Pennsylvania lines disclosed that 20-hour service between New York and Chicago was in operation as early as 1902. Eighteen hour service was maintained by the Pennsylvania Special from 1905 to 1912 when the schedule was suspended, giving way to the Broadway Limited and its 20-hour service.

A new reduction in the running time of crack trains from the Pacific northwest to Chicago was announced yesterday by the Chicago, Milwaukee St. Paul and Pacific, and the Northern Pacific. The Olympian of the Milwaukee road and the North Coast Limited of the Northern Pacific will arrive in Chicago at 9:15 a. m. daily instead of 9:30. The North Coast Limited runs into Chicago over the Burlington.

KIDNAPED MAN RETURNS HOME IN DAZED CONDITION

Edgewood, Ia., May 3.—[Special.]—W. A. Smith of Edgewood, kidnaped on the streets at Cedar Rapids last Monday and tossed out of the machine at Gary, Ind., two days later, was returned here by his relatives today. He still is in a dazed condition and unable to tell much about his experiences.

According to his story he was walking downtown when a passing motorist offered him a ride. He remembered nothing further, he said, until he was tossed out of the machine. His overcoat, watch and $12 in cash were stolen and his body was a mass of bruises.

Smith recently went to Cedar Rapids to engage in business. He says he has no enemies and has no theory as to why he was kidnaped.

AN EPISODE OF RECONSTRUCTION.

Readers of "Sixty-five Years Ago" in THE TRIBUNE have had flashes of stirring news recently, the surrender of Lee, the assassination and death of Lincoln, the attack upon Seward, the unfolding of Booth's conspiracy, and the killing of Booth by that eccentric trooper, Sergt. Boston Corbett of the Sixteenth New York cavalry. There also has been entwined in all this the news of Sherman's negotiations with Gen. Joseph Johnston for the surrender of that army in North Carolina.

Control of the terms of the return of the south to the Union was passing with the death of Lincoln from the hands of men who had fought the war to the hands of men who had fought Lincoln. Political critics of the federal government were about to take on where the government had dropped and bitter civilians were to step into the places of moderate minded soldiers. The military and the administration which supported it was passing out of the scene when Sherman wrote a political document in the terms to Johnston. The consequences were almost disastrous to him. He had the example of Grant's terms to Lee in which the former had not stepped out of his military character in the slightest and yet had taken some of the bitterness out of defeat. The confederate soldiers could go from Appomattox without feeling that they were to be outcasts in the reconstruction of the Union.

Sherman in spite of this precedent entangled himself with ideas of statesmanship, led into them by his own desire to be of service in a critical moment by giving peace its true direction at the outset and at the same time being too worried by what he thought might happen if his negotiations failed. Such worry was a fault he sometimes confessed and it was one he said Grant lacked, being thus superior in generalship. He did not have Johnston bottled up and he was afraid the confederates might get away and take to guerrilla warfare indefinitely. He wanted to avoid that. Just before he met Johnston he had received news of the assassination of Lincoln. He kept it from his troops for fear they would destroy Raleigh and ravage its countryside. He informed Johnston of the event and the confederate general was appalled by the possible consequences of the crime. Nevertheless he was too shrewd a trader for Sherman when the latter turned statesman.

The agreement was for an armistice terminable upon forty-eight hours' notice. Johnston said his position was not similar to that of Lee. He not only could get his army away but he had politics at his elbow. Breckinridge, his secretary of war, was near by and Jefferson Davis was within touch. Sherman resolved to carry out his interpretation of the plans of Lincoln for the readmission of the southern states. Johnston's men were to go home. Amnesty without political disabilities was granted them. They were to reorganize their states to resume their places in the Union, elect their members of congress, accept the functions of the federal government and declare business as usual. The officials of the late confederate government would do well to escape the country and travel for their health. Sherman thought he had that tip directly from Lincoln in the lemonade and brandy story, and in this he probably was right. Lincoln wished Jefferson Davis and his cabinet could get away "unbeknown" to him.

The terms were telegraphed to Washington and were received with amazement and fury. The radical Republicans who were to reconstruct the south with Negro suffrage were in the saddle. Halleck ordered other generals to move their troops against Johnston and cut off his retreat. He ordered them to disregard all orders from Sherman. [Sherman later said he would have used his army to protect Johnston.] One thing saved the situation. Grant was sent into North Carolina as fast as he could travel. He did not allow Sherman to know of the storm in Washington, but advised him that the terms were out of range and suggested that he give notice of ending the armistice with the alternative of attacking or of offering the terms given Lee. Sherman did so and Johnston accepted a strictly military stipulation of surrender.

Grant kept himself in the background of the episode, protecting his friend Sherman wherever he could and minimizing the consequences to him. But in this background Grant's genius and his supreme common sense and good judgment were high lighted. Every other federal general had had his moment or his long period of error, weakness or folly. McClellan had even written outlines of political conduct to Lincoln and was provoked because they were ignored. Probably it was not strange that the generals of a democracy were politically minded and sought to mix affairs of state with the direction of armies, but, if so, then Grant in his single mindedness gains even more distinction as the unique genius of the war.

RECLAIM THE DES PLAINES.

Chicago's inland waterways are yet to be developed. With the Des Plaines river, the north branch of the Chicago, the north shore channel, the Little Calumet, the Sag channel and the smaller lakes, the lagoon systems of the parks and the long lagoons now in the making along the south shore and the north, Chicago has a network of internal waterways that need only care, protection, and a minimum of new construction to be a complete system for small boats, canoes, outboard motor launches, water taxis and small cruisers. With a two or three foot channel guaranteed by feeders or by dams and little locks or small boat ramps, with protection given to the waters of the streams from unnecessary defilement, and with more harbors for small boats included in the lake shore park systems, Chicago's inland waterways can become an ideal cruising ground for literally tens of thousands of small boats. The pleasures of land motoring have been well recognized in Chicago's plans. The possibilities of water travel and recreation are yet to be developed. The Des Plaines and other streams should be reclaimed.

Today a gracious zone of green lies along the Des Plaines river and north branch of the Chicago almost continuously from the county line southward to Riverside, Summit and the great canal, and a Forest way is building there a single system through the preserves for motor travel. The woods along the water's course are cool; the river shores are bright in the summer sun; only the stream is vile. Motorists find picnic grounds along the shores and forest roads; few use the stream itself. In summer months a stagnant scum and stench lies on the water; the flats dry up; the river is a string of filthy pools only in part connected. What could be a small but pleasant waterway becomes in fact a ditch neglected and unused.

The river Cam at Cambridge, or a hundred other waterways in Europe, shows what can be done with little streams, and Chicago's inland waterways can be developed to the same degree of human use and beauty. In such a program the reclamation of the Des Plaines river should come first. Small harbors along the lake shore at short intervals also should receive attention soon. Harbors in Evanston and the north shore towns are needed to complement the growing interest in small motor boats, in sailing, in canoes. With this progress made the job of giving the small waterways of Chicago a practicable interconnection could be taken up. Already they are joined in part. They still lack sympathetic development as a whole.

The show of motor boats at Navy pier gives emphasis to Chicago's need for more small waters and places to run in. Motor boats alone in Chicagoland number some 7,000 keels. With more facilities this number can be tripled. Eventually an inland water system comprising the Lake Michigan lagoons, the Chicago river, the Calumet and the Des Plaines, the Fox river and the lakes of northern Illinois and the Lake Geneva system should be made available for small boats. The country and suburban life as well as residential areas in the great town will gain greatly therefrom in richness and in charm. Chicago needs an inland water plan.

A MONTH UNDER ARMS.

Boys who like guns and wish to be expert in their handling will welcome a month of camping at Fort Sheridan in the citizens' military training outfit. Each summer they assemble for a training that will fit them in time for service in event of war as officers, and spend their time in long, bright days of hiking, eating, shooting, drilling, dancing, and the study of the stiff technique of national defense.

"The citizens' military training camps," says President Hoover, "have fulfilled through ten years the purpose for which they were established. They have proved themselves an important means toward physical and moral health in the individual and civic welfare in the nation. The willingness of young men to devote a month to this training program for better citizenship is proof of good will in the generation on which will presently devolve the maintenance of our social and political institutions."

That is high recommendation. But an even higher commendation is the word of the boys who have had their training there. Ask a boy who has been there. He will advise the questioner to apply at once for a good time free and a valuable training to Military Training Camps Association of the United States, 705 Tower building, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

Editorial of the Day

A CONNECTICUT "HOUSE OF TOWNS."

[Springfield, Mass., Republican.]

As a solution of an "age old" controversy the New Haven Journal-Courier suggests a reorganization of the state's scheme of government by replacing the present house of representatives with a "house of towns" in which each town would have one representative and one only, the senate membership being apportioned on a population basis.

The New Haven newspaper is moved to a consideration of the age old controversy by contemplating the completed census count of the town of Union. The town's population in 1900 was 428. In 1920 it was 257. On the 1st of this month it was 196. Still it has two members of the house of representatives, the same as New Haven, whose estimated population in 1928 was 187,900. The reason for this "equality" in representation is the fact that both places were organized in 1818, when the constitution of that year was adopted. Townships organized later have only one representative each. There are—or were recently—87 towns in the first category and 81 in the second, making the house a membership of 255. By a constitutional amendment in 1901 the number of senatorial districts was increased to 24, each district having one senator.

The grip of the small town on Connecticut lawmaking was well illustrated by the action of the constitutional convention established by the referendum vote of 1901. Representation in the convention, like the house of representatives, was on a town and not a population basis. Therefore, the small towns—for most of the towns of the state are small—were in control. An attempt to modify the inequality of legislative representation resulted in a proposal which satisfied neither side and was rejected by an overwhelming vote when submitted to a referendum. It is a rare obituary of a man of any prominence in rural Connecticut which does not mention his service in the legislature. It would be somewhat less rare if membership were in a house of towns as proposed by the Journal-Courier. Which is a fact to be reckoned with in considering the attitude of the small towns created before 1818 toward even such a moderate reform.

The following Bible reading begins with the first verse of the second chapter of II. Samuel. The American standard version is used. This edition is copyright, 1929, by the International Council of Religious Education. The only change is in paragraph form and punctuation method.

DAVID MADE KING

And it came to pass after this that David inquired of the Lord, saying, "Shall I go up into any of the cities of Judah?" And the Lord said unto him, "Go up." And David said, "Whither shall I go up?" And he said, "Unto Hebron." So David went up thither, and his two wives also, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite. And his men that were with him did David bring up, every man with his household; and they dwelt in the cities of Hebron. And the men of Judah came, and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah.

And they told David, saying, "The men of Jabesh-gilead were they that buried Saul." And David sent messengers unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, and said unto them, "Blessed be ye of the Lord, that ye have showed this kindness unto your Lord, even unto Saul, and have buried him. And now the Lord show loving kindness and truth unto you, and I also will requite you this kindness because ye have done this thing. Now, therefore let your hands be strong, and be ye valiant, for Saul your lord is dead, and also the house of Judah have anointed me king over them."

Now Abner, the son of Ner, captain of Saul's host, had taken Ish-bosheth, the son of Saul, and brought him over to Mahanaim; and he made him king over Gilead, and over the Ashurites, and over Jezrell, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, and over all Israel. Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and he reigned two years. But the house of Judah followed David. And the time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months.

And Abner, the son of Ner, and the servants of Ish-bosheth, the son of Saul, went out from Mahanaim to Gibeon. And Joab, the son of Zeruiah, and the servants of David, went out and met them by the pool of Gibeon; and they sat down, the one on the one side of the pool, and the other on the other side of the pool. And Abner said to Joab, "Let the young men, I pray thee, arise and play before us." And Joab said, "Let them arise." Then they arose and went over by number twelve for Benjamin, and for Ish-bosheth, the son of Saul, and twelve of the servants of David. And they caught every one his fellow by the head and thrust his sword in his fellow's side, so they fell down together; wherefore that place was called Helkath-hazzurim, which is in Gibeon. And the battle was very sore that day; and Abner was beaten, and the men of Israel, before the servants of David.

And the three sons of Zeruiah were there, Joab, and Abishai, and Asahel; and Asahel was as light of foot as a wild roe. And Asahel pursued after Abner, and in going he turned not to the right hand nor to the left from following Abner. Then Abner looked behind him and said, "Is it thou, Asahel?" And he answered, "It is I." And Abner said to him, "Turn thee aside to thy right hand or to thy left, and lay thee hold on one of the young men, and take thee his armor." But Asahel would not turn aside from following him. And Abner said again to Asahel, "Turn thee aside from following me, wherefore should I smite thee to the ground? How then should I hold up my face to Joab, thy brother?" Howbeit he refused to turn aside; wherefore Abner with the hinder end of the spear smote him in the body so that the spear came out behind him; and he fell down there and died in the same place, and it came to pass that as many as came to the place where Asahel fell down and died stood still.

But Joab and Abishai pursued after Abner; and the sun went down when they were come to the hill of Ammah, that lieth before Giah by the way of the wilderness of Gibeon. And the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together after Abner and became one band, and stood on the top of a hill. Then Abner called to Joab and said, "Shall the sword devour forever? Knowest thou not that it will be bitterness in the latter end? How long shall it be then, ere thou bid the people return from following their brethren?" And Joab said, "As God liveth, if thou hadst not spoken, surely then in the morning the people had gone away, nor followed every one his brother."

So Joab blew the trumpet; and all the people stood still and pursued after Israel no more; neither fought they any more. And Abner and his men went all that night through the Arabah; and they passed over the Jordan, and went through all Bithron, and came to Mahanaim.

And Joab returned from following Abner; and when he had gathered all the people together, there lacked of David's servants nineteen men and Asahel. But the servants of David had smitten of Benjamin, and of Abner's men, so that three hundred and three score men died. And they took up Asahel and buried him in the sepulchre of his father, which was in Bethlehem. And Joab and his men went all night, and the day brake upon them at Hebron.

Now there was long war between the house of Saul and the house of David; and David waxed stronger and stronger, but the house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker.

SUCCESS.

Genius, that power which dazzles mortal eyes,
Is oft but perseverance in disguise.
Continuous effort of itself implies,
In spite of countless falls, the power to rise.
'Twixt failure and success the print's so fine,
Men sometimes know not when they touch the line;
Just when the pearl is waiting one more plunge,
How many a struggler has thrown up the sponge!
As the tide goes clear out it comes clear in;
In business 'tis at turns, the wisest win;
And, O, how true when shades of doubt dismay,
"'Tis often darkest just before the day."
A little more persistence, courage, vim,
Success will dawn o'er failure's cloudy rim.
Then take this honey for the bitterest cup;
There is no failure save in giving up.
No real fall, so long as one still tries,
For seeming setbacks make the strong man wise.
There's no defeat, in truth, save from within;
Unless you're beaten there, you're bound to win.

CHASING FLU TO SOURCE.

DRS. E. F. TRAUB and R. D. Herrold think they have discovered either the cause of influenza or an important contributing cause. They go a step further, reporting successful efforts to prevent influenza by the use of a vaccine. A skin test for diagnosing susceptibility similar to the Schick test for diphtheria. They even tell about the use of a serum for the disease.

The cocci which they think is a cause is one of the streptococci and probably one that has been under suspicion for several years. It is suggestive that this streptococcus group furnish all the microbes except one accused of being the cause of this disease during the last thirteen years. They found two cocci growing together on culture media and presenting to the unaided eye an appearance by which a diagnosis could be made.

From these cultures they made a vaccine which they found to be of great service. Some people they thought were immune as the result of attacks of influenza years before. Others were immune because of exposure during the earlier days of this epidemic. Still others they made immune by vaccination. They go on record as favoring vaccination. Of the many methods used against influenza in 1918 none accomplished anything except vaccination and it made no showing that could be boasted of. At that, since 1918, it has been the one ray of hope for deliverance from future epidemics.

Drs. Traub and Herrold commit themselves to the skin test. The men fighting influenza need a good, simple, diagnostic test more than they need a vaccine or a curative serum. As to the curative serum, or whatever one chooses to call it, these investigators briefly tell of their experience and let the facts speak for themselves. They express no opinion. It is now sixty-six weeks since the 1928 epidemic was at its peak. It seems certain that the Brownlee theory will not hold true for this spring. The end of the next thirty-three week period will fall in October, 1930.

NERVES MAKE 'EM JUMP.

Mrs. D. W. C. writes: What causes the flesh on the limbs, especially in the arms, to jerk and jump?

REPLY.

Nerves.

IT PROBABLY IS MIGRAINE.

Mrs. M. E. L. writes: Is there such a thing as incurable sick headache? My husband has had these headaches for the last 20 years, and his mother also has them. Sometimes they come very frequently and sometimes there will be a lapse of two or three weeks before another attack. Sometimes violent vomiting occurs with the headache, and again just an upset feeling in the stomach.

REPLY.

The probability is that your husband has migraine. This is inheritable in a certain sense. In some phases migraine seems to be related to epilepsy. In others, to nettle-rash, asthma, and that group of ills.

Finding a cure is not an easy matter. Study of the man and his disease sometimes points a way out. In some cases control of constipation offers escape. In others search for a food or a group of foods to which the subject is sensitized is the most promising line of treatment. Since the attacks lessen coincident with the change of life, the use of ductless gland preparations, such as pituitary, is a good lead.

This is enough to indicate that each case should be studies as a basis of treatment.

RUN AWAY FROM RAGWEED.

P. T. P. writes: I have asthma every year in August and September. It settles in the bronchial tubes and I have difficulty in breathing on account of wheezing. Would be glad if you could discuss this and suggest anything to cure same, as I have tried several things and have found nothing to help it except quinine. Do you think it would hurt a person to take quinine regularly for that?

REPLY.

Presume you started with hay fever and have wound up with bronchial asthma, as so many do.

Since your trouble develops in August, pollen is still the predominating cause. Probably pollen of the ragweeds is the outstanding factor.

If this proves to be the cause, why not try a season in southern Florida, or in some part of the west where there are none of the ragweeds? Escaping one season, you should be in condition for some other treatment.

ENDING TENANCY AND RAISING RENT.

Chicago, April 24.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—What steps can a landlord take in ordering persons to move when rent is paid up?

Also, can rent be raised from $35 a month to $50 when there isn't any lease?

J. M.

A tenancy is "by the month" if expressly so agreed, or if the rent is payable monthly and there is no valid agreement for a longer term. Since an oral agreement for a year to commence in the future is invalid under the statute of frauds, the tenancy under such an agreement is ordinarily by the month.

The Illinois statute provides: "In all cases of tenancy by the month, or for any other term less than one year, where the tenant holds over without special agreement, the landlord shall have the right to terminate the tenancy by thirty days' notice in writing." In 10 Ill. App. 626 it was held that "this section has no reference to the right of the tenant to terminate." Hence, the common law oral notice by the tenant is probably sufficient, but we advise written notice in all cases. The notice does not relieve the tenant of his obligation to pay rent to the end of his tenancy. There is no legal obligation to assign a reason for the notice. The right to increase the rent is incidental to the right to terminate.

WATER MAIN EXTENSION.

Chicago, April 23.—[Friend of the People.]—Will the city of Chicago extend its water mains to 82d street and California avenue this summer? They are now within a block of us, at 81st street and California avenue, and is there any reason why the extension will not be continued?

J. W.

There are no proceedings pending for the extension of this water main, and I would suggest that a petition be filed with the board of local improvements to have this water main extended by special assessment.

OWNERSHIP OF FENCE.

Chicago, April 25.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—How can I determine the ownership of the fence in my rear yard?

A. N. W.

The wording of the fence act indicates that the legislature had agricultural properties primarily in mind. Section 2, for example, provides that a fence "sufficient to turn stock" shall be legal. Although the applicability of this wording to urban property is open to some question, there is no express exemption and we regard the act as applying to division fences between city lots which are inclosed on their other boundaries, so that adjoining owners must contribute equally to the cost and repair of each such fence.

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 4, 1865.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Johnson issued a proclamation declaring that evidence in the possession of the government shows that the atrocious murder of President Lincoln and the attempted assassination of Secretary of State Seward were "incited, concocted, and procured by and between Jeff Davis, late of Richmond, Jacob Thompson, Clement C. Clay, Beverly Tucker, George N. Sanders, W. C. Cleary, and other rebels and traitors harbored in Canada." The President offers a reward of $100,000 for the arrest of Jeff Davis, $25,000 for Clay, $25,000 for Thompson, $2,500 for Sanders and Tucker, and $1,000 for Cleary.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—The funeral train bearing the remains of the late President arrived here from Chicago at 9 a. m. At most of the stations along the way funeral arches had been erected under which the train passed. All the crossroads were filled with teams decorated with mourning and at every home were men and women standing in the doorways or beside the track waving white flags draped with crêpe. In the night as the train passed through villages and cities minute guns were fired, bells tolled, and crowds bearing torches lined the station platforms. Upon arrival here a procession was formed and the remains escorted to the statehouse, where they now repose in state.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The 6th and other corps of the Army of the Potomac have broken camp and are on the march to Washington. Gen. Sherman and staff were expected to arrive at Fortress Monroe today and proceed to this city.

CHICAGO.—On the 8th day of May and thereafter THE TRIBUNE company will issue an evening edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE at 7 p. m. It will contain special and general telegraphic dispatches from all quarters up to the time of going to press. CHICAGO.—The results of the Republican primaries in Cook county, the most hotly contested ever known in Chicago, resulted as follows in the selection of delegates to the state convention: For Judge Elbridge Hanecy for governor, 234; for Judge Orrin N. Carter, 228; uninstructed, 44. Of the latter, 19 are from the 30th ward and are friends of State's Attorney Deneen. They will do whatever he may wish. He has always been the close friend of Congressman Lorimer, who has been the backbone of the Hanecy campaign, and they have not parted company. At the county convention today it is expected that Deneen will be renominated for state's attorney.

NEW YORK.—An intimate friend of Gov. Theodore Roosevelt said that Roosevelt is willing to accept the vice presidential nomination if President McKinley will support him for President in 1904.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

NEW YORK.—Fannie Hurst, magazine serial writer and author of a number of popular and successful novels, has found happiness in a five year "trial marriage." She made the announcement herself and disclosed that her husband is Jacques Danielson, pianist and composer. The "trial" was a success and the marriage knot will hold, the wife announces. They were married on May 5, 1915, in Lakewood, N. J. They mutually agreed to maintain separate households. Her husband telephones her for a dinner engagement, exactly as any other friend, she said, and their average breakfasts together are two a week.

BALTIMORE, Md. — Complete returns from Baltimore city and practically from all the counties in Maryland in the presidential preferential primaries give Gen. Leonard Wood 15,900 to 8,059 for Senator Hiram Johnson.

WINNIPEG, Man.—[By Walter Noble Burns.]—Winnipeg, metropolis of western Canada, turned back the clock of history and became for the time old Fort Garry, civilization's outpost in the western wilderness. The occasion was the 250th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay company. It was observed by a fur brigade pageant of Indians and trappers on Red river and a powwow and peace pact ceremony. Indians gathered from all over Canada.

FIXING THE WAR GUILT.

Champaign, Ill., April 22.—It is with the greatest pleasure that I read your editorial this morning regarding those foreigners who are constantly imposing upon our hospitality to berate us for our moral obliquity in not signing a security pact with France. Are these gentlemen trying to string us for boobs? Do they think that we are not perfectly aware that any statesman can get himself attacked over night in case of need? Do they consider us so stupid as not to realize that signing such a security pact would be tantamount to underwriting the most extravagant French schemes for the military domination of Europe and the world?

But perhaps we bring this ignoble treatment upon ourselves. We still officially pretend to believe the French version of the origin of the war in 1914, and all the silly talk about "innocent France" and the "brutal attack" of the Germans. Yet every competent scholar knows that this version of the story is not true; and each year the case against France becomes stronger. Why not admit it? Two years ago Senator Shipstead introduced a resolution asking for an impartial investigation of the origin of the war by competent scholars, but nothing has been done. Why not bring this resolution to light and hold the investigation? By doing so we will show that we no longer believe in fairy tales, and the French will see that a security pact with us would not give them a free hand to start a war at our expense whenever they see fit. The security pact would lose its charm, and we would be left in peace; we would hear no more of our moral betrayal of Europe. As long as they confined themselves to calling us Uncle Shylock I bore it in peace; but now that they are changing the tune to call us Iago as well I begin to resent it.

THE OLD TIME SALOON.

River Forest, Ill., April 18.—Woman closed the saloons because she was not allowed inside, and because she could not see inside. The frosted windows and blind doors to saloons ruined them. Men who today declare that the old time saloon was an unmitigated disaster to individuals and to society are merely taking the female view.

As a matter of fact man was at his best in the old time, high class saloon. Conversations in saloons among men usually were on grave and important and cultural subjects. Talk was on a higher plane than can be found anywhere in our social life at present. In the absence of such conversations and exchanges of opinion we find ourselves adrift in politics and affairs go from bad to worse.

Since the saloons were closed and woman has been voting government has reached low water mark.

JOHN F. HANFORDSON.

POLITICAL BANNERS.

Chicago, April 23.—A city ordinance prohibiting the placing of signs or banners on poles in our streets is a joke. Our mayor and city officials ought to practice what they preach. "Help Keep Our City Clean." Why do they permit such a disgrace to continue? They ought to fine every person $100 for each sign or banner they have up. The city officials see that several hundred school children do their work in cleaning up the city while they sit back doing nothing to help the cause. Look at the streets, the dust flying as if you were out west in a sand storm.

READER.

"THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER."

Chicago, April 24. — The house has passed and sent to the senate the bill to make "The Star-Spangled Banner" the national anthem. May I suggest an amendment reading "until a better and more practical one is found"?

CHOIR DIRECTOR.

WILD FOWL.

Chicago, April 21.—In the last few years more than ten million wild ducks died from alkali poisoning on the Bear river marshes in Utah when irrigation projects began drawing water from the feeder streams that supplied the marsh with fresh water. More than fifteen hundred wild geese, by actual count, died on Priest lake in Montana due to overconcentration of birds on a small body of water; and ducks and geese by the thousands died on Malheur lake in Montana also from overconcentration.

This is the condition that exists in various sections of the United States today while sportsmen wonder why our seemingly inexhaustible supply of wild fowl is rapidly disappearing. From an economic point of view the values of the birds that lost their lives because of our carelessness and neglect would amount to millions of dollars.

To check this enormous mortality the federal government stopped chasing bootleggers for a moment and passed a law which reduced the daily bag limit from twenty-five birds to fifteen. Now, the lawmakers thought, the birds are saved. But this is not true. It is ridiculous to believe that lowering the annual kill by hunters will increase the pitiful remnant of birds that is struggling to find a place on which to rest and feed in safety. The man who hunts isn't to blame for the decrease of the birds. Neglect, drainage, and civilization are to blame, and legislation of the above sort will never keep our ducks and geese from going the way of the passenger pigeon.

Seventy-five per cent of the North American wildfowl are raised in Canada and we show our appreciation for the multitudes of game Canada sends down to us each fall by allowing the birds to die of neglect and abuse.

Where are we headed? Judging from past actions on the part of congress to save the birds one does not find it very hard to realize that it won't be long before our lawmakers legislate one of the finest sports in the world out of existence. The young man of today who desires a few days of real sport in the marshes will be forced to haunt poolrooms or wear fancy knickers and chase golf balls for his sport.

Instead of passing laws which point an accusing finger at the sportsman, why isn't something constructive done? Why can't we establish refuges all over the United States? Why can't we plant duck foods and reclaim the thousands of acres of drained marshlands that have failed to produce the corn and wheat that was expected? Let's control the coyotes, crows and gulls that annually destroy hundreds of thousands of baby birds on the northern nesting grounds.

Why doesn't some thinking senator introduce these bills in congress and get them passed instead of reading bedtime story books and delivering oratory on prohibition and the world court? Let's get on the right track and give the birds a sporting chance. In a short time North America would, literally, be overflowing with ducks and geese.

WALTER G. POHLMAN.

AREN'T WE ALL!

Chicago, April 16.—My ten-cent opinion on the world court, wet and dry and McCormick-Lewis question: I agree with the stand of your paper is that you and should support Lewis, because he is wet, and aren't we all?

A. S. BOLTHOUSE.

BRUTAL DRAMA.

Chicago, April 22.—I do not recall having seen in the Voice of the People any word of commendation for Mr. Orr's thoughtful cartoons of late. I feel that there must be others who appreciate his splendid work in depicting the brutal drama of our prohibition experiment.

THRUSH ENDS HIS ADVENTURE IN LA SALLE STREET

Woodland Visitor Leaves in the Night.

That part of La Salle street represented by the State Bank building at 120 South La Salle street had gone back to the humdrum of stocks and bonds yesterday. For the little brown thrush, which had been imprisoned in the deep court of the building, had flown away in the night.

Hundreds of stock exchange and brokerage office workers and visiting citizens, who had been worried over the plight of the thrush who had been trying for days to fly out of his "prison," turned again to their work after having joined in many futile attempts to free the bird. Even the help of the police and fire departments and the Humane Society of Illinois had been unavailing.

Since the woodland bird had flown into the rectangular court of the 23 story building Tuesday night many efforts had been made to lure him with bread crumbs and other food so that he could be caught and released from the court, out of which he seemed to be unable to fly because of its height. His frequent efforts to spiral to the open sky above were halted abruptly by a brick wall. The court was too small for his type of flying.

Last Seen Friday Night.

The bird was last seen at 6 p. m. Friday by S. W. Bray, superintendent of the building. It was then perched on the base of the skylight on a line with the fifth floor. At the request of an official of the A. G. Becker & Co., investment brokers, several windows opening on to the court were left open during the night.

Then employés of the building turned on electric lights in the effices on the seventh floor and opened several more windows facing on Monroe and La Salle streets. It was believed the thrush, attracted by the light, ventured into the offices and then flew to the street, and after dodging loop traffic beat a hasty retreat for the open spaces.

How Did Bird Escape?

There was some speculation among the workers in the building as to what floor the thrush had selected for his escape. The only means of escape beside the windows, they pointed out, was by a long series of hops from window ledge to window ledge until the roof had been reached. This was too great a task for such a bird, they contended.

WALES SLATED FOR GENERAL, ALSO ADMIRAL

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—It was understood today that the prince of Wales probably would receive promotion in both army and navy during this year.

There were reports that he would be gazetted a major general in the course of the next few months and possibly promoted to the rank of rear admiral.

The prince has been a full colonel for eleven years and is sixth on the seniority list for promotion. He is colonel in chief in several regiments, including the Welsh guards, and has gone through all grades of rank in the same way as any officer who receives promotion. In the navy the prince has held the rank of captain since July, 1919.

Stench Bomb Routs Staff in Loop Brokerage Office

A stench bomb was tossed into the offices of the Edward A. Pierce & Co., brokers, at 105 West Adams street, during the noon hour yesterday. Twenty-five clerks were routed to the outer corridors of the Bankers' building by the fumes. Customers had departed from the offices for the day, leaving only the office staff on duty when the bottle containing the fumes was shattered on the floor. The Pierce concern was one of several brokerage houses which were targets of stench bombs when the market collapsed last winter, and detectives believe a disgruntled customer was responsible for yesterday's attack.

FIGHT FOREST FIRES IN FOUR STATES; MANY BUILDINGS DESTROYED

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—Brush fires fanned by strong winds laid waste widespread areas of forest lands around New York City suburbs and in southern New Jersey and Delaware today.

One of the worst blazes, on Staten island, swept three square miles of the sparesly settled Roseville and Pleasant Plains sections, destroying twelve buildings and menacing 300 to 400 cottages.

In Suffolk county, Long Island, flames burning on a 20 mile front destroyed many buildings and taxed the combined efforts of fire departments from twenty-five or more villages.

More than 35,000 acres of valuable timber were destroyed in southern New Jersey and Delaware. In Sussex county, Delaware, one fire burned over some 25,000 acres.

Forests were ablaze also in sections of Maryland and Pennsylvania.

SLAYING BY DRY ACCIDENT, SAYS CORONER'S JURY

Dubuque, Ia., May 3.—[Special.]—The shooting of Edward Foht by Sheriff Joe Greer, Grant county, Wis., on a prohibition raid, was called accidental by a jury at Platteville, Wis., last night. Relatives of the victim, however, may ask that charges be filed.

The coroner's jury verdict follows:

"The said Edward Foht, while being pursued by Sheriff Greer as an assistant prohibition officer, was struck by a glancing bullet from Sheriff Greer's gun, fired in the air as a warning to said Edward Foht to surrender, on Bishops island, in Jamestown, Grant county, Wis., on April 24, 1930, about 8 o'clock a. m. Said Edward Foht died on April 28, 1930, at Finley hospital, Dubuque, Ia., from said gunshot wound.

"We further find that Mr. Greer fired two shots in the air, not aimed at said Edward Foht, while pursuing said Edward Foht and calling upon him to halt. The bullet from the second shot, striking a tree, glanced accidentally and hit Edward Foht's head, entering at an angle that was not a direct aim at Edward Foht."

RESCUE TWO MEN FROM THE TOP OF 130 FOOT STACK

Two workmen, marooned atop a 130 foot chimney stack for three hours at Archer avenue and Wallace street yesterday, were rescued by firemen who reached their dizzy perch with extensions ladders. The men, Edward J. Zinzer, 30 years old, and Joseph Pitra, 29, both of 3151 West 60th street, were none the worse for their experience, Zinzer hurrying away immediately to keep an overdue appointment with a girl friend.

The workmen, employed by the Charles A. Kuehn Chimney Building company, 7310 Stewart avenue, had ascended the inside of the stack to cut eight feet from the top of the chimney, which was faulty and had been ordered shortened. When their task was done they discovered that the bricks falling through the chimney had broken their ladders so that they could not descend.

Battalion Chief Thomas Scanlon of the Ninth battalion and members of hook and ladder company No. 4 went to the rescue.

VOTE BOARD SAYS IT'S HAPDICAPPED IN WAR ON FRAUD

Maguire Recounts Efforts to Stop Irregularities,

Efforts made by County Judge Jarecki and the board of election commissioners to obtain legislation which would prevent ballot frauds complained of in the report of the April grand jury on Friday, were discussed in a statement issued yesterday by Fred V. Maguire, chairman of the election board.

The grand jury reported having examined ballot boxes containing votes of the recent primary in precincts of the Forty-second ward, and said it had found that the ballots, when counted, indicated a much different result than was stated on the tally sheets. A continuance of the investigation by the May grand jury was recommended.

Election Board Statement.

Discussing this situation, the election commissioners' statement was in part as follows:

"It is well known that during at least 20 years last passed there have been certain 'plague spots' so far as elections and primaries are concerned — particularly in the Twentieth, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-seventh, and Forty-second wards. The records of the County court and of the election commissioners' office will show hundreds of investigations and prosecutions touching these districts.

"Because of the character of these neighborhoods, it is impossible to obtain judges and clerks of ability and proven character who are properly vouched for. Everything that the board of election commissioners can do is done to secure proper election officials in these precincts.

Bills Lost in Legislature.

"The board of election commissioners has sponsored bills in the legislature designed to permit the board to send in persons who are nonresidents of the particular precincts to act as judges and clerks of election in such precincts, but these bills have always failed of passage.

"Likewise the present board of election commissioners has unsuccessfully sought amendatory legislation in Springfield designed to take the counting of the ballots out of the hands of precinct officials and vest it in the board of election commissioners under unquestionably proper safeguards.

"At a recent session of the legislature, Judge Jarecki caused to be introduced into the legislature a bill to permit the board of election commissioners, acting as a canvassing board, to open the ballot boxes in any precinct where there was a suggestion of fraud in the count so as to declare the proper result, but this bill failed of passage.

Says Board's Power Is Limited.

"Under the law, as it is now, the board of election commissioners, although the official custodian of the ballot boxes and all other election records, possesses no such power and must make a canvass and declare the result based solely upon the tally sheets and statement of votes and evidence as to the proclamation actually made.

"A grand jury possesses more power than the election commissioners in this regard and may subpoena the sealed ballot boxes as was done by the April grand jury and break the seal and count the ballots. In the absence of such necessary remedial legislation all that the board of election commissioners can do is to investigate and vigilantly prosecute such cases of fraud and improper conduct as comes to their attention in the course of their duties and to cooperate, as they have done in the present and all other instances, with the state's attorney's office and the grand jury in an effort to apprehend violators of the primary election laws."

U. S. FACES LOSS OF 100 MILLIONS CANADIAN TRADE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., May 3.—The new Canadian tariff provisions, announced in parliament last Thursday, effect a field of United States imports the total valuation upon which was more than four hundred million dollars last year, according to an analysis of the budget by experts here. A round hundred million dollars remains the best available estimate of the total trade switch which the tariff changes will effect as between Canada and the United States and Canada and Great Britain.

SALUTE IS FATAL

LIEUT. HAROLD E. BROWN.

[Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

Mexico, Mo., May 3.—[Special.]—Funeral services were conducted today for Lieut. Harold E. "Bear" Brown, 27 years old, West Point graduate, and athlete, at the farm home of an uncle where he met his death in an airplane crash that occurred as he waved from the air to kinfolk while en route back to Selfridge field at Mount Clemens, Mich., from the war department aviation maneuvers in California.

The home of Robert M. Brown was filled to overflowing with friends and relatives. The Rev. S. G. Wood, Auxvasse Presbyterian minister, officiated.

At the request of Lieut. Brown's young widow, formerly Minerva Claire Grover, the remains were sent to East Orange, N. J., for burial.

Lieut. E. H. Beebe from the army air corps at Fort Riley arrived last night and made an investigation of the crash.

FRANCE TO BUILD CORSICA INTO 2D GIBRALTAR

Pushes Plans as Italy Builds Big Navy.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 3.—To offset the swarms of Italian submarines and cruisers, which the French see as threatening to cut off communications with French colonies in case of war, plans are being pushed to build Corsica into a second Gibraltar.

In the opinion of French naval strategists, Corsica today is the key to the western Mediterranean. The chunky little island is seen as an ideal base to either launch a deadly air offensive against the enemy or check an attack aimed at the French Riviera.

Would Fly Troops to France

It is also pointed out that, in case of war between France and Italy, Italian submarines could completely stop all attempts to transfer troops from Africa to France by way of the Mediterranean—as long as surface craft are depended on. The only way to avoid submarines in the Mediterranean, naval experts agree, would be to transport troops by plane and, for this purpose, Corsica is considered ideal as a mobilization base as the island is separated by easy water hops between France and Africa.

The present program is aimed to develop equally the offensive and defensive value of Corsica. On one hand the navy will establish a series of great air fields from which fighting planes could take off and attack Rome and Genoa and return within a few hours.

On the other hand, an elaborate system of defense is being worked out to prevent any enemy air and naval fleets from destroying the base. Stationary batteries will be installed at convenient points along the coast, and the whole coast line will be linked up with a system of littoral and interior highways. A large amount of mobile artillery will be kept in various centers and, in case of danger, will be rushed in to close any unprotected gap.

Guns on Mountain Peaks.

Because of the mountainous nature of the island it will be quite simple to work out an impregnable network of anti-aircraft artillery on mountain peaks.

The chief drawback to the plans is the fact that the Italians are already using the adjacent island of Sardinia in much the same way. Naval experts point out, however, that Sardinia has a much larger coastline and is harder to defend. They believe if the French can execute their plans for the fortification of Corsica fast enough the Italians will be forced to give up Sardinia as a base.

JILTED HUSBAND RENEWS HIS SUIT FOR A DIVORCE

Balm Money Gone, Wife Goes, Too, He Says.

Thomas N. Gonzales, a telephone engineer of 1519 Warren avenue, yesterday filed his second divorce bill within two years against Mrs. Ruby Green Gonzales, a nurse residing at the Clayton hotel. Gonzales charges that his wife returned to him after he had won a settlement in an alienation of affections suit brought after their separation, only to leave him a second time when the money was spent.

Gonzales, who is 32 years old, was married on July 11, 1927. His bride was 20 years old and a student nurse at the Michael Reese hospital. He had met her when he went to the hospital for a rest. They separated the following spring. When he began searching for evidence to support a divorce action he found a dairy, kept by his wife, which told of a relationship with Louis B. Olin, president of the Goldenrod Ice Cream company, Gonzales alleges.

Sues Olin for $250,000.

Gonzales started suit for divorce and also filed a $250,000 alienation of affections suit against Olin. He declared he had found evidence to substantiate the diary through private detectives. Olin, who is married and the father of two grown sons, charged that the suit was a blackmail plot, and obtained an investigation by the state's attorney's office.

The alienation suit was dropped last summer. Attorney Frank J. Link, representing Gonzales, said that his client received a settlement of $3,000. Mrs. Gonzales became reconciled to her husband early last January, according to the new divorce bill.

To celebrate the reunion Gonzales says that he spent the settlement on his wife in entertainment and gifts. When the sum was exhausted together with other savings his wife left him last April 26, he charges. He has started the second divorce action through Attorney Link.

Charges Wife with Cruelty.

The new bill amplifies charges of cruelty made in the first suit. Gonzales alleges that his wife refused to nurse him when he was seriously ill shortly after their reunion. The bill says that in July, 1928, he was put under a doctor's care because of cruelty on the part of his wife.

The bill also charges misconduct with two men named only as Leo and Max. Gonzales declares that his wife received a gift of Easter lilies from Max, accompanied with a card bearing the message, "To the sweetest girl I know."

REV. CADMUS DIES IN BERLIN AFTER OPERATION

The Rev. William E. Cadmus, 65 years old, for many years a figure in church and public life in Chicago, died yesterday in Berlin following an operation. He had been in Germany several years. For a time he was a member of the directorate of the American chamber of commerce in Berlin.

He was known here as a public speaker, having been active during the campaigns of Presidents Roosevelt and Taft. Once he was sued for libel when, in 1909, he attacked Charles Stubbles, a candidate for state's attorney, from the pulpit of the First Congregational church.

During the European war he attracted notice in Washington by attaching to an application for a passport a statement that he absolved the United States of any responsibility if harm should come to him from submarine warfare. Later, just before this country entered the war and returning Americans were having difficulty booking passage home from Europe, he sailed from Norway as a stowaway.

AND NOW SCIENCE RAISES RED PERIL FOR POLITICIANS

Sees Less Cancer in Day of Conservative Rule.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 3.—The mortality rate from cancer in any country diminishes or increases as the trend of political opinion swings to right or left. It is lowest under a monarchy and soars dizzily when Socialists or radical anticlericals come into power.

This is the highly original thesis of two learned French medical theorists, Drs. Moinson and Stephanopoli, who recently read a paper on the subject to the French Academy of Medicine.

Delve Back to 1876.

To demonstrate their theory the two eminent medicos constructed an elaborate chart covering the period of French history from 1876 to the present day. One curve on this chart represents the death rate from cancer, the other the trend of politics. The two graphs are found to parallel each other at every point.

For instance, rising steadily from the proclamation of the third republic the death rate reaches a peak in 1878, the year of sweeping victories for the anti-clericals in the elections, and then drops sharply in 1882 when the conservatives won out. In the same way the ascension to power of Georges Clemenceau in 1916 and of Raymond Poincaré in 1926 produced downward reactions, whereas every electoral gain of Communists and Socialists brought a sharp swing upward. On the whole, the figures appear very unfavorable for the third republic, for while the mortality rate hovered around 94 per 100,000 inhabitants during the third empire it has risen steadily until it is now 133 per 100,000.

Scientists Only Smile.

Publication of the chart has stirred up a storm of controversy here. Most of the scientists merely wag their beards and smile tolerantly, but the more radical left papers see in it a sinister royalist plot to influence the elections of 1932 by making the voters believe that if they cast their ballots for the radicals and radical Socialists they will increase the ravages of cancer.

Hursen Chapels World's Finest

Did you know that a tremendous number of funerals in Chicago are daily held at Hursen funeral chapels, instead of being conducted from the home?

Did you know that the sizes of some of these Hursen chapels, on the South, West, and North Sides, are sufficient to accommodate well over a thousand people?

Did you know that there are other smaller Hursen chapels in these same Hursen funeral-homes reserved for the private use of families who may prefer chapels of smaller size?

Hursen funeral chapels are located in each of the three Hursen funeral-homes in Chicago. For seating comfort, elegance of appointment, architecture and design, they exceed anything of the kind ever attempted in America.

The use of any one of these beautiful Hursen chapels is granted absolutely without charge of any kind whatever. The Hursen fleet of specially built Hursen-Lincoln automobiles and auto-hearses, driven by liveried drivers, make up the finest equipment ever seen in this country. The charge for their use is no greater than for less desirable equipment furnished elsewhere.

The charges for Hursen funerals are but a fraction of the charges usually made. It is this policy of supreme elegance and service at reasonable cost that has made Hursen's the greatest funeral establishment in America. So call Hursen of course!

CATHOLICS WILL HONOR MARTYRS THROWN TO LIONS

50,000 to Exalt Memory at Eucharistic Congress.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, May 3.—One thousand seven hundred years ago a Roman mob howled with glee as two women were thrown to the lions in the amphitheater of Carthage. Next week 50,000 pilgrims of the Roman Catholic church will assemble in the ruins of this famous amphitheater to exalt the memory of the martyrdom of these two women.

It will be one of the picturesque features of the thirtieth international Eucharistic congress, opening Wednesday, May 7, and concluding May 14.

The two Roman women were Perpetua, a young matron of aristocratic family, and her servant Fidelity. They had refused, as Christians, to burn incense before the image of Emperor Septimius Severus, which, in those days, was the equivalent of refusing to salute the flag.

Women Executed by Soldier.

Enmeshed in a net, they were thrown into the arena, according to church history, but the lions, who had already feasted on three slaves, refused to touch them. The women were carried from the arena and executed by a gladiator.

The vanguard of the Christian pilgrims which will include one papal legate, nine cardinals and 120 bishops, has already arrived in Tunis. This French protectorate was chosen for the scene of the Eucharistic congress so that each of the five geographical grand divisions of the Catholic church shall have witnessed one of these important assemblies.

Thousands of Americans will attend, some going direct on chartered ships, others stopping at Rome to visit Pope Pius XI.

Papal Legate Sails Tomorrow.

Alexis Cardinal Lepicier, papal legate, will sail from Naples Monday on a specially chartered Vatican ship, flying the pope's flag, made possible through the pope's restored status of independence by the Lateran pact.

The Christian pilgrims will be welcomed to Carthage, where three civilizations have arisen and perished, by the Mussulmans and Israelites, who will receive them in a friendly, hospitable fashion. The bey of Tunis is president of the committee of honor, and one rich Israelite land owner has turned over a large tract of land for use by the congress hospitality committee. The sum of $273,700 has also been subscribed for the congress by contributors from all races. This has served to set at rest the row raised by the radicals in the French parliament, who objected to the Christian congress being held in Mussulman Tunis on the ground that it might offend the natives.

The theme of this year's congress will be an erudite discussion of the Eucharistic dogma as it was established by St. Augustine and the African fathers of the church. Committees will be formed to carry on the discussions in several languages. Various aspects of the Eucharistic dogma will be discussed by Italian prelate orators. One orator will discuss the "Eucharist as a spiritual bond between the emigrant and his native country."

Recall History of Carthage.

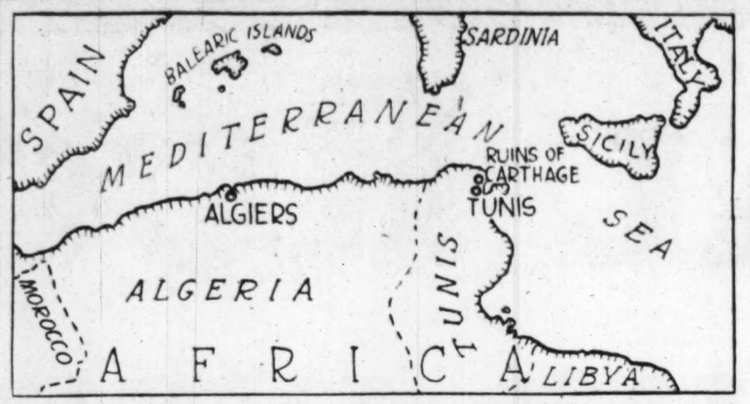
In lay history Carthage evokes the memories of the unhappy Dido, Scipio, Cato, and Jugurtha. Churchmen also consider Carthage as the mother of the African church. It was there that St. Augustine and the early church stalwarts established the dogmas of the western church as distinct from the oriental church, where they vanquished the Donatists and fixed the unity of Roman Catholicism.

At the request of Pope Pius in his recent encyclical, special attention will be given by the congress to the life and works of St. Augustine, whose fifteenth centenary also falls this year.

BANK CASHIER DIES.

LaSalle, Ill., May 3.—[Special.]—Joseph J. Linning, cashier of the Peru National bank for many years, died last night following a heart attack suffered several hours earlier.

CELEBRATE PEACE AND WAR



With 50,000 Catholic pilgrims on their way to Tunis and Carthage for the Eucharistic congress, the Mediterranean is the scene of both peace and war fêtes.

Algeria today is celebrating its conquest by France 100 years ago in the city of Algiers. On May 10 President Doumergue of France will review the French fleet in the greatest naval maneuvers ever held in the Mediterranean just off "the boot of Italy."

KING OF SPANISH BULL RING LAUDS YANK MATADOR

JEREZ, Spain, May 3.—(AP)—Sydney Franklin, the Brooklyn matador who was gored and dangerously injured by an angry bull two months ago, entered the arena again today and smilingly killed two raging bulls.

So greatly did he arouse the admiration of the spectators that he received tribute from Spain's king of bull fighters, Juan Belmonte, who, now retired, sat at the ringside. As the Brooklyn matador killed the first bull he "dedicated" it to Señor Belmonte, and the veteran of the "blood and sand" arena leaped to his feet to applaud the American's accomplishment. Then he threw a present, presumably a purse, to the American and the excited fans shouted until they were hoarse.

With his second bull, a fierce black beast, Mr. Franklin was really in peril again. In the preliminaries the bull gored one of his bandilleros, though not seriously. But the animal was so vicious that the audience was tense when the American came out with his cape. However, he killed the bull, though it took three thrusts with his sword.

GERMANY FREES SHIP OWNERS IN VENEZUELA RAID

HAMBURG, Germany, May 3.—(AP)—A verdict of acquittal today was returned in the case of three owners of the German ship Falke accused of abduction of German sailors in connection with the landing of a small insurgent army on the Venezuelan coast last July.

The defendants, Felix Prenzlau, Felix Kramarsky, and Capt. Ernst Zipplitt, had maintained that their course was justifiable.

The Falke, a merchantman, landed at Willemstad, Curacao, and was virtually in possession of that city until its departure with a large number of Venezuelan revolutionaries. The rebels met defeat soon afterward at the hands of Venezuelan federal troops. The crew of the Falke said they assisted under duress.

British Audience Goes Wild Over U. S. Negro Singers

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—A staid British audience in Queen's hall today forgot its somber traditions and, with stamping of feet and loud cheers, voiced its enthusiastic approval of the first formal European concert of the Hampton institute choir of 40 Negro boys and girls. So great was the emotion of the audience that the youthful singers, under the leadership of Dr. Nathaniel Dett, were held on the stage more than 45 minutes after the conclusion of their regular program.

Charges Mate Spent Her $20,000, Then Went Away

Mrs. Julia Caroline Yeckel, 30 years old, 1500 North La Salle street, yesterday filed a bill for divorce in the Superior court against Jacob J. Yeckel, mining promoter. The bill, drawn by Attorney Irving Eisenman, charges that the husband deserted his wife after he spent her inheritance of $20,000 in his mining plans. The Yeckels were married on Nov. 29, 1921, and separated on Jan. 25, 1927.

AUSTRIA FASCISTS AND SOCIALISTS PLAN RIOTS TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, May 3.—Austria's unofficial class war between the Socialists and Fascists threatened to break out again tonight after a long spell of quiet when advance contingents of the Red schutzbund and of the conservative heimwehr, the well trained private armies maintained by both sides, arrived at the industrial town of St. Polten, 35 miles outside of this city, for a big demonstration tomorrow.

The Socialists sent a regiment of 7,000 men from this city on a dozen special "troop trains."

Vienna railway stations resembled the wartime capital tonight. The government has sent 700 special Viennese police and a battalion of infantrymen from the regular army to halt outbreaks.

Bishop Griswold became seriously ill after his election, and is now recovered sufficiently to take up the leadership of the diocese again.

ALGERIA HAILS FRENCH VICTORY 100 YEARS AGO

President Doumergue on Way to Fete.

TOULON, France, May 3.—[U.P.]—President Gaston Doumergue departed today for the French Algerian centenary ceremonies, leaving Toulon aboard the cruiser Duquesne, which was expected to shatter all speed records en route to Algiers.

The officers of the Duquesne expected to land the president on the opposite side of the Mediterranean in less than 15 hours, compared to the normal time of 26 hours for passenger ships.

President Doumergue will inaugurate the formal celebration of 100 years of French conquest by presiding at ceremonies in Algiers—"the granary of Europe"—brought under the rule of Louis Philippe a century ago.

Will Review French Navy.

The president also will review the French navy, which is gathering off the "heel of the Italian boot" for the greatest naval maneuvers ever witnessed in the Mediterranean. The review will be held May 10.

"France's navy has been and always will be one of the great forces of the country," said the president in speaking at a banquet today before sailing. "Before the world war the navy was not a menace to any one and it will not be in the future, but tomorrow as in the past the navy will continue to show our colors on all seas which bathe the coasts of our grand colonial empire. The navy will thus give assurance to inhabitants of distant colonies and enable them to know that France is ready to protect them."

President Doumergue will arrive at Algiers about 5 a. m. and go immediately to the summer palace of Gov. Gen. Pierre Bordes on the heights overlooking the bay.

Sahara Tribesmen Arrive.

ALGIERS, May 3.—[U. P.]—Tribesmen of the Sahara, including the rarely seen Meharists from the Toggar region, were encamped with their slim racing camels on the Hussein Bey maneuver grounds outside Algiers tonight, prepared to participate in a native fête tomorrow in the presence of President Doumergue. The last group of 1,000 Meharists arrived this evening after riding 2,000 miles over the Sahara on camels. Many of them had never seen a European before they left the trip northward.

The native army will take the place of honor at the fête, where pure blooded Arabian horses, and racing camels will compete in wild rides.

Dancing Girls Entertain.

The Ouled Nail tribe, from the region of Touggourt, famous for its beautiful dancing girls, sent its finest riders to participate and the entertainers, who accompanied them, danced all last night around the campfires on the hills above Algiers.

Warriors of the Aouled Sidi and Cheik Harzan tribes also were encamped on the ground. They were the volunteers who aided the French in cleaning out the rebel Riff and the southern Oran region. The Meharists were perhaps the strangest visitors, the men as well as the women keeping their faces hidden behind blue veils.

President Doumergue will be the highest chief and will be presented with a white, full blooded Arabian stallion in the names of the four tribal chiefs present. The gift of a stallion is considered the greatest an Arab can offer as a token of loyalty.

MAY 25 DESIGNATED RURAL LIFE SUNDAY BY GOV. EMMERSON

Springfield, Ill., May 3.—[Special.]—Gov. Louis L. Emmerson today endorsed the second observance of "Rural Life Sunday" on May 25, urging pastors of all denominations to call attention to the special needs of the rural peoples of the world during their services on that day.

It has long been the custom for both Catholic and Protestant groups to offer a prayer for the success of the harvest on the fifth Sunday after Easter. But the observance was not given the title "Rural Life Sunday" until 1919 when that designation was applied to it by the National Association of Agricultural Missions. Since that time the various councils of the Protestant and Catholic churches have done much to further the observance of the day.

"BIG FASCIST GERMAN PLOT" PROVES FIZZLE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 3.—The discovery of a huge Fascist plot was announced by the Berlin press today. They said a vast arms and munitions cache has been unearthed by police on the estate of the German Marine Sport club. Upon inquiry the police declared that one rifle, ten revolvers, five hand grenades, two sidearms, 416 cartridges and some other ammunition was seized.

The incongruity between the size of the cache and the howl of indignation in the press against the "Fascist plotters," illustrates the tense nervousness and fear that is felt by the German public over the danger of even small riots.

The president of the German Marine Sport club is Dr. Carl Luebbens, a high official in the patent office and former member of Capt. Ehrhardt's organization, Viking, which was disbanded by police on charges of plotting against the government.

Liquid Oxygen Explosion Kills 4 in Rock Quarry

Upton, Ky., May 3.—(AP)—Premature explosion of liquid oxygen used in blasting a rock quarry killed four men here late today and injured a half a dozen others. Reginald D. Lancer, 28, superintendent of the Oxygen Products corporation plant at Ilsley, Ky., was among those who lost their lives. The others killed were given as Robert and Charles Hornback, brothers, and George McDougal, a Negro.

French President Pardons 9 Facing Death for Mutiny

PARIS, May 3.—(AP)—Nine prisoners condemned to death in connection with disorders in Indo-China during February were pardoned today by President Doumergue. Thirty-nine men originally were sentenced to die for their participation in bomb outrages, mutiny and other disorders. Officials attributed the crimes to communist agitation.

BISHOP'S 'ANGEL' IN CAMPAIGN TO BE QUESTIONED

Senators Summon Donor of $65,000 Fund.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—One phase of the political and financial activities of Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist church, South, will be heard Tuesday by the senate lobby committee when E. C. Jameson, wealthy New York insurance man, appears to tell what he knows of the $65,300 fund entrusted to the bishop during the 1928 presidential campaign.

Jameson, largest contributor to the Hoover campaign fund with a gift of nearly $173,000, will be the first witness in the committee's long promised probe of church dry lobbies. His testimony is scheduled for the eve of Cannon's appearance before the committee on the Episcopacy of the general conference of the Southern Methodist church in Dallas, Tex., next week to defend himself against charges which may lead to his unfrocking.

McBride's Appearance Delayed.

To make way for Jameson, the appearance of F. Scott McBride, legislative superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, originally set for Tuesday has been postponed until Thursday, Senator T. H. Caraway [Dem., Ark.], chairman of the committee, announced today. Meanwhile the committee's investigators are at work on the books and records of both the league and the Methodist board of temperance and social service headed by Cannon.

Cannon, according to evidence laid before the senators by Representative G. H. Tinkham [Rep., Mass.], violated the federal corrupt practices law in reporting only $17,000 of the $65,300 allotted to him out of Jameson's contribution for the anti-Smith fight in Virginia and other southern states.

The fact that any of Jameson's contribution went to Cannon was not known until the senatorial committee investigating expenditures in the 1928 campaign called up the New York insurance man for details of his contribution. The statement submitted in Jameson's behalf showed that Cannon received $65,300.

Discrepancy Discovered.

Several months after the election the charge of Dr. Rembert G. Smith, a Washington, Ga., Methodist pastor, that Cannon had diverted his church board's funds to finance the anti-Smith campaign attracted attention to the reports filed by the bishop under the federal corrupt practices act as chairman of the anti-Smith committee in Virginia.

Then it was discovered that Cannon had reported the receipt of only $17,000 from Jameson and Representative Tinkham demanded a house committee investigation to determine what became of the $48,300 balance of the fund. Failing to secure a house investigation, Tinkham demanded action against Cannon by the department of justice and, that refused, appealed to the senate lobby committee.

Books to Be Examined.

Following Tinkham's presentation of the evidence against Cannon as part of a case against church lobbies the committee announced that it would not only call Cannon but also will compel the production of his books and papers as well as those of the board of temperance and social service for the last six years.

Well known clergymen including several of Cannon's fellow bishops and prominent Methodist laymen will join with Dr. Smith, it is understood, in charges before the Dallas general conference that Cannon's Wall street stock speculations through a notorious bucket shop, his alleged war time food hoarding, and his political activities have brought the whole church into disrepute and dangerously near a split which may wreck it.

CHURCH TO STUDY CANNON'S PART IN POLITICS, STOCKS

Dallas, Tex., May 3.—[Special.]—Women, wine and Wall street will be three of the several problems to face the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, when it convenes here May 7 for its quadrennial session of three weeks.

The wine and Wall street difficulties will center around Bishop James Cannon's activities. There has been no disguising of severe criticism of the bishop by many churchmen for his connection with politics and with the stock market. The wine problem will arise with presentation of charges against members of the episcopacy for political activities in 1928.

However, despite the desire of a large faction to discipline members for political activity, Bishop Cannon will no doubt be safe from censure for his prohibition interests. As chairmain of the board of temperance, he is the church's constituted leader in the fight for prohibition. His staunch resistance of bitter attacks from anti-prohibition forces will be a point in his favor.

By the bishop's own request, the committee on episcopacy will investigate his connection with the stock market, which aroused much comment in 1929. In its review of all the bishops, the committee will also review the work and character of Bishop Cannon.

The prejudice against women in the pulpit will become an issue for the first time since the feminine sex was granted laity rights and admitted to the general conference with a voice and a vote. There will be twenty-four women lay delegates at the conference.

DIVORCE IS WON BY LADY HEATH IN RENO COURT

British Aviatrix Makes Charge of Cruelty.

Reno, Nev., May 3.—(AP)—Lady Mary Heath, famous British aviatrix was granted a divorce here today from Sir James Heath, wealthy British iron master, on grounds of extreme cruelty.

The divorce was granted by default, no answer having been filed by Sir James, who was charged in the complaint with being extremely penurious and refusing to pay his wife's bills, although of great wealth.

Would "Deny Paternity."

Lady Heath alleged that her husband told her he would deny the paternity of any child resulting from the marriage because he did not want to bear the expense of rearing children.

The divorce action was filed last January, Lady Heath coming here to establish residence and recuperate from dangerous injuries she received Aug. 29, 1929, when her plane crashed through the roof of a factory at Cleveland, O.

Sir James is 75 years old and Lady Heath is 31. They were married in London Oct. 13, 1927.

About a year later Sir James published an announcement that he would not be responsible for his wife's debts. He charged her with extravagance and in several suits brought against him by tradesmen from whom Lady Heath made purchases contended she had no right to pledge his credit.

Flew Length of Africa.

Lady Heath first gained note as an aviatrix in flying from Cape Town, South Africa, to London in 1928. She was the first person to make a solo flight across the length of Africa.

Knowledge that Lady Heath's divorce action was to come up today attracted an audience to the courtroom of Judge Thomas F. Moran, but the crowd was disappointed, for the evidence was taken in the judge's chambers. Since coming to the United States Lady Heath has applied for citizenship in this country.

COUNTY ASKS STATE TO PAY BILLS THAT ITS ACTS NECESSITATE

Chester, Ill., May 3.—(AP)—Contending that the county income is not sufficient to meet the regular expenses, most of which the legislature is accused of imposing without providing the necessary means for the collection of sufficient taxes to meet obligations, Randolph county commissioners in session here adopted a resolution appealing to state representatives to aid in the passage of legislation that will tend to relieve the financial crisis.

The resolution urged "That the state of Illinois, after proper legislation is enacted, assume the financial burdens incident to the payment of mothers' pensions, blind pensions, probationers' office salaries, state's attorney salary, county nurse's salary, county veterinary's salary, as these functions are under state control and could undoubtedly be more economically and efficiently conducted by the state."

DENMARK'S DRYS TOSS UP SPONGE TO ENFORCE LAW

Urge Prohibition by Education Instead.

BY JOHN AHL-NIELSEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, May 3.—Prohibition by education instead of by law is the new aim of Danish drys, who, after years of agitation for dry laws, have finally come to the conclusion that prohibition legislation cannot be enforced.

The teetotalers came to this conclusion after a committee of their members had made an exhaustive study of conditions in the United States, Finland, and Norway. The committee's laconic report upon returning to Denmark was, "Our age is not sufficiently developed to obey prohibition laws."

Organized in 1840.

Up to the present, however, a long and determined fight has been carried on by the drys They were first organized in 1840, when Robert Baird, the American prohibition advocate, visited the country and supervised the establishment of the first Danish teetotalers' association. Since then, dry organizations have sprung up all over the country, and their combined aim was to drain the country of all alcoholic drinks.

Aiding their cause to some extent were the constantly increasing taxes on alcohol. which resulted in decreased consumption. This factor, however, proved a boomerang, for there was so little misuse of alcohol, due to the high prices, that there appeared no vital reason for enacting legislation for total prohibition.

Sadder but Wiser.

Despite this, however, the drys continued to agitate for a national referendum on the subject. The visit to the United States proved the straw that broke the camel's back. The committee returned to Denmark sadder but wiser and told their countrymen that prohibition was not the right way to dry up Denmark. The drys have now decided to concentrate all their energies on educating the young generation on the evils of alcohol, and they hope in this way to destroy eventually all demand for alcoholic beverages.

Banking Commissioner Acquitted in Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., May 3.—(AP)—O. S. Denny, state banking commissioner, was cleared today of charges of having failed to take over two state banks which he was alleged to have known were insolvent. Peremptory instructions for his acquittal by the jury were issued by Circuit Judge McGregor on motion of the defense, which offered no evidence, but moved dismissal as the commonwealth closed its case.

Banker Given 55 Years in Prison for Failures

Lincoln, Neb., May 3.—(AP)—A 64 year old Nebraska banker, F. J. Kirchman Sr., who started business at Wahoo, Neb., 43 years ago with practically nothing, was sentenced to prison today for 55 years and fined $11,000 for misappropriation of funds.

He was the president of six Saunders county banks that failed within a week.

ROB EXPRESS COMPANY OF $34,000.

Sensational Cars!
IF OUR claims for the new Nash "400's" seem startling, you will find it is not because we have exaggerated, but because the cars themselves are so remarkable! ¶ You probably never have driven faster than 25 or 30 miles an hour in second gear—you may not believe it can or should be done. But the Nash Twin-Ignition Eight will do 55 in second, smoothly, instantly, effortlessly. ¶ It may also stretch your imagination to conceive of a car that can go from 0 to 80 miles an hour in three blocks. But the Twin-Ignition Eight can show you that kind of a getaway any time you are ready to see it. ¶ The Twin-Ignition Eight also has the easiest steering the motor car industry has produced, and few, if any, of today's cars can match it in hill climbing or in ease of riding. ¶ Here is the leader of leaders, the eight of all eights. ¶ There are 30 Nash "400" models in all—both sixes and eights—sedans, coupes, victorias, landaulets, convertibles, roadsters and phaetons—priced from $935 to $2385 f. o. b. the factory.

IT'S WISE TO CHOOSE A SIX

A demonstration tells you why it's wise to choose a six

In the great low-price field, old ideas of motor car value have undergone a radical change during the past eighteen months. The Six has swept into spectacular popularity. Everywhere buyers are agreeing "It's wise to choose a Six." And if you want to know why—get a demonstration of the Chevrolet Six and learn what an amazing difference two more cylinders make!

The Chevrolet Six is always smooth. The very nature of six-cylinder design is such that it must be smoother. When you idle the motor—drive fast in second—or travel for hours at top speed—the power flows easily and evenly at all times. There is no tremor in the steering wheel—no rattle in the floor boards—no annoying rumble in the body. As a result, everyone in the car—passengers and driver alike—enjoys a pleasant, comfortable, more restful ride.

And this six-cylinder smoothness does more than increase the enjoyment of motoring. It protects the entire chassis from the destructive effect of continuous vibration. As a result, the whole car lasts longer—upkeep costs are reduced—and resale value is increased.

Developing 50 horsepower, the Chevrolet motor is a marvel of flexibility and hill climbing capacity. When driving slowly in high gear, you can step on the accelerator and dart away without lugging or "loading." Needless gear shifting is avoided. And on the steepest hill, there is a reserve of power more than equal to every need.

Entirely aside from these advantages based on six-cylinder engine design, a demonstration reveals many other reasons why it's wise to choose a Chevrolet Six.

Chevrolet offers the smartness and luxury of beautiful bodies by Fisher—tastefully upholstered, completely appointed, and built of hardwood and steel, the finest type of body construction known.

Chevrolet's modern spring design assures comfort and security wherever you drive. There is no alarming feeling of sway when curves are taken at high speed, no jouncing or bucking when the roads are rough—because the long Chevrolet frame is supported at all four corners on four semi-elliptic springs, set in the direction of car travel. And their rebound action is controlled by four Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers—assuring perfect comfort all the time.

Completely enclosed, weather-proof, four-wheel brakes give definite assurance of quiet, positive, effortless braking control.

It will take only a few minutes to confirm all these reasons why it is wise to choose a Chevrolet Six. So come in today. Get behind the wheel—and learn the facts for yourself.

And, as you do, remember this one thing: The Chevrolet Six is just as economical as any car you can buy. It costs no more for gas and oil. It costs no more for tires. It costs no more for service. It is priced as low as $495 at the Flint factory. And it can be purchased for a very small down payment with unusually easy terms.

SIGNING OF WAR DEBT PACT ENDS BALKAN RANCOR

Hungary Renounces Claim to Former Territory.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, May 3.—The prospects for peace and tranquillity in central Europe and the Balkans appears brighter than it has at any time since the breakup of the Hapsburg empire. This is as a result of the signing in Paris last Monday of an agreement fixing definitely the eastern reparations.

The accord settles, after years of bickering, which often threatened to break out into war, both the question of Hungarian reparations and that more troublesome one of remuneration for Hungarian occupants and other Hungarian nationals dispossesed of their estates by agrarian reforms carried out in Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia.

Both Sides Satisfied.

Both sides appear to be satisfied, if their delegates, who returned home this week, are to be believed. And that in itself is an unusual situation among the continually quarrelling central European countries.

Hungary, under the agreement, is to pay in reparations $2,100,000 annually until 1943. From then until 1966, she increases her yearly payment to $2,600,000.

In return, an agrarian fund, divided into two sections, "A" and "B," will be set up to pay dispossessed Hungarian landowners on the basis of awards to each individual which will be the case fixed by mixed arbitral tribunals.

How Money Is to Be Paid.

Fund "A" will be furnished mostly by Great Britain, France and Italy, although Czecho-Slovakia will pay in $8,000,000, Jugo-Slavia $5,000,000, and Rumania $3,000,000. The total will be $42,000,000. This fund will be provided for the payment of Hungarian land owners to whom the mixed tribunal makes awards.

Fund "B," consisting of $20,000,000, which will be entirely subscribed by Great Britain, France and Italy, will be used to aid the little entente nations in settling payments which the mixed tribunal may exact from them.

Thus is settled the last and worst hangover of the war in eastern Europe.

By signing the agreement, Hungary renounces, at least for the present, any intention to regain part of the former territory which the Trianon treaty took from her and the reason for the little entente military alliance of Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, and Czecho-Slovakia to keep Hungary within her present frontiers also disappears.

When Mussolini's Daughter Wed

PREFER PRISON TO LIFE OUTSIDE WITHOUT DANCES

Detroit, Mich., May 3.—[Special.]—Three men asked jail sentences rather than probation which would bar them from poolrooms and dances for three years, but were denied imprisonment in Federal Judge Edward J. Moinet's court today.

Their request was made after Edward O'Donnell, 22 years old, had asked not to be put on probation and been given a fine of $350 or 30 days in jail.

"The only places you can have any fun in Wyandotte, where I live, are poolrooms and dance halls," O'Donnell said. "If it's all the same, I'd like to get sentenced now."

"Very well," said Judge Moinet.

But when the three others who were caught with O'Donnell in a boat loaded with beer last August made similar requests, the judge refused.

"They'll have it whether they want it or not," he declared. "Not only will they be on probation, but I'll continue their bonds of $2,000 each during the full probation period. You may list them, Mr. Beamer."

MISS STRAIGHT IS MARRIED TO ELMER STEVENS

The marriage of Miss Harriet Straight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Straight of Bartlesville, Okla., to Elmer T. Stevens of Chicago took place at 8:30 o'clock last night at the Presbyterian church in Bartlesville. Miss Lois Straight was her sister's only attendant and Col. Noble Brandon Judah was best man for Mr. Stevens. A reception at the residence of the bride's parents followed the ceremony.

Chicagoans who attended the wedding included Col. and Mrs. Judah, Mrs. Clyde G. Stevens and her daughter, Miss Jean Stevens; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Stevens, Dr. and Mrs. Anson Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Sheldon, Mrs. Alvar Sutter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Gifford, Stephen L. Tompkins, and Mrs. James W. Moulding.

STATE BUILDINGS FOR WARDS WILL BE READY SOON

$5,200,000 Program Is Under Way in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., May 3.—[Special.]—All of the construction provided for by the $5,200,000 appropriated by the last legislature to relieve overcrowded conditions at the states penal and charitable institutions is under contract, and twenty-five buildings are nearing completion, Director Rodney H. Brandon of the department of welfare and State Architect C. Herrick Hammond reported to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson today.

The new buildings are fireproof and are equipped with the latest fire prevention utilities. Most of them are only one story in height, thus conforming with the newest thought in construction designed for housing public wards.

Cell Houses Included.

Within a few months, the buildings under construction will be ready for occupancy. The utility groups, which will house the service plants for the new buildings, remain to be completed, but will not delay the opening of the new structures. Through this new construction, which includes three cell houses, one at Joliet, one at Chester and one at Pontiac, there will be provided quarters for more than 5,000 insane, feebleminded, charitable and penal charges of the state.

Included in the new structures is one entirely new institution, the state reformatory for women, at Dwight, which probably will be opened this month. The money for this institution came from a separate appropriation.

New Hospital Included.

Also the construction program of the Emmerson administration will make available for use the new state hospital at Manteno, in the construction of which, according to the report of Director Brandon and State Architect Hammond, approximately $3,000,000 has been expended to date. When the institution is opened the latter part of this year, it will accommodate 2,000 patients and as the need arises it can be enlarged. It was planned for housing 6,000 patients ultimately.

In addition to the $5,200,000, the legislature, at the instance of the American Legion, also appropriated $318,000 for new buildings at the Illinois Soldiers home, and the Illinois Soldiers orphans home, and for hospitals for veterans at the Elgin and Jacksonville state asylums.

In keeping with Gov. Emmerson's policy of having the state "pay as it goes," the cost of this new construction made necessary by the woefully crowded conditions in its penal and charitable institutions, is being paid out of general revenue.

$13,792,618 ESTATE OF J. D. SPRECKELS IS BEING DISTRIBUTED

San Diego, Cal., May 3.—(AP)—Final distribution of the estate of the late John D. Spreckels, California capitalist, who died June 8, 1926, was ordered here today by Superior Judge Andrews. The market value of the estate had been fixed by inheritance tax appraisers as $13,792,618. The amounts due the heirs were given as follows:

Mrs. Grace Hamilton, daughter, $2,792,652; Mrs. Lily Weigforth, daughter, $3,790,043; Claus Spreckels, son, $2,753,682; Marie Spreckels Elizalde, granddaughter, $1,256,920; Adolph B. Spreckels, grandson, $1,256,920; John D. Spreckels III, grandson, $1,257,293; Geraldine Ann Spreckels, granddaughter, $1,263,708.

ASKS BRIDEWELL DICKER BETWEEN COUNTY AND CITY

The board of inspectors of the Bridewell and James Curran, superintendent, were notified yesterday by V. A. Petterson, deputy city controller, that they might be personally responsible for the retention of county prisoners in the House of Correction. In a letter Petterson informed the board of the city ordinance, passed on Jan. 5, 1929, prohibiting the acceptance of county prisoners.

The order was passed by the council after negotiations with the county board for a contract to board and house county prisoners at the Bridewell had been broken off. Members of the council refused to accept the contract, as no provision was made by the county to pay its past board bill of over $2,000,000. Attorney Hayden Bell, representing the county board, called upon James W. Breen, first assistant corporation counsel, yesterday and urged that the council and the county board draw up a contract.

Mr. Breen did not believe the Bridewell inspectors or Curran could be held personally responsible for the county prisoners. He said the prisoners had been committed there by judges of the Municipal court and that the Bridewell had to accept them.

Rumania Seizes 3 Officers as Suspected Russian Spies

KISHENEV, Bessarabia, Rumania, May 3.—(AP)—Authorities here today arrested Lieut. Vintillenko of Hermanstadt, Lieut. Farnon of Galatz, and Lieut. Mareina of Coga, suspected of espionage on behalf of soviet Russia. More arrests are expected.

COMMERCE CHAMBER INSISTS IT DESIRES TO ASSIST FARMERS

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States wants to be helpful to agriculture, despite its criticism of the federal farm board's policies, William Butterworth of Moline, Ill., its president, asserted today. Mr. Butterworth, on the authority of the board of directors of the chamber, sought to clarify the attitude of organized business.

"The chamber does not want to be understood as being opposed to the interest and purposes of improving the agricultural marketing system," he said.

"The discussions leading up to the resolution on the agricultural marketing act and its intent were directed largely against one or two sections of the act.

"It was recognized that the balance of the act contains many constructive features of assistance to agriculture.

"Moreover it is expressly stated in the resolution that the actions of the farm board are considered the outgrowth of the national business situation, and the protest of the chamber was directed against any permanent policy of the government in the employment of public funds for the purpose of participating in business in competition with established agencies.

"The resolution was directed to the development of conferences, with a view to the consideration of and inquiry into constructive alternatives that might be developed with the aid of agriculture."

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime (no matter the size of the rupture), and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil.

"The Spermatic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patents No. 747247, No. 1237709 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument method or operation and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations." See Booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure." "If you want done what the rest cannot do—see Seeley."

CHINA ATTACKS REBELS IN NORTH WITH SKY BOMBS

Uses War Planes Bought in United States.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, May 3. — The new bombing planes, which the Nationalist government recently purchased from American manufacturers, went into action against the northern rebels yesterday. Two bombers attacked the northern headquarters in the town of Suchowfu, in northern Kiangsu, and while inspecting the border between Shantung and Chihli provinces they bombed the headquarters of Gen. Shi Yu-shan, a subordinate of Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang.

They also bombed and destroyed the pontoon bridges which the northern forces have constructed across the Yellow river in the vicinity of Tasochow, in western Shantung.

Warn of Bomb Attacks.

The government also sent other bombing squadrons along the Tientsin and Pukow railway in northern Shantung, which yesterday distributed literature among the northern soldiers, offering them immunity in event they desert the northern leaders and join the government. The leaflets also warned the villagers of impending bomb attacks.

The government has concentrated its troops heavily in western Shantung and southern Honon for the purpose of blocking the advance of Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang's troops.

T. V. Soong, Nationalist finance minister, in a statement to the press tonight, denounced the northern leader Yen Hsi-shan's action in seizing the customs revenues at Tientsin, as well as the salt tax revenues from the northern provinces. He said Gen. Yen's action has endangered the security of domestic and foreign loans, causing an irreparable blow to the large body of Chinese investors in government securities.

Report Kidnaped Priests Alive.

BELFAST, North Ireland, May 3.—(P)—The Irish priests, James Linehan and P. F. Laffan, who were captured by bandits at Sientaochenen, are alive and being treated well, said a cablegram received today from Father Quinlan, attached to the Chinese mission at Huan Yang. The cable added that hopes were held for their early release. Previous Shanghai reports had said they were murdered.

U. S. Sailors End Fight.

SWATOW, China, May 3.—(AP)—An armed guard from the American destroyer Borie was forced to settle a dispute between dock coolies and members of the crew of the American freighter Golden Peak here today. The steam requested aid when the coolies attempted to storm the ship. The naval guard quickly restored order. One seaman of the Golden Peak was beaten and taken to a hospital.

Indiana Will Appeal Chain Store Tax Ruling

Indianapolis, Ind., May 3.—[Special]—The Indiana attorney general's office announced here today it is preparing to appeal immediately the decision of the United States Circuit court here declaring unconstitutional the Indiana chain store tax law. The law, passed by the 1929 state legislature, provides for a sliding scale of licensing for all retail stores.

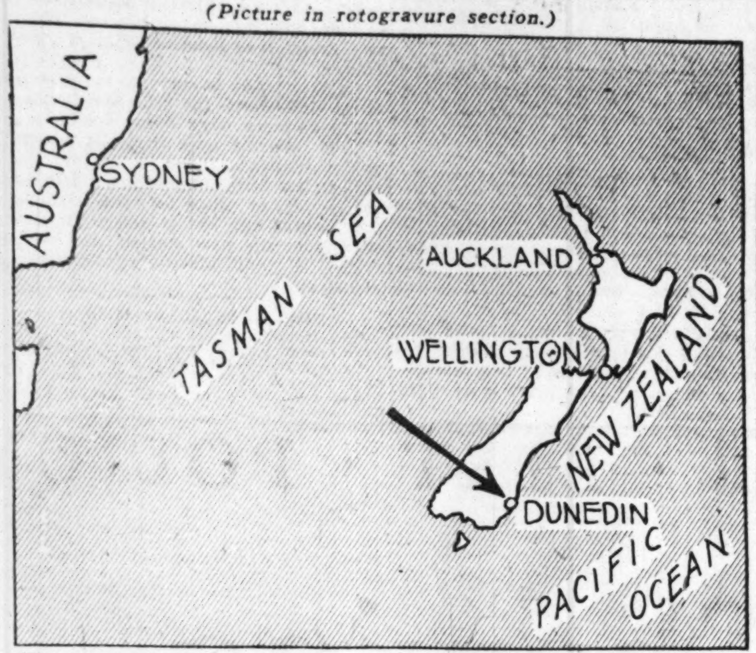
FROM DUNEDIN, NEW ZEALAND

(Picture in rotogravure section.)



This missive is unusually interesting in that it came from a member of the party of Commander Richard E. Byrd, the first man in history to fly across both of the earth's poles. It was mailed at Dunedin, New Zealand, by G. H. Brown, master of Byrd's ship, the Eleanor Bolling. The explorers arrived there last February on their way home, after having traversed the antarctic.

Dunedin is at the head of a splendid bay on the east side of South island. The principal commercial place of the colony, it is handsomely built. Its population is about 100,000.

New Zealand, British colony in the South Pacific ocean, consists of a chain of islands, embracing two large ones, North and South islands.

CHURCH LEADERS ADMIT CRISIS IN ORIENT MISSIONS

Plans for Investigation by Board Revealed.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Chicago churchmen admit that a serious crisis exists in Christian missionary work in China as suggested by recent dispatches from Shanghai. The dispatches tell of a meeting of missionary leaders at Shanghai at which it was questioned whether the $12,000,000 spent annually by American churches toward the work of Christianizing China is getting proper results.

The Shanghai meeting asked for the appointment of an American committee to go to China for a thorough study of the situation. Cable dispatches say missionary leadership is being brought into question, involving denominational competitions and cross-purposes in sectarian efforts.

According to the Rev. Dr. James Madison Stifler, pastor of the First Baptist church, Evanston, and a trustee of the University of Chicago, such an investigation commission of American churchmen is now being formed. Among its members is John R. Mott, noted religious leader. The commission plans a two year investigation in China and will bring back reports.

Cites Sectarian Discord.

The Evanston pastor pointed to the many kinds of American Christianity offered to China. He declared that the Chinese people are bewildered by the many brands of religion being pushed at them by American money. He said there is evidence that the Chinese are displaying a spirit of "go it our own way," with complete disregard for the discords of American sectarianism.

Dr. Stifler told of two valuable results of American missionary efforts in China. The first is the influence of missionary effort on the development of church unity in America, and the second is the introduction of modern medical methods, hospitals, schools, and colleges in oriental lands. He referred to the statement recently made by a missionary authority that American missionary hospitals in China are inadequate to meet the needs of the casualties of American and European industry in China. This charge refers to the effects of child labor, long hours, and insanitary working conditions, it was stated.

Dr. Stone Defends Missions.

President John Timothy Stone of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, in telling of the five seminary graduates who are about to go into foreign missions, defended the work in China. He declared that there has always been opposition to foreign missions, and that "every one who has ever visited Christian hospitals in China realizes the immense amount of good that is being done."

Prof. D. A. McGregor, head of the department of missions at the Western Theological seminary, Evanston, admtited that there is a crisis in the missions, but he said the crisis is a phase of the social, industrial, and spiritual reconstruction of the orient.

DRYS OF INDIANA RALLY FORCES TO OPPOSE A JUDGE

Primary Candidates Are Numerous and Noisy.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Indianapolis, Ind., May 3. — [Special.]—With liberals of Indiana crying that the Anti-Saloon league and the remnants of the Ku Klux Klan are "boring from within" in an effort to defeat Justice Benjamin M. Willoughby of the Supreme court in the Republican state convention June 5 state delegates are to be chosen at primaries next Tuesday.

Politicians declare the league is getting a sprinkling of its adherents on most of the county delegations in order to exert direct pressure upon the roll call.

Willoughby, who has been a nemesis of the klan-dry league despotism, is one of the three justices who in the days of misrule kept the Supreme court on an even keel for strict interpretation of the constitution and the bill of rights in prohibition cases.

McDonald Is League's Choice.

As the constitutionalists view it, the overshadowing issue in the campaign is whether the old league-klan combine can use the club on the judiciary by wreaking vengeance upon a jurist who has gone against its dictates.

The court has stood 3 to 2 and it is being emphasized that a change of one might give the league a "friendly" tribunal. Observers who have toured the state bring back word that Willoughby is in danger at the convention. Judge Thomas Coulter of Vincennes and T. Morton McDonald of Princeton are candidates, and politicians say the league is backing McDonald.

Three Defeats Recorded.

In three fights against the "constitutionalists" on the Supreme bench the league has failed.

In 1924 Willoughby won by 1 vote. In 1926 the league opposed Justice Julius C. Travis, but he won by 32,780, and in the same year Senator James E. Watson scraped through by only 11,384. Two years ago the league bosses sought to use the church vote for the defeat of Chief Justice David A. Myers, who handed down the decision sentencing the late Rev. E. S. Shumaker, head of the league, to sixty days at the penal farm for contempt. In that campaign the league recommended that although the opponent of Myers was regarded by them as wet, still they preferred him to the chief justice who declined to subscribe to the divine right of bossism. Myers won by a plurality of 142,000.

Democrats' Hopes Are High.

Much of the interest in the primaries centers in the tickets for congress, legislature, local offices, and party machinery. Candidates are swarming like a locust plague. In Marion county alone 2,735 persons have filed as candidates. Of these 1,742 are Republicans and 993 Democrats. All over the state Democrats are battling to get on local tickets, thinking it looks like a Democratic year.

The job of sheriff seems to be the greatest plum. In some counties thirty and more candidates are after this office. Politicians chalk it up to Volsteadism. Scouts who have toured the state report that unemployment, too, is a factor, and that with some candidates it is a case of the jobless looking for a job.

Farmers Want Taxes Shifted.

The Indiana farm bureau is concentrating on the legislature, with taxation measures as its objective. Indiana has the general property tax and the uniform rate as has Illinois and next fall the people are to vote upon the matter of calling a constitutional convention. The farm leaders would like to shift the burden of taxation.

Three items on which the farm's bureau's questionnaire has been signing up candidates are a constitutional convention, opposition to any measures for an increase in property taxes and enactment of tax laws the proceeds of which will take the place of part of the present property taxes. The farm leaders assert that real property is paying 93 per cent of all direct taxes in Indiana and they say they are for some form of income of sales tax, an excise tax or a classification of intangibles.

Padlocks May Be Farm Relief.

A note of comedy that lightened up the discussions of farm relief and Volsteadism was struck by the news from Chicago that E. C. Yellowley, prohibition director, will try to padlock farms on which liquor is made. This got a rib cracking laugh even in bone dry Indiana. Some remarked with chortles that Yellowley has solved the problem of farm relief. They declare that if all American farms on which liquor can be found are padlocked and closed up, the drys would automatically bring about the reduction in acreage which the farm relief board has been advocating, and would remove the surplus of farm crops that knocks down the prices. Some argue that Yellowley's idea is even better than the old equalization fee theory.

In Indianapolis the shouts against "Coffinism" by the younger set in politics were redoubled today. As a sign that the campaign is getting high blood pressure, one orator pulled the good old line about the voice of Jacob and the hand of Esau. "The voice is the voice of County Chairman Hugg," he said, "but the hand is the hand of Coffinism."

Police Chief Guilty

PETER OSZAKOWSKI.

Peter Oszakowski, chief of police of Niles, was found guilty of attempting to bribe prohibition agents by a jury which reported to Federal Judge Woodward yesterday.

Dry agents testified at the trial in Federal Judge Wham's court that Oszakowski tendered $149 as first payment on a $600 bribe to drop liquor charges against his two brothers, Edward and Mike, arrested in a raid on the Avenue Inn, or "Mike's Place," last Nov. 6.

The police chief denied the drys' charges and said he thought he was putting up bail for his brothers. A similar charge against Edward Oszakowski was dismissed. Mike was not involved in the bribery charges. Peter faces a maximum sentence of three years and a fine of three times the amount of the bribe. Arguments for a new trial will be heard May 23.

Hold Classes Tomorrow in School Hit by Lightning

Classes will be held tomorrow at the Farnsworth school, Balmoral and Luna avenues, despite the damage to the building caused when it was struck by lightning last Thursday night, according to John Howatt, chief engineer of the board of education. Fifteen feet of a 125 foot brick smokestack were broken by the lightning and windows throughout the building were broken.

SUICIDE'S BODY IS FOUND; $28,000 THEFT REVEALED

Two months ago Frank Richard Lynch, 35 years old, bade good-by to a stenographer in his office at Hammond and disappeared. Yesterday his body was found floating in the Chicago river at 13th street. In his pockets was found $1.44, all that remained of $28,000 which he was said to have had.

Lynch vanished from the offices of George B. Lambert & Co., where he was sales manager, on March 8. His wife, Gail, was in a hospital recovering from an operation. At the Lynch home at 1248 Moraine avenue, Hammond, were a baby 18 months old, and a daughter, 5 years old.

Two days after Lynch's disappearance his automobile was found abandoned in Jackson park. Then his wife discovered that securities valued at $28,000, her private fortune, were gone from Lynch's safety deposit box. Harold J. Dixon of Hammond, a brother-in-law, told a coroner's jury yesterday that it had been discovered that the securities had been sold, under forged indorsements, over a period of two years. He said he had learned that Lynch had spent sums of money on various women friends.

The jury returned a verdict of suicide.

PASSION PLAY

DRAMA OF DRAMAS

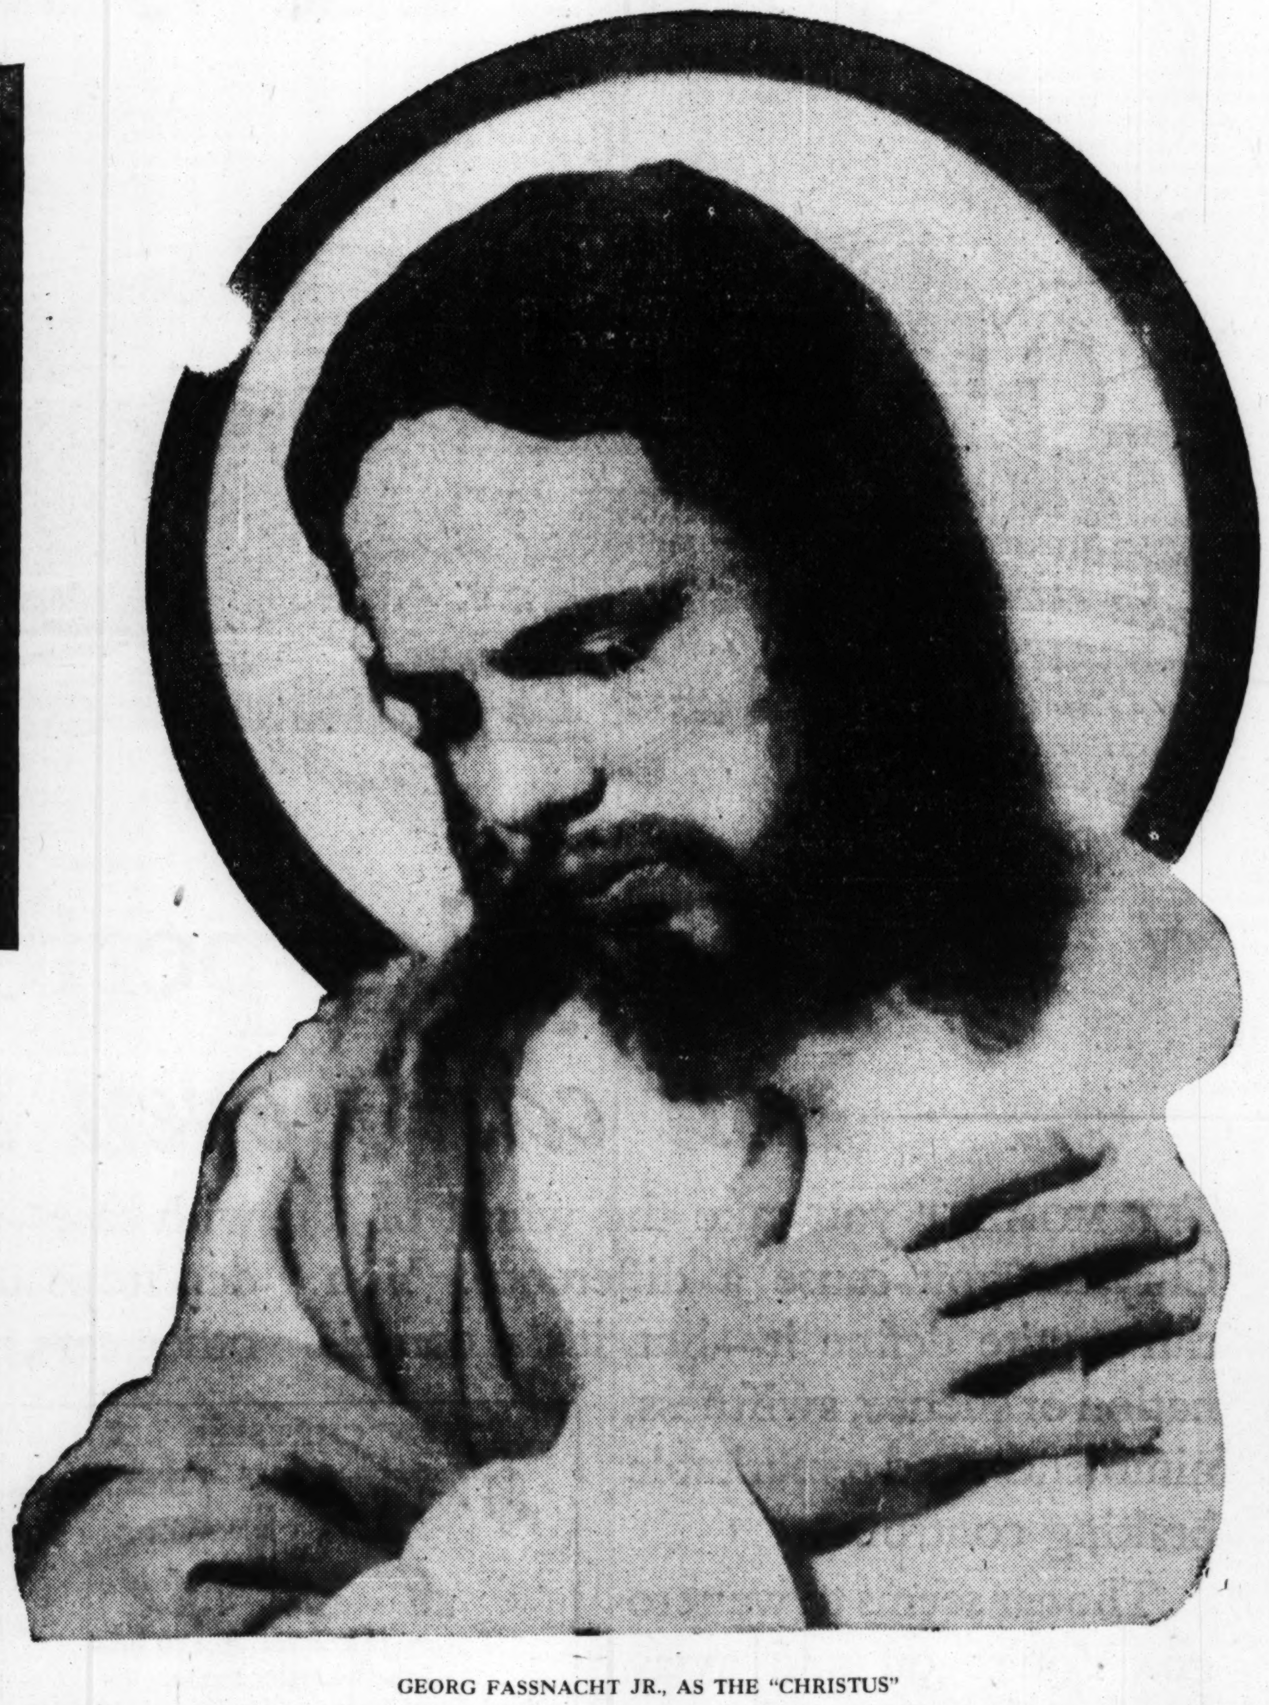
Now Spoken in English—Not a Moving Picture

THE ORIGINAL FREIBURG PLAYERS OF FREIBURG, GERMANY

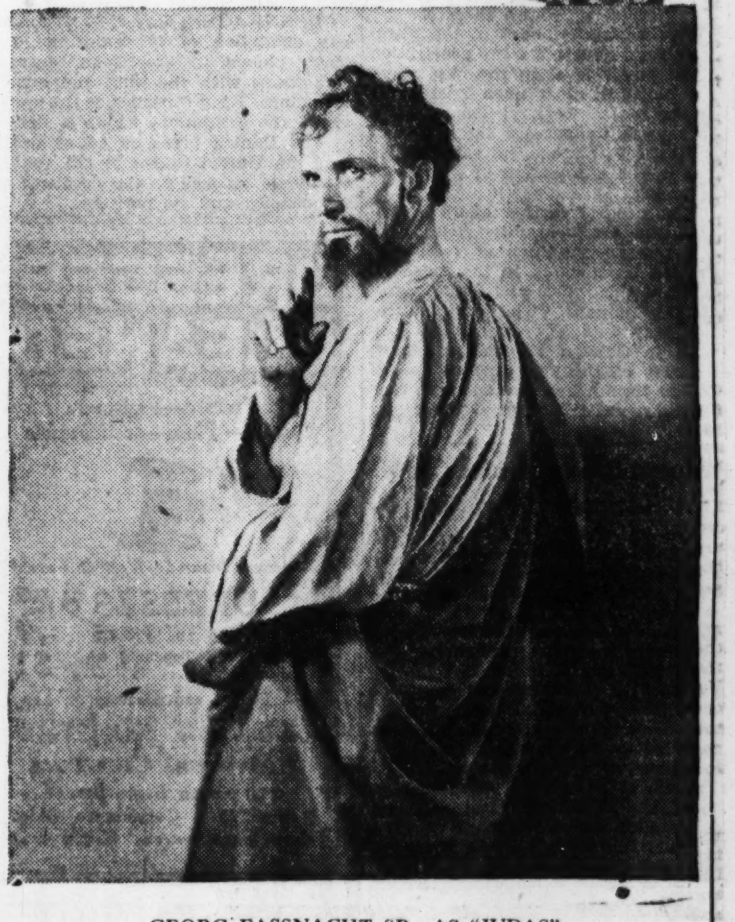
PRESENTED BY

GEORG FASSNACHT SR.

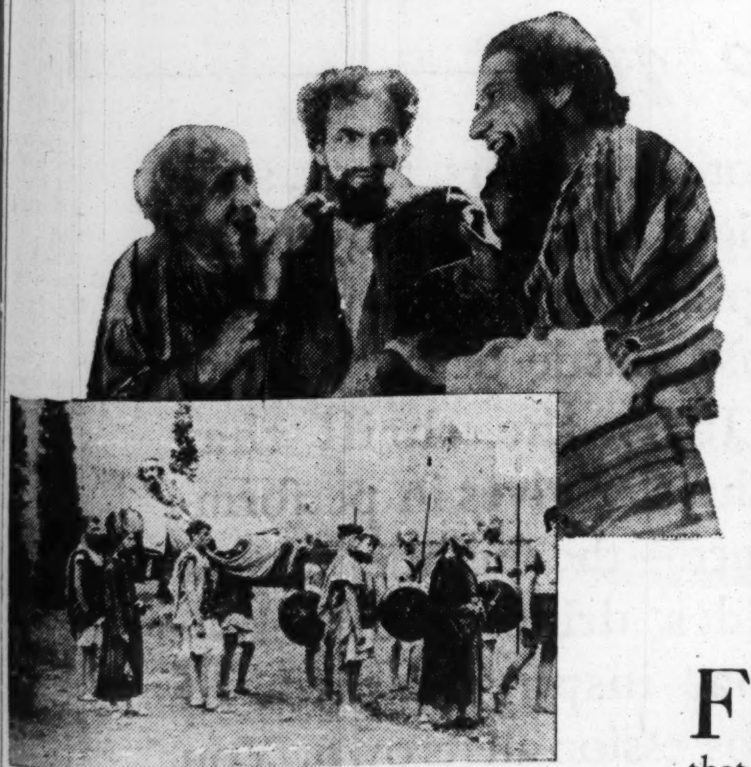
AUGUSTA FASSNACHT AS "MARY, THE MOTHER"



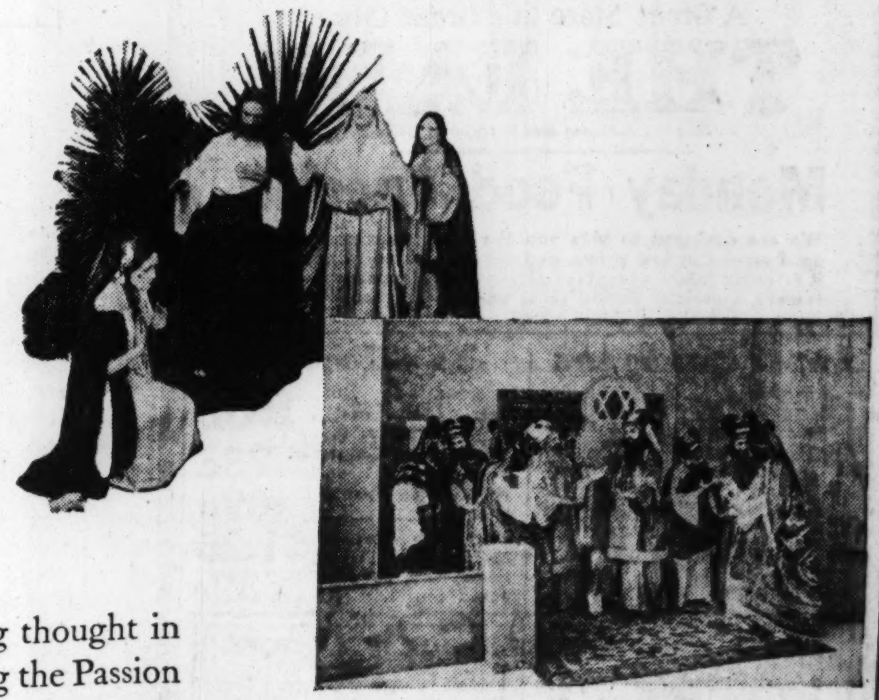
GEORG FASSNACHT JR., AS THE "CHRISTUS"



GEORG FASSNACHT SR., AS "JUDAS"



KING HEROD AND HIS RETINUE



IN THE PALACE OF THE HIGH PRIESTS

FOR centuries people have journeyed from the four corners of the globe to the Old World that they might live in the sacred atmosphere of this great and divine spectacle—a living message, perpetuated in the memory of man throughout all eternity.

The entire drama is presented in English. The famous Georg Fassnacht and family head the cast of 350. For six generations the name of Fassnacht and the "Passion Play" have been linked inseparably together. For years Protestant and Catholic have crossed the Atlantic to witness this stirring "Drama of the Ages,"—the sweetest and yet the saddest story ever told. This play was first presented A. D. 1264.

The most outstanding civic and educational event of 1930—"Every great force which can be set in motion at this time will serve to advance the great cause of humanity throughout the world."

This is, and has been, the actuating thought in the minds of those interested in bringing the Passion Play to Chicago. The original Freiburg players are now in America.

The Freiburg players make one stipulation, namely: that the proceeds of their work go to some charity. Consequently, many Chicago charities are the beneficiaries of the engagement in this city—for under no other considerations would they leave their native Freiburg—and now for the first time since the origin of this age-old drama, this precious privilege is extended to the people of Chicago.

The most colossal, stupendous and gorgeous spectacle of all time, the living presentation of the Master's teachings, intended to visualize to men and women the real meaning of Jesus Christ to the world and its people.

JUDAS BARTERING WITH THE HIGH PRIESTS

NEW TESTS WILL SHOW HOW SOOT BLOTS OUT SUN

City Expert Begins Work at Dunes Station.

New experiments to determine to what extent smoke and soot in Chicago shut out the healthful ultraviolet rays of the sun were started yesterday by Dr. Fred O. Tonney. With four of his associates in the research laboratories of the health department he set up equipment at his Dunes testing station to measure the quantity of the rays in an area free from Chicago's atmospheric contamination.

The Dunes station is located on the lake shore fifty miles southeast from Chicago's loop. Measurements of the rays taken there are compared with the readings taken from the top of a loop building and at street level in the downtown area. Past readings have shown the intensity of the ultra-violet rays at a given time at the Dunes to be twice that in the loop.

Three Kinds of Tests.

Three experiments are carried on simultaneously at the Dunes station by Dr. Tonney. One is in the realm of physics, another in the field of chemistry and the third is physiological in character. The results of all three are correlated.

Photographs of the ultra-violet rays after the sun's rays have been split into the colors of a rainbow by a spectroscope are taken every five minutes of a given hour. At the same time a solution of oxalic acid in small amounts of uranyl sulphate is exposed to the ultra-violet rays under quartz and the intensity of the rays is measured from the decomposing reaction.

One of the four assistants during this hour bares a narrow band of untanned skin to the sun. Then the skin is observed for a period of 12 to 24 hours after the exposure to note the erythema (redness of the skin) reaction. The degree of the erythema is checked with the amount of decomposition of the oxalic acid solution and the photograph of the rays.

Needed to Fight Disease.

With a large amount of the ultraviolet rays shut off from penetration to the street level in the city, there is a harmful effect upon health, according to Dr. Tonney. The effect of the rays is to increase the power of resistance to disease, he said, and is vital in the stimulation of growth of the young.

"The need of further effort to conserve the available ultra-violet light in urban communities of temperate climates is indicated in the measurements at the Dunes and in Chicago," said Dr. Tonney. "The loss of ultraviolet ray intensity due to air pollution in Chicago is considerable at all times of the year and of special concern from a health standpoint during the months between October and March."

Chicago Boy Admits Guilt in Kenosha Store Thefts

Kenosha, Wis., May 3.—[Special.]—Two Chicago youths serving sentences of eighteen months to five years in the State reformatory at Green Bay, may be joined by Jack Kurtz, 19, of 1539 Edgemont avenue, Chicago, third member of a quartet that robbed two small stores in Kenosha last March, getting $81. Kurtz pleaded guilty before Circuit Judge E. B. Belden today. Sentence was deferred pending further investigation of the case. The other two who were sentenced are James Cerrone, 23, 2424 West Flournoy street, and Emil Bulnavaolant, 21, 815 S. Paulina street, both of Chicago. The fourth member of the quartet has never been apprehended.

QUEEN MARY OPENS DRIVE FOR COTTON INDUSTRY OF BRITAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Queen Mary, it was announced today, will inauguarate "National Cotton Week" Monday in an effort to stimulate interest in Great Britain's rapidly declining cotton industry. An official announcement from Windsor castle says:

"The queen has been graciously pleased to make a selection of a number of fabrics submitted to her by the Lancashire manufacturers. Messers Reville of Hanover Square have kindly undertaken to make models of dresses in these materials in the hope of increasing the popularity of British fabrics among the general public and may tend to reduce unemployment."

Materials selected by the queen were cotton voiles and mixtures of cotton and artificial silk. There were a variety of colors, many in her majesty's favorite shade of blue. Models for the gowns have not yet been selected but is certain that one will be a tea gown and others for day wear. Great Britain's cotton industry has been severely hit in recent years by the artificial silk industry and by the revolt in India.

GARRETT OPENS U. S. PAVILION AT VENICE ART SHOW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VENICE, Italy, May 3.—Ambassador John W. Garrett and Mrs. Garrett today inaugurated the American pavilion at the seventeenth biennial exposition of painting and sculpture here. Several hundred European and American artists and nearly all countries are represented. Among the American painters exhibiting are Bond, Chapman, and Stuart.

Much attention was given to the American pavilion. This is the first year that the United States has had its own building. Walter L. Clark, New York art expert, supervised its construction. It is made of pink brick with marble trimming, and of colonial architecture. Ninety pieces of American sculpture and paintings are housed in it.

U. S. Exhibition in Denmark.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, May 3.—The American exhibition of 168 paintings, recently shown in Stockholm, opened here today with the king and queen attending. King Christian is the sponsor of the exhibition, which is hailed by the Danish press as added proof that the United States is the center of culture, as well as the producer of automobiles and typewriters.

ARMY TO STAGE GREAT WAR SHOW IN GRANT PARK

All Service Branches to Demonstrate Battle.

Details of the military tournament and exposition to be held in Soldiers' field June 21 to June 29 were revealed yesterday by Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commanding general of the 6th corps area. Nearly 2,000 infantry, 300 cavalrymen, 60 airplanes, a number of balloons, tanks, and artillery will take part in the show.

The event is to be the most spectacular military demonstration ever staged in the middle west, according to the announcement. The purpose of the show is to acquaint people of the middle west with the army as an instrument of national protection. Net receipts will go to the Army Relief society, an organization which helps needy regular army soldiers and officers and their widows and orphans.

The battle of Château Thierry will be reproduced. All branches of the service will be employed in this spectacle and an effort will be made to follow closely the actual phases of that action.

The air show will be a feature. Sixty planes from Selfridge, Scott, and Chanute fields will go through intricate maneuvers and take part in the battle, dropping bombs and swooping low over the heads of the combatants. The balloons will be used as they were used during the war.

Beneath the stands many exhibits will be on view. A famous exhibit of historic firearms from the period of the revolution to the present day will be brought from West Point. Artillery used in the civil war, an assortment of uniforms used in all wars, and air corps exhibits will also be presented.

The signal corps will stage a series of pigeon races.

Each day's program will begin with a review of all the troops, including the airplanes, with some notable receiving the review.

The 14th United States cavalry will present an exhibition of horsemanship which will include fire jumps, mounted calisthenics, and other displays of skill. Then will follow the armored cars and tanks, an artillery demonstration, showing a battery going into action, then machine gun action, ending with the reproduction of the battle of Chateau Thierry.

Teachers Propose Entrance Test as College Standard

A proposal that unit credits for high school work be abolished and that students be required to take entrance tests for colleges and universities was made by the National Federation of Modern Teachers at the Auditorium hotel yesterday. The following officers were elected: C. M. Purin, University of Wisconsin, president; Dr. J .B. Tharp, Ohio State university, vice president; Miss Ellis Dwyer, Evanston Township High school, secretary and treasurer.

DAWES REVIEWS SCOTCH SCOUTS, PRAISES PIPERS

GLASGOW, Scotland, May 3.—(AP)—Ambassador Charles G. Dawes revealed himself as an authority on bagpipe playing this afternoon when, in the presence of 20,000 spectators he reviewed the Glasgow battalion of the boys' brigade in Queen's park.

The boys, who numbered nearly 10,000, gave a gymnastic display and marched past the American ambassador. Addressing them later, Mr. Dawes said there was a distinctive element in their movement which American boys did not have—a bagpipe band.

"I was told," he said, "that I would hear hundreds of pipers and that perhaps they would not play the same tune at the same time. I have been watching for that, but there wasn't a flaw in the playing. Yours is the best bagpipe band I ever heard."

Wife Denies Millionaire's Charge She Deserted Him

Long Beach, Cal., May 3.—(AP)—Denial that she deserted her husband, Jotham Bixby Jr., millionaire son of the founder of Long Beach, and went to New York, was contained in a cross complaint on file here today in the name of Mrs. Bertha Kilgore Bixby.

Bixby yesterday alleged his wife deserted him when she went to New York several years ago. Mrs. Bixby replied that she went to New York with her husband's consent to place their daughter, Beatrice, in school.

Ralph Blum, attorney for Mrs. Bixby, said a property settlement has been made. She was understood to have received $1,000,000.

62 AIRPLANES CARRY LIQUOR, CANADA TO U. S.

Detroit, Mich., May 3.—[Special.]—April Canadian customs records show there were sixty-two airplanes clearances from the Walkerville airport with a total cargo of 938 cases of liquor, with destinations given as Saginaw, South Bend, Milwaukee, Cincinnati and other cities.

United States customs officials said today they had undercover agents at the export docks in Canada to check up on the registrations of planes carrying liquor.

Agents declared that in each of the clearances the pilots gave false airplane registration numbers. The correct numbers were obtained from the planes by the agents who are expected to attempt to seize them.

He is actively engaged in law practice. He enlisted in Company B, Fifty-first Indiana infantry, before he was 13 years old.

SOUTH SEA TRADE LEADERS ATTACK MANDATE RULERS

Claim Australia Is Too Easy on Natives.

The following story concerning the Australian mandate territory of New Guinea has just been received by mail from Mr. Dailey, who was assigned to make a survey of territories in the far east. Mr. Dailey is now in India.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THURSDAY ISLAND, March 17.—[By Mail.]—This settlement on the Torres straits, the northernmost town in Australia and well into the tropics, being in 10 degrees south latitude and about 142 degrees east longitude—a cosmopolitan settlement from every nation on the globe—takes little interest in anything beyond the pearl fisheries, which are the only industry.

It is, however, the jumping off place for New Guinea, for which Australia was granted the mandate for "backward peoples" under the league of nations award. Boats leave here frequently for the New Guinea coast and three or four steamship lines on the Sydney-Singapore or Sydney-Hongkong runs regularly call here.

Freight Gold by Plane.

There is another small line from Australia direct to the two developed ports in Papua, as formerly German New Guinea is generally termed by the Australians, but these do a very limited trade, as there is absolutely no development there beyond the very narrow coastal fringe. There are no roads except along the south coast and a gold mining company operating in the interior is compelled to carry its machinery and supplies inland by airplane.

The natives are open in their criticism of the present administrator, Gen. Winthrop, who as this is written is at Canberra in conference with the Labor government, which, however, is so much engrossed in its problems at home that little is likely to come of it. The few Australians who have gone to New Guinea to try to develop it and incidentally to enrich their own coffers are openly critical of the administration.

Capt. W. L. D. Macpherson, a planter of four years' experience in Dyjaul, came out the other day with a tale of woe, and others have said much the same. Capt. Macpherson frankly said he was "fed up" with the administration and cited numerous complaints of the planters.

Complain of Treatment.

"Papua costs about $48,500 every year to Australia," he said, "and every penny of it is spent on the natives, although the planters and other white settlers pay 70 per cent of the taxes.

"There was a big surplus this year—about $291,000—which is supposed to be spent on road making and such works, but this has now been stopped. Many houses were being built for officials, but a warning was sent by the commonwealth government that no more money can be obtained for this purpose at the present."

Capt. Macpherson also asserted that there was little or no effort to enforce proper police protection at the coastal settlements, and that attempts to assault white women and children were frequent if not common occurrences at Rabaul, although in the outstations such a thing was unknown.

"In my opinion," said the captain, "this state of affairs in the coastal settlements has been due to mollycoddling of the natives by the administration, which, being under the general Labor government of Australia, follows also much of the easy on the under dog policy of the group now in control of the commonwealth. The natives know that very little is ever done to them if they transgress.

Natives Being Spoiled.

"If a boy spat in my wife's face I must not inflict any corporal punishment, but must take him by boat for 40 miles across an open sea to the nearest magistrate. He probaly would receive a sentence of three months' imprisonment, during which time he would lose only his labor. If I take the law into my own hands and smack him I am liable to a fine of about $245, and for a second offense would not be permitted to employ native labor, which means that I would have to leave the territory.

"I am absolutely convinced that the leniency shown the natives by the administration is rapidly spoiling them. They tell us that the country is theirs and we are there only on sufferance, although we are developing the country for them."

Another planter, also an Australian, said it was generally agreed among the planters that the natives were becoming increasingly insolent in any area in which they came under mission control. In Rabaul white women were in such fear of prowling natives that at night the children were placed in rooms fitted with burglar-proof doors and windows.

There are fewer than 150 natives in the elementary schools established in New Guinea by the mandate government, of whom 65 per cent are in the Rabaul district. The mission schools in the mandated territory, however, number about 1,300 today, with a total attendance of about 37,000, the relation being three girls to each four boys. Of these all but about 190 are under the direction of native teachers.

The chief export of New Guinea is copra, to the value of about $5,500,000 annually, while gold exports are second, with round figures of $1,700,000. Total exports last year were $7,300,000 and against these were imports of roughly $4,000,000. As the gold field development continues the net riches of New Guinea will increase, but this affects the foreigners and not the natives directly. On the whole, it would seem that the Australian is making all the money in New Guinea and the native has been earning only his living.

ROW OVER BEDROOMS HASTENS THEIR TRIP TO DIVORCE COURT

Detroit, Mich., May 3.—[U. P.]—The De Golias, William and Winifred, who are going to be divorced, got along very nicely in the division of property until William claimed both bedrooms for his half of the house, thus forcing Mrs. De Golia to use the dining room for sleeping purposes. Then Mrs. De Golia went to court.

So tonight Mrs. De Golia will have a bedroom again, but she and De Golia will have to do something about the dining room table which, under the rigid division of property, was pulled apart. The court ordered the table put together again or disposed of, although he denied Mrs. De Golia's plea that her husband be made to live some place other than in the house divided.

CHINESE COLONY STIRRED AS CAFE MAN DISAPPEARS

Chinatown was upset yesterday, not over an impending tong war, as some reports had it, but because Willie Lee, promoter of the Mandarin Temple inn, 202 West 22d street, had disappeared. The inn has been forced into receivership and sundry laundrymen and merchants are wondering what happened to the $37,000 they invested in the restaurant.

The situation was outlined to Deputy Police Commissioner Stege by Frank Moy, chief of the On Leong tong and so called mayor of Chinatown, who called at police headquarters to explain how he happened to be carrying a pistol when he was arrested on Thursday at the South State street police station, where he had gone to intercede for a follower. Moy told Stege he had been appointed a special deputy sheriff several days ago and had since carried a pistol.

Arraigned before Judge McCarthy on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, Moy posted a $1,000 bond and was granted a continuance to next Tuesday. Harry Lee, for whom Moy was interceding when arrested, was discharged by Judge McCarthy when it was shown that he had not been carrying a pistol, as charged, but merely kept one in his cigar store.

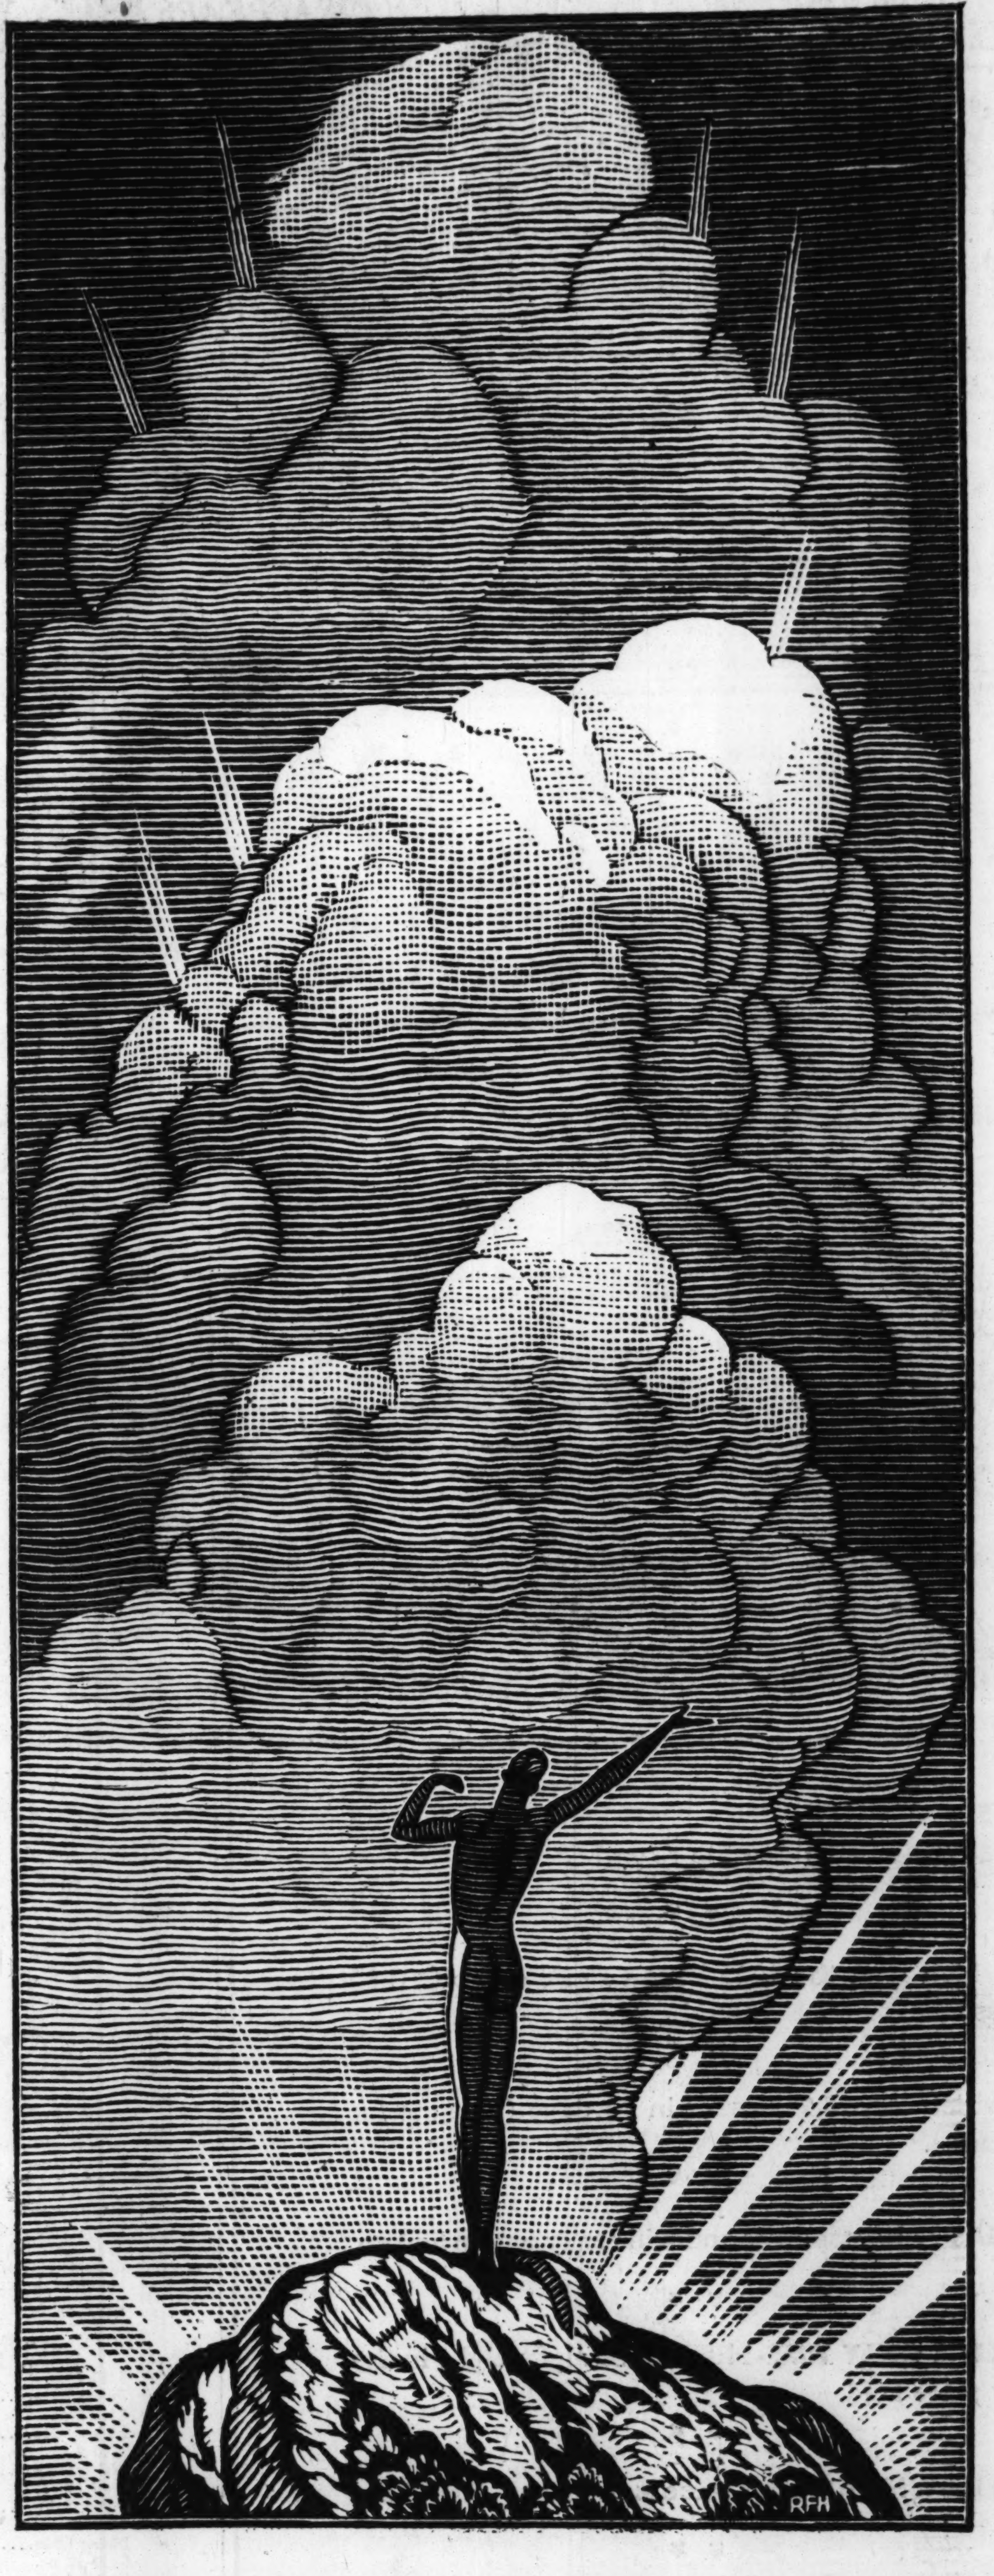
HOLLAND HEATING MAKES WARM FRIENDS



AMERICA WAKES UP...

... Lazy days and drowsy nights are banished forever by the modern Vaporaire heating and air-conditioning system ...

AMERICA has awakened—banished the smothering blanket of dry heat that has made winter a season of discomfort and ill-health. Overwhelming acceptance of the modern Holland air-conditioning system for winter heating and summer cooling has brought a new standard of living to the modern home.

Gone are the dull days and listless evenings when stagnant, stifling, dry air made us a nation of drowsy families—worn and weary long before bedtime. No longer does anyone need to pay the penalty of old-fashioned heating methods—live in a dry kiln—breathe suffocating air—fight one cold after another.

Holland engineers have developed a simple, compact, electrically controlled heating, cooling and air-conditioning system that blends warmth, moisture and circulation into a refreshing, stimulating indoor atmosphere. In winter a balmy, moist current of warmth circulates through every room and keeps the temperature constant. The air changes completely every few minutes. Healthful comfort is everywhere all the time. In summer a power-drive circulator sends a zestful, cooling breeze through the whole house—making hot, sultry days and arid nights comfortable.

Holland Vaporaire brings year around comfort to any size home. It is modern in principle—durable in construction—incomparable in performance. Any fuel may be used including gas or oil.

Every Holland Vaporaire System is specially planned for the home it serves. Installation is made under factory supervision. You have the benefits of a great national engineering service that assumes all responsibility and positively guarantees satisfaction.

Here is the most vital investment you can make—one that completely energizes and stimulates family life. Why tolerate an obsolete, inefficient heating system that wastes money, time and fuel—endangers health—destroys comfort? Prices are unusually reasonable—terms extremely liberal. Get the facts. Telephone our local branch. Have a Holland man call. No obligation.

ROOT'S HIT ENDS PITCHING DUEL; CUBS WIN, 1-0

COLLEGE ATHLETES BREAK 16 OHIO RELAY MARKS

HORNSBY SHOWS 6,000 BOYS HOW HE SMACKS 'EM

Eddie Sullivan His Most Apt Pupil.

BY ARCH WARD.

This is a piece about the happiest boy in Chicagoland. His name is Eddie Sullivan and he lives at 135 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park. He's sure to be a big shot at St. Catherine's school tomorrow.

It's all because he yesterday showed Rogers Hornsby and 6,000 of his classmates in THE TRIBUNE baseball school that he knows how to swing a bat. And that isn't all. He handled it better than nine other lads who demonstrated their skill at Wrigley field.

After watching each of the boys take three swings at balls thrown by Lon Warneke, Cubs' pitcher, Hornsby decided that Sullivan had the best form. He was awarded a bat with Hornsby's name inscribed and two baseballs autographed by the Rajah. Just to make it a great day for the Irish, the presentation was made by Jimmy Burke, Cubs' coach.

Eddie Comes Prepared.

Sullivan overlooked no detail in his preparations to win the award. He brought his own bat and was equipped with baseball cap and shoes. He had been up since 5 o'clock in the morning swinging bats in his back yard. Some one had told him that genius was 99 per cent perspiration.

Eddie's closest rival for top honors was Herbert Warvell, 16 year old student of Waller High school. He lives at 2634 Burling street. Warvell hit the ball farther than Sullivan, but distance didn't count. It was the batter's stance and the way he stepped into the ball that Hornsby considered.

Others in the running for the prize were Charles Cox, 6550 Glenwood avenue; Jimmy Ward, 3632 S. Kenilworth avenue, Berwyn; Frank Adamson, 1753 Albion street, and Jack Sackley, 5456 Lakewood avenue.

Biggest and Noisiest.

The attendance yesterday was the largest the school has drawn. If the cheers of the pupils count, it also was the best lesson. The youngsters almost went wild as Hornsby appeared on the field, and when he left to keep an appointment with a dentist they stood up and yelled their appreciation in no uncertain terms. Scarcely less enthusiastic were the greetings given Capt. Charley Grimm, Woody English, Herman Jones and Ray Schalk, who assisted Hornsby.

Hack Wilson and Kiki Cuyler, who will have charge of next Saturday's lesson at Wrigley field, came out of the dugout to say hello to the boys after repeated cries of "We want Hack! We want Kiki!"

The lesson opened with infield practice, in which Hornsby demonstrated how to throw to first without changing position. He also showed the speed required of a second baseman in completing double plays. Covering first base on bunts was another point the Cubs' star emphasized.

Rajah Hits a Homer.

It was Hornsby's hitting which his scholars appreciated most. The big kick was a home run the Rajah arched into the right field bleachers. He announced in advance to which side of the field he would knock the ball. And he never missed. Coach Burke pointed out how carefully Hornsby looks over each ball. He never strikes at a wild one, Burke said. That's why he leads the league in bases on balls, the coach stated.

When the young Hornsbys were called out of the stands to compete for the bat and balls the Rajah gave individual instructions. He corrected the stance of several, so that they would not pull away from the pitch. He insisted that they step into the ball with all the power they could develop.

There ought to be some heavy hitting on Chicago's sandlots this summer. There are at least 6,000 boys who know how to go about it. And after they watch Hack Wilson next Saturday they ought to be ready to step into major league uniforms.

Just wait and see.

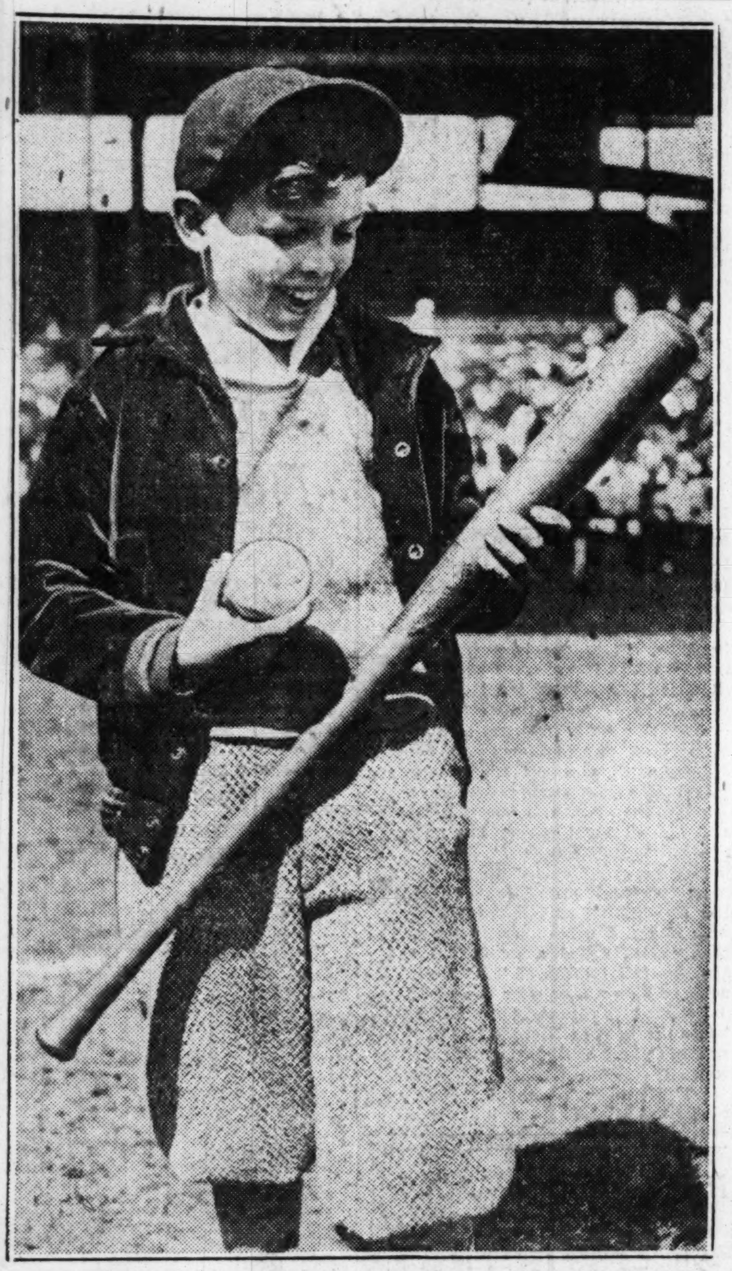
CUBS TO ADMIT WOMEN BY TICKET AT FRIDAY GAMES

Ladies' day at the Cubs park will be operated on a different basis in the future. Admission to the Friday game, always free for women, will be by ticket only.

Starting Wednesday morning and every Wednesday morning thereafter when the Cubs are at home, tickets will be distributed from the box offices at the Sheffield and Addison corner of the park. Two tickets will be given to each applicant, and the supply for each week will be limited to 20,000. Girls under 16 years are not eligible. The tickets will be dated and must be used on the Friday of the week in which they are distributed.

President Veeck also has issued orders that in the future the entire upper deck and the right field wing of the lower tier be set aside for the club's guests.

PUPILS AND THE MASTER



Ed Sullivan receives his honorary degree as Master of the Bat. He showed the best hitting form yesterday during The Tribune's weekly baseball lesson at Wrigley field, and was awarded a bat and ball. Ed lives at 135 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park.

Rogers Hornsby tells Charles Cox how to make trouble for an opposing pitcher. Charles is one of the six thousand boys who turned out for the Rajah's batting and infielding lesson yesterday at Wrigley field.

Columbus, O., May 3.—[Special.]—Sixteen meet records were broken here today in the seventh Ohio relays under the combined assault of 1,200 college track athletes. Seven were shattered on the first day's program, bringing the total of new records for the meet to twenty-three.

Tom Warne of Northwestern and George Simpson of Ohio State divided honors for the outstanding performances of the meet, Warne in the pole vault and Simpson in the 100 yard dash. Warne was believed to have cleared the bar at 14 feet in the vault, but when officials remeasured the poles they were found to be untrue and his official jump was listed at 13 feet 11⅛ inches.

Tolan, Bracey Trail Simpson.

Simpson beat the best sprinters in the country, running the century in 9.5 seconds. The Buckeye star broke ahead of the field and stayed more than a yard ahead until he broke the tape. His time equaled the Ohio relays record, which he set last year, and missed by only one-tenth of a second his world record race at Chicago in the National collegiate meet.

Simpson finished a yard ahead of Tolan of Michigan and about a step behind Tolan was Claude Bracey of Rice institute. Starting blocks were used.

The crowd of 14,653 set a record for attendance.

In the university division the honors were scattered as far as record breaking goes, with Illinois winning the 880 yard relay; Purdue the distance medley; Notre Dame the two mile relay; Indiana the four mile relay; Campbell of Michigan the hammer throw; Bausch of Kansas the shot put and Michigan the mile relay.

In the college division Kansas State Teachers runners took three out of the five events.

Sentman and Rodgers of Illinois ran a beautiful race in the 120 yard high hurdles. Sentman nosed out Rodgers in 14.8. Rockaway, holder of the world record in the low hurdle event, finished a poor fourth. Sentman's time set a new relay record, the old time being 15 seconds.

Martin Leads Purdue to Mark.

The Purdue distance relay team, led by Orval Martin, duplicated its feat of last year by winning in 10:25.7 and bettering its old relay mark of 10:29.2.

The old mile relay record held by Chicago was shattered by Michigan, when Dalton Seymour, Russell, Mueller, and Dale Seymour covered the distance in 3:21.5. The Chicago mark of 3:22.4 was set in 1929.

The trithlon was won by Bausch with a score of 2,256, more than 300 points ahead of his nearest competitor, Brooks of Michigan, who had 1948.

In a special event Phin Guthrie and Chuck Woerner, former rivals in the hurdle events, ran a 120 yard high hurdle race. Woerner won by less than a yard in 15.2 seconds. Woerner is assistant track coach at Illinois, and Guthrie has a like position at Ohio State.

New York, May 3.—You have lots of time to read on Sunday but you'll have to wait at least one more Sabbath before you can read about a White Sox Saturday victory. This week's week-end trimming was administered by the New York Yankees by a count of 5 to 3.

Hal McKain was the lamb that Manager Donie Bush today threw on the altar of the Saturday ogre. Hal wasn't especially effective, as is testified by the fact that the snoozing Yankees made nine hits off him in the seven innings he worked. The total included triples by Chapman and Combs and two doubles by Dickey and one double by Lazzeri.

Six Hits Earn Three Runs.

The Sox made but six hits off Waite Hoyt, but three of these were high calibered affairs and each led to a run. Cissel tripled in the fourth and scored the first Sox run. Harris tripled in the seventh and scored the second Chicago run. With two out in the ninth, Kamm knocked the ball into the left field stand for his second homer of the year and the third and final Sox run of the game.

The Sox perhaps didn't expect to win today, seeing as they've not won on Saturday since the first day of their spring exhibition series, which was played on March 8. As a consequence the boys were not in the least distressed by the day's happenings and tomorrow will set up their shop on the same premises, with Tommy Thomas in charge.

Tommy was to have pitched this afternoon, but asked for another day's rest for his mysteriously ailing arm. The fact that today was Saturday had nothing to do with superstitious Tommy's request for a day of grace. The experts who have been guessing Zachary or Wells for the Yankees for two days came back undaunted and name them as potentialities for the morrow.

Double Play Checks Sox.

Each side got a hit in the first inning, but neither came close to scoring. Reynolds doubled to right after Chapman had thrown out Cissell. Gehrig then leaped into the air and speared Clancy's drive with one hand, and threw to Koenig to double Reynolds off second.

In the Yankees' first Combs walked

Who but Sandow Could Lift a Horse with His Teeth?

This is the third of a series of articles on famous strong men of history.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 3.—Hercules and Samson, on their records, were A1 strong men and very versatile. But there is an outside chance that their biographies were written by their press agents or somebody who gave them too much of a break.

At any rate, there is no one living who ever saw either do any of his stuff. There isn't even any one whose great-great-grandfather saw either Hercules or Samson. So, at best, their records are a bit foggy.

How different was the status of Eugene Sandow. Sandow was and is proclaimed by many the "strongest man who ever LIVED." This implies, of course, that Hercules and Samson are fiction characters. We're not going to take back any of our praise of the pair at this late date, but right now we are going to talk about Sandow.

Every one who was in Chicago for the World's Fair knows about Sandow, but maybe you've forgotten some of the things he did. So we're going to remind you.

Inspired by Statues of Famous Strong Men.

Sandow was born in Konigsberg in 1867. He was a puny child, so much so that his parents feared he would not live to take up studying for the priesthood, the career they had planned for him.

He was taken by his parents to Rome while still a youngster and spent most of his waking hours wandering about the art galleries, admiring and studying the statues.

It became his theory that he could develop his muscles to match with his favorite works of art and soon advanced his theories toward reality. Later he took up the study of medicine, with an especial interest in anatomy, and by the time he was of age was beginning to attract attention in Europe.

The strong man craze had a hold on London particularly when Sandow was about 23 years old, and he went there and immediately caused a sensation by vanquishing in feats of strength the two outstanding performers of the time, who used the names of Samson and Cyclops.

Sandow came to America at the age of 26 and Flo Ziegfeld, current glorifier of the American girl, sought his talents for an exhibit in connection with his father's spectacle, which was designed to attract World's Fair visitors.

Lifts Horse with His Teeth; Bends Crowbar.

Sandow said he would exhibit his amazing physique and perform his feats for $1,000 a week. At that time such a sum impressed Mr. Ziegfeld as being preposterous. So he prevailed upon Sandow to "compromise" on 10 per cent of the gross intake. During the year of the fair Sandow's take in Chicago averaged $3,000 a week.

Ziegfeld acted as Sandow's manager for four years and derived the bankroll and experience which enabled him to launch his career as a producer of musical spectacles and founder of the Follies, etc.

Here are some of the things that Sandow could do:

Lift a good sized horse with his teeth.

Lift a 500 pound weight with his little finger.

Break heavy iron rods across his arms and legs.

Bend a crowbar around his neck.

Support three horses on a gangplank rested on his chest.

Tear three decks of cards in two.

In a tour which he conducted in

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

One of those pitching duels made almost obsolete by the jackrabbit ball was provided for 20,000 yesterday at Wrigley field. Without runs, it went on and on until it seemed as if there could be no ending. But Charley Root, who started and finished, attended to that. In the tenth he drove one to the wall. A moment later there was a fielding blunder and he ran home to a 1 to 0 triumph over the obstinate Phillies.

That one tally wrecked long, lean Harold Elliott after he had made a stirring bid to lay the champions flat. As a matter of fact, he did submerge the real hitters. In nine innings only four hits were marked against his record. Then Root brought on the conclusion with the fifth Cub blow, and even this would have proved harmless if Barney Friberg hadn't let a double play ball go through his hands.

Defensive Play Helps Root.

Root remained long enough to enjoy the thrill of scoring the day's lone tally partly because of his own brilliancy and partly because of the defensive deeds of his mates. Yielding nine hits, he knew what it was to be in trouble. Twice when he was about on the ropes double plays carried him on. In a distressing eighth in which three hits were bunched Hartnett's arm blasted a possible rally. And on top of this there was some individual sparkling by at least three members of the infield.

When the Cub tenth arrived Root was the first man up. He sailed a liner far down into the left field corner and reached second on it. He hugged the bag while English was grounding to Hurst. They walked Heathcote, not because the next hitter was considered a bargain, but to arrange the setting for a possible double play. Then Hornsby grounded to Friberg and the twin killing should have occurred, but the ball went between Barney's feet and Root ran over the counter.

The pitching today will be a matter for Pat Malone and Ray Benge.

Hits Wasted in First.

Outside of a couple of hits there was no excitement in the first inning. Klein singled to center for the Phils after two were defunct and expired on Whitney's pop to English. The Cubs made a threat that was a bit more serious. With one gone Heathcote bounced a two bagger off the bleacher fence in left center. Hornsby responded with a liner to center, but Sigman gloved it. Then the mighty Wilson was tossed out on an easy grounder to Thevenow.

The Phils produced their second hit off Root in the third round. O'Doul did this after he had been granted a new lease on life by Bell's muff of a pop foul. The single was aimed over first base with two out, but the inning closed immediately with Klein popping to Bell. The Cubs couldn't produce their second safe blow until Hornsby shot one through short with one out in the fourth. Neither Wilson nor Cuyler could move him around.

Cub Ace Hits Double, Scores on Error.

Double Play Stops Phils.

If it hadn't been for Grimm's tumbling ability or Hornsby's knack of pivoting, the Phils would have had a run in the sixth when they exploded two hits. After Friberg's demise, O'Doul caromed a hit off the tips of Bell's glove. Klein then stepped in with his second blow—a single to right center which put O'Doul on third. Whitney bounced one to Bell, who underhanded it to Hornsby to force Klein at second. The Rajah in turn side armed the throw to Grimm, and Whitney was nailed, but only because Capt. Charley reached out and held the ball with one hand.

The first pass of the game gave the league champions a chance to accomplish something in the home sixth, but they neglected to function properly. The pass went to Root, who led off. English worked the count to 3 and 2 and trusted to the umpire's judgment on the next one. The arbiter surprised Woody by calling a third strike. Root went down to second on it, and was credited with a steal when Elliott, who didn't seem to know what was happening, intercepted McCurdy's throw. Heathcote was nailed on a grounder, Hurst to Elliott, and Klein made the third out a certainty by backing to the fence to pull in Hornsby's hard liner.

Cubs Fill Bases on Passes.

Elliott let the Cubs have a little fun in their portion of the seventh, but turned out the lights in time to avoid damage. He walked Wilson and Cuyler to start the inning. Grimm's sacrifice bunt shoved the runners to third and second. Bell grounded to short and Wilson was retired at the plate. Free passage for Hartnett filled the sacks. Cuyler didn't feel as if Root could come through in a pinch, so elected to steal his way to the plate. He wasn't successful.

The Phillies in the eighth broke out with a salvo that easily could have been made disastrous for the champions. McCurdy started the inning with a single and Southern was permitted to run for him. Elliott ran his string out to 3 and 2 and then fanned. At this point, Southern figured on a successful steal, but Hartnett's peg to English ruined the plan. Friberg then singled to right and hustled to third on O'Doul's looping single to center. This brought Klein into the center of activity, but he was set down for the third out on a roller to Hornsby.

English Gets Cubs' Third Hit.

Hit No. 3 for the Cubs didn't appear until the eighth. English produced it, a line drive through short, with one out. He stood on first while Klein was smothering Heathcote's fly. Then Elliott made several efforts to catch the runner napping off first, but his last throw was a wide one and before it could be recovered English was on third. He didn't go any farther. Hornsby flied to Sigman.

Another mild disturbance broke out in the Phillies' ninth. After two men had been set down Sigman drove one sharply to short, and it caromed off English's chest for a two bagger. Root then went to work on Thevenow and got him on a fly to Wilson.

Hack made an effort to bring and end to the argument in the Cub ninth, but his mates failed to coöperate. Hack opened the inning with a single between Hurst and Friberg. Cuyler's bunt nudged Hack to second. Grimm was purposely passed for a possible double play. It didn't appear. Bell instead hoisted a foul over third and Whitney took it. Then Hartnett closed the session with a pop to Thevenow in short center.

Phils Again Troublesome.

McCarthy's titleholders came up with another fielding thriller in the tenth to extricate Root from a dangerous spot. Davis started the inning with a Texas league single behind first base. Elliott bounced to Bell and the latter tried to force Davis at second, but pegged so poorly Hornsby couldn't hold the ball. Friberg tried to sacrifice, but Root dashed in for the bunt, scooped it up and tossed to Bell in time to get Davis at third. This brought up the dangerous O'Doul. He drove a wicked bounder to short, but English grabbed it, ran over to touch second and then shot it to Grimm for a double play. A few minutes later the Cubs broke up the show.

Yankees Whip Sox in Second of Series, 5-3

and was out, Autry to Smith, when the hit and run play went awry. Koenig flied to Jolley. Ruth dropped a high single in short left, but the hit and run again went amiss and Ruth was out at second, Autry to Smith.

After Jolley, Harris and Kamm had been disposed of in order in the first of the second, the Yanks came back to get a pair of runs in which they were aided somewhat by dame fortune. Gehrig walked, then Lazzeri sent a hot grounder in the direction of the second bag. Smith got it with one hand, stepped on second to force Gehrig, then threw to Clancy in time to double Lazzeri. Byrd beat out a single to deep short, and Chapman popped a high fly to short right which the brick wind carried to the foul line. Cissell, in a spirited effort to capture the ball, hit it with one of his knees and caused it to roll to the boxes. The thing went as a triple and Byrd scored the first run of the game. Dickey then doubled to left, scoring Chapman. Hoyt fanned.

Decision Upsets Sox.

The element of luck did not enter into Yank production in the third although the players probably will claim that the play was upset by one of Campbell's decisions at first. Combs grounded to Cissell and when Campbell ruled that he had beaten the throw to first the entire field and battery swarmed around the umpire with no results whatsoever. Koenig struck out, but Combs stole second while he was doing it. Ruth walked and the Babe and Combs moved up on a passed ball. Gehrig walked, filling the bases. Then Lazzeri doubled along the left foul line, scoring Combs and Ruth. Byrd grounded to Kamm and Gehrig was run down between third and home, Kamm to Autry to Kamm, Lazzeri taking third. Lazzeri and Byrd attempted a double steal, but Autry broke it up with a snap throw to Kamm who tagged Lazzeri as he sought to scramble back to third.

Cissell opened the fourth with a triple over Byrd's head and scored on Reynolds' sacrifice fly to Combs. Clancy also flied to Combs. Jolley doubled to center, but the inning was over when Harris popped a foul to Dickey.

Yanks' Long Hits Score One.

In their end of the fourth the Yankees did some long distace swatting, but were content with one run. Dickey got his second double after one was out, waited on second while Hoyt was flying to Reynolds, and ran home on Combs' mammoth triple to center. Koenig again struck out.

The Sox had some fun in the seventh, but only got one run out of it. Harris tripled with one down and scored when Koenig was charged with an error on Kamm's difficult grounder. Metzler batted for Smith and flied to Combs. Autry singled to left, Kamm going to third. Jeffries went to first to run for Autrey and Watwood batted for McKain. Byrd had to come in fast for Watwood's fly, but he got it, and the side was out.

Kamm's homer came in the ninth, after Hoyt had tossed out Jolley and Harris had fanned.

BROWNS DEFEAT SENATORS TO END LOSING STREAK

Stewart Stars in 4 to 2 Victory.

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—A five game losing streak for the Browns was ended today when they took the measure of the Senators, 4 to 2.

It was a pitchers' battle in which Walter Stewart, the Browns' star southpaw, registered his fourth victory of the campaign by not only outpitching Ad Liska, the Senator, but contributing a pair of timely hits. Stewart also stopped Buddy Myer's hitting streak, which had extended through all of Washington's fourteen games.

Blue and Manush, with three hits apiece, led the Browns, each driving in a tally, while Melillo got a homer inside the park to match one which Judge made earlier over the right field fence. Stewart, O'Rourke, McNeely and Melillo contracted fielding features for the Browns, as did Cronin for the Senators. Score:

Jones Prescribes an Easy Life for His Golf Squad

ABOARD S. S. MAURETANIA, May 3.—(AP)—Capt. Bobby Jones called his seven mates on the Walker cup team into conference for the first time today, but he was no Spartacus exhorting the gladiators.

"I want to break the news to you," he said, "that we have no engagements whatsoever until the international matches with the British, May 15 and 16. I have taken the liberty of declining all invitations to play golf other than our little practice rounds. I believe we can get rid of our sea legs better just among ourselves.

"We have a tough battle before us and I don't mind saying I'm not optimistic about the result."

The octet appeared to be in fine condition and excellent spirits with the exceptional of Roland Mackenzie, who had a touch of seasickness. The Mauretania rolled a good deal today and the inhabitants of "D" deck saw a lot of blue water over the portholes.

Part of the team is scheduled to leave the boat at Plymouth, but Jones and his party will go on to Southampton.

"Three more free meals," Bobby explained.

BY CHARLES NEVADA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., May 3.—[Special.]—Fourteen carnival records were smashed and three established this afternoon under the battering of nearly 1,000 schoolboy athletes from four states at the eighth annual Marquette university relays.

Froebel Scores 46 Points.

Froebel High school competitors of Gary, Ind., produced two of the most notable achievements. They piled up 46 points in the national public school class, more than any other entry in any division. Ed Wonsowicz, star pole vaulter, was one of Froebel's most talented performers.

Wonsowicz soared 13 feet 4 inches at the Ohio relays yesterday. Today he cleared 12 feet 8⅞ inches, almost a foot and one-half better than the existing Hilltop record.

Horace Mann, another Gary school, was second. Tilden Tech of Chicago kept Ralph Metcalfe, its Negro sprinter, out of the individual events in hope of building up its relay victories.

Mooseheart Wins in Open.

Mooseheart academy won in the open class, scoring 35½ points. De Paul of Chicago beat Loyola, its Chicago rival in the Catholic class, collecting 35 points, while Loyola was gathering 26.

Other record breaking feats included Kincaide's heave of 50 feet 9 inches for East Division High of Milwaukee in the shotput; Tilden Tech's time of :44 in the national 440 yard medley; Pfefferle's 129 feet 3 inches in the open discus throw; and the two hurdles performances by Sowers of Mooseheart and the colored star, Abrams, of Froebel. Abrams' time for the highs was better, being :15.9. Summaries:

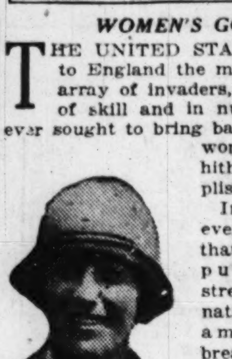
In the WAKE of the NEWS

WOMEN'S GOLF.

THE UNITED STATES has sent to England the most formidable array of invaders, both in point of skill and in numbers, which ever sought to bring back the British women's title, a hitherto unaccomplished feat.



GLENNA COLLETT.

Instead, however, of stressing that intention publicly and stretching international sporting amity to the breaking point with provisions and technicalities, our young women have gone about their business with rare tact. They probably have prepared the way for at least an outward show of cordiality, even though the British take their golf pretty seriously, if one of our number should bring back the coveted title.

We lost the first international match Thursday, 8½ to 6½. Our young women played that match after only one practice round over the difficult and, of course, unfamiliar links. In order to give all the Yankee players practice and experience, Miss Collett, Yankee captain, used as many players as possible instead of picking only those she considered strongest. That consideration possibly may have cost victory. On the other hand, the British captain, Miss Gourlay, had been roundly criticized at home for her selection of the defending team.

Now, The Wake naturally hopes for victory in all international sports contests, but we sometimes wonder whether we and our opponents do not prize victory too highly in the means adopted to attain it. Perhaps the women golfers have taught us something Surely they have lost no prestige by such a narrow defeat under the handicaps they willingly accepted.

Happy Day.

Sun a little higher,
  Breezes spicy sweet,
Meadows greenly signal
  Where the gypsies meet.
Sun a little warmer,
  Goldenly it falls
O'er the Hills-of-Morning
  Where a robin calls.

Life a little braver
  All along the line,
Where the drifts were savage
  Dandelions shine;
Thrushes in the hedges
  Pledge their love anew;
Fondly life discovers
  Only dreams come true.

Faith has spoken courage—
  Out of bondage now;
Time for high adventure—
  All the gods allow;
Sun a season higher,
  Song a joyous tide . . .
Happy world, where Maytime
  And her kind abide. Arrow-Head.

About Those White Sox.

HTW: Just because the White Sox are winning ball games, is that any reason to call them Bush-Whackers?

Another thing, Grimes being sent to Boston again just proves that in the end all Grimes are punished. Benny F.

Do You Remember Way Back When:

We went to the church social, mother ironed out our calico "dickey," gave us a dime to buy a box of paper collars, and it took only a minute to twist on our 10 cent bow tie and we were a "real sport"?—W. B. M., Michigan City, Ind.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

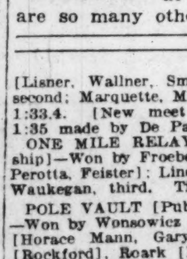
Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Would you like to see the major leagues try night baseball?

The Answers.

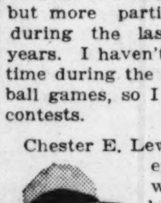
Jack C. Hohmann, 5917 North Paulina street, salesman—I would prefer that they leave the baseball situation as it is. It is more pleasant to visit a game during the day. I do not think it would be a success financially at this time, as there are so many other sports which occupy one's time in the evening.



Charles A. Pardee, Highland Park, Ill., accountant—I take in perhaps a half dozen games during the year, but I wouldn't be interested in night baseball. That would be stretching the sport out too much. I dont' believe it would develop into a paying proposition. There are so many other things to take up the evening hours.

Otto Niedermeyer, 6554 School street, electrician — I would like to see night baseball given a trial in Chicago. I have been interested in baseball ever since I was a kid, but more particularly during the last few years. I haven't much time during the day to spare for baseball games, so I would welcome night contests.

Chester E. Lewis, 2351 Cleveland avenue, attorney — I would like to see baseball tried out as a night sport. However, I do not think that it would have the thrill of a daytime performance because of the nocturnal surroundings. You know, there is something about the afternoon, with its sunshine, afternoon holiday atmosphere, and so on, that would be lost.



A. J. McLean, Detroit, Mich., builder—Why, certainly! The University of Detroit played night football last fall and the novelty was well supported. Give baseball a tryout at night; it might prove a step forward. As a curiosity alone, major league games played at night probably would prove successful.

Who but Sandow Could Lift a Horse with His Teeth?

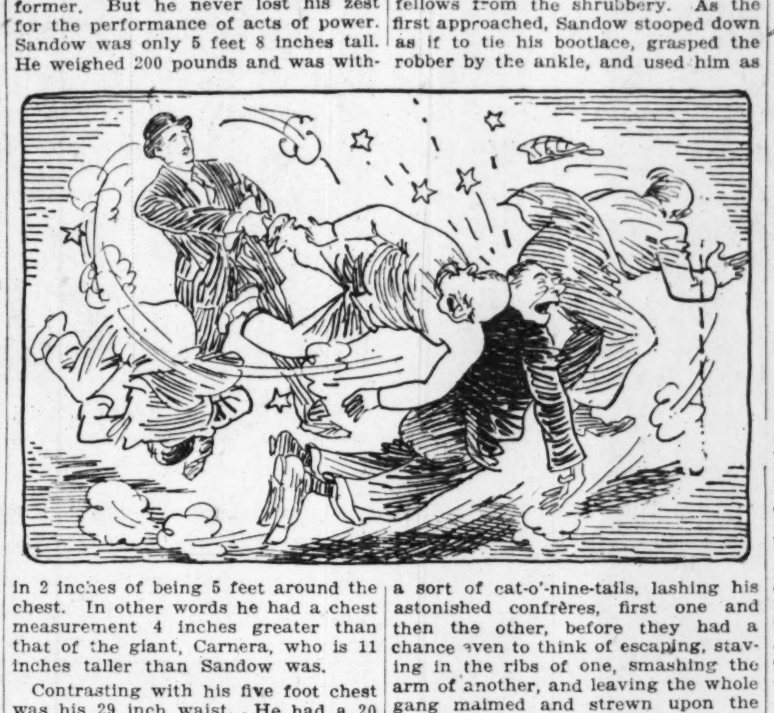
1904 one of Sandow's regular acts was to lift a plank on which sat ten women and four men in addition to all the cannon balls that could be piled on the apparatus.

In later years Sandow conducted a physical culture salon in London, which with publications and other health data which he distributed, added to his wealth amassed as a performer. But he never lost his zest for the performance of acts of power. Sandow was only 5 feet 8 inches tall. He weighed 200 pounds and was within 2 inches of being 5 feet around the chest. In other words he had a chest measurement 4 inches greater than that of the giant, Carnera, who is 11 inches taller than Sandow was.



Contrasting with his five foot chest was his 29 inch waist. He had a 20 inch neck "padded on either side with muscles about as big as a girl's wrists." Further, his admirers described his head as being "shaped exactly like the heads on the old statues of Hercules."

Here's a hot anecdote about Sandow, printed in a British magazine in 1900 as correspondence from a Parisian columnist:

Bandits Pick Out the Wrong Victim.

"A good story has just reached me of how Sandow's strength stood him in good stead among the bullies who have lately been infesting the Bois de Boulogne. Their method of action is to have one of the gang follow the proposed victim. At a given signal several others approach and close in on him, rob him, sometimes seriously injuring him. An additional 300 police now ride about the Bois on bicycles and keep a sharp lookout. But, despite this extra vigilance, the outrages continue.

"One day Sandow, walking in a rather remote avenue of the Bois, suddenly realized that he was being followed. He grasped the situation and apparently took no notice. As he expected, a signal called two or three fellows from the shrubbery. As the first approached, Sandow stooped down as if to tie his bootlace, grasped the robber by the ankle, and used him as a sort of cat-o'-nine-tails, lashing his astonished confrères, first one and then the other, before they had a chance even to think of escaping, staving in the ribs of one, smashing the arm of another, and leaving the whole gang maimed and strewn upon the ground. Then Sandow leisurely went on and remarked to the next policeman he met: 'You will find two or three men up there, more dead than alive. You'd better go and have a look at them.'"

Boys, there was a MAN!

During the days of his London health salon and in his lecture tours Sandow said that every man should live to be 100 years old or older providing he followed certain prescribed habits of living.

But Sandow died 42 years short of a hundred. When he was 56 years old he lifted an automobile out of a ditch single handed. In so doing he ruptured a blood vessel. Complications set in and on Oct. 14, 1925, he died—the strongest man that had ever lived.

RUMANIA LEADS POLAND IN DAVIS CUP PLAY, 2 TO 1

WARSAW, Poland, May 3.—(AP)—Rumania gained an edge today in the Davis cup series with Poland by winning the doubles match after splitting two singles matches yesterday. With a lead of two matches to one Rumania needs to win only one of the two singles tomorrow to win the right to face Great Britain in the second round.

Lombard Trackmen Beat Illinois College, 91-40

Galesburg, Ill., May 3.—[Special.]—Lombard swamped Illinois college, 91 to 40, in a dual track meet here today. One field record was broken, Burns of Lombard winning the 220 yard dash in :21.8, which is two seconds better than the mark set by Evar Swanson in 1924.

Hoosiers Score Another Victory Over Maroons

BADGER VARSITY CREW DEFEATS JUNIOR EIGHT

Madison, Wis., May 3.—[Special.]—The University of Wisconsin varsity crew received its first serious test of the spring season today, winning a five length victory over the junior varsity oarsmen in a two mile race on Lake Mendota. The winning time was given as 11:30, although unofficially the varsity was clocked in 11:07.

Fred Luehring, head of the University of Minnesota school of physical education, watched the race with George Little and expressed hopes of seeing crew introduced as a major sport at Minnesota.

The Badgers' next race will be against the University of Pennsylvania here May 24, over a two mile route.

Spoon and Midiron Play Must Be Accurate.

Golfers who hope to improve their game will find this article, and others of this series, beneficial. Inexperienced players are the models and as they learn, you, too, may acquire instruction. The progress of the four student golfers is reviewed after each lesson.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

HERBERT BRIN.

Herbert Brin moved along from chipping and putting to the longer shots with a golf club in his second lesson of THE TRIBUNE's novice golf contest. Jimmy Weager, the Edgewater professional, had the boy hitting some mighty respectable spoon and midiron shots before the lesson was over.

Starting Herbert with a midiron, Weager again emphasized the importance of the correct grip and stance which he had taught in the first lesson, and started him hitting three-quarter iron shots. To start Weager had Herbert bring the club up easily to the top, avoiding a jerking motion.

Weager impressed strongly on the lad the necessity of hitting from the inside out, to hit from inside the line of flight and to send the clubhead away from the body into the ball.

Straight Left Arm.

The professional achieved the stroke he wanted by having Herbert make his back swing by drawing the wrists in toward his right hip, keeping a straight left arm close to the body and at the top of the swing keeping the point of his right elbow rather well down. From that position Herbert swung easily and was hitting midiron and spoon shots straight, with just a shade of a hook.

Another principle Weager stressed was a slow back swing and, as Brin is a tall boy, he advised him to keep a stance with his feet about 18 inches apart. The biggest difficulty Herbert had was keeping his head still. He would look up—a fault of 99 per cent if not 100 per cent of all golfers—and top the shot, or duck his head and hit behind the ball. In each case the body followed the slight movement of the head and spoiled the arc of the swing.

Herbert was worried a bit at first because his midiron didn't get the ball up as well as had the mashie in his first lesson. He showed the result of the practice he has been taking, but a few things such as taking turf with the shot bothered him. After Jimmy told him that it was necessary to take a chip of dirt after the ball was hit in order to hit it properly he was much relieved.

Keeps Eye on Ball.

Some of the other bits of information gleaned from years of golf that Weager imparted to the boy were: To depress his wrists a bit instead of arching them, letting the arms hang down easily. To watch the back of the ball—or the spot the ball has been—for a fraction of a second after the impact. To swing the club through, letting the clubhead lead and do a big part of the work and to finish the stroke with the right arm extended.

Meanwhile Weager has been working on the pivot, teaching him to turn so his left heel would come up and the left knee break inward slightly at the top of the swing. The heel comes down at the start of the down swing so it is firmly on the ground at the time of impact with the ball, while the right heel comes up to let the body and arms follow the shot through.

YALE OARSMEN WIN BLACKWELL TROPHY REGATTA

Derby, Conn., May 3.—(AP)—A great Yale varsity crew raced the heart out of Columbia's champions here this evening to win by a length and a quarter, and regain the classic Blackwell cup. Pennsylvania, last from the start, trailed Columbia by four lengths.

Rich Glendon's Columbia crew held a smoother and more powerful Yale eight even throughout the first half of the two mile dash, but could not hold them when Stroke Woody Tappen decided to step on the gas. Yale's entries also carried off the 150 pound and junior varsity laurels, and Pennsylvania won the freshman sprint. Columbia, whose powerful oarsmen last year swept the Housatonic clean in all four races, could get no better than two lasts and two seconds.

The order of the finish and the times:

VARSITY [2 MILES]—Yale, 10:19; Columbia, 10:25; Penn, 10:40.

JUNIOR VARSITY [2 MILES]—Yale, 10:28; Columbia, 10:38; Penn, 10:45 4-5.

NOSTAW GALLOPS TO EASY VICTORY AT AURORA OVAL

Leads Break o' Dawn to Finish by 5 Lengths.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Nostaw, alias Lord Braedalbane, galloped away with the Merry Month handicap before a crowd of 10,000 at the Aurora race course yesterday. He smothered a field of handicap performers by five lengths with Break of Dawn Second and Tommy Lad third.

Nostaw carried the orange jacket of Miss Blanch Watson of Cleveland, and until Miss Watson purchased him at New Orleans last winter he had been known as Lord Braedalbane. Miss Watson didn't like the name, so she paid the jockey club $100 to have it tossed into the discard. Then she spelled out her own name backwards and gave the title to the 4 year old son of Whisk-Homestar.

Toys with Rivals.

It was the first race Lord Braedalbane has won since the boys around the stable began calling him Nostaw. They pronounce it "No Straw," but it doesn't seem to make any difference to the one time Derby colt. He showed he didn't think there was anything in a name by conquering the field in the Merry Month before it had headed into the stretch. Then he simply played with those behind him for the rest of the way home.

Nostaw's race was the fastest run of the afternoon, as he stepped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:46 4-5 and could have neared the track record had he been challenged at any time during the run down the stretch. In the early stages Break of Dawn was the leader. Nostaw was the choice of the big crowd and was at $5.40 in the betting. He paid $3.82 to place and $2.62 to show. Break of Dawn had also been stoutly backed.

Morsun Wins Sprint.

Sharing honors with Nostaw before one of the heaviest betting crowds that ever visited the Aurora track was Morsun, fleet son of Morvich-Sun Caris. He was at Aurora fresh from a brilliant campaign in California and he won the Spring Blossom purse. It was a dash at 5½ furlongs and after he sprinted into the lead at the end of the first furlong he clung to it, but was losing ground to Charm at every stride near the finish. Both Morsun and Charm had performed disappointingly on opening day, yet their sudden improvement did not fool the crowd, for there was a plunge on them right at post time.

Morsun was ridden by Jockey W. Moran, who gained fame at Agua Caliente during the winter. The lad gave the son of Morvich a hustling ride in the early stages, but let him loaf near the finish, when Charm all but stole the race away from him. The others in the struggle, which included Old Dutch, Flood Control, and Film, were never dangerous.

Morsun Pays $6.84.

Morsun reeled off the five and a half furlongs in 1:07, which is nothing startling. In the betting he paid $6.84 to win, $3.80 to place, and $2.78 to show. Charm paid $4.94 to place and $3.38 to show. First Mission was at $3.10 to show.

Peggy J., the daughter of Cloister-Marjorie McKay, turned in her second brilliant performance of the season when she galloped home eight lengths in front of six other juveniles to win the third race just as Jockey J. Leyland pleased. Talented Prince staggered home second, and Valedictory rushed up in the late stages to get third money. The crowd had remembered Peggy's triumph by 10 lengths on opening day and made her the odds on favorite. Her mutuel price was $3.22, and she stepped over the 4½ furlongs course in :54 4-5.

GALLANT KNIGHT RUNS FAST MILE IN DERBY TRIAL

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—[Special.]—Gallant Knight, chief dependence of the Audley Farm stable for the Kentucky Derby, ran a fast trial this morning when he stepped the mile over the Churchill Downs course in 1:39 2-5, the fastest mile any of the Derby candidates have shown over the course during the present training period. Jockey H. Schulte was astride the son of Bright Knight-Ethel Gray. He was accompanied the first half by Royal Yoeman.

The pair broke at the stand and moved the first quarter in :23 4-5. The half was covered in :45 4-5. Here Royal Yoeman was passed up, and at the three-quarters the clockers clicked 1:13 4-5. Schulte urged the brown colt the last quarter of the journey, and he finished resolutely.

FIELDS HARD AT WORK FOR BOUT WITH THOMPSON

Detroit, Mich., May 3.—[Special.]—Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, will not be unprepared when he defends his championship against Young Jack Thompson here next Friday. Despite the heat of the last few days Fields has been working at a fast clip, so hard, in fact, that his sparring mates have been wilting.

At the insistence of Manager Gig Rooney the welter champion has not had a letup in his training siege. It is Rooney's plan to keep his fighter's nose to the grindstone until a day before the fight.

Thompson, having taken off weight too rapidly in the early stages of his workouts, has been easing up, but will snap back into strenuous exercises with the start of the new week.

Culver Baseball, Track and Tennis Teams Win

Culver, Ind., May 3.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy athletes scored a slam in a triple bill this afternoon, winning from Crane Jr. college, Chicago, in track, 79 to 34; defeating Lake View High, Chicago, in baseball, 6 to 3, and triumphing over Riley High, South Bend, tennis team, 6 to 0. The cadet track men established two new meet records when England hurled the discus [illegible] ft. 6 inches, and the 880 yard relay team won in 1:32 1-5.

Keeps Hair Neat

Rich-looking, Orderly

IF your hair lacks natural gloss and lustre, or is difficult to keep in place it is very easy to give it that rich, glossy, refined and . . . orderly appearance . . . so essential to well-groomed men.

Just rub a little Glostora through your hair . . . once or twice a week . . . or after shampooing, and your hair will then stay, each day . . . just as you comb it.

Glostora softens the hair and makes it pliable. Then—even stubborn hair—will stay in place of its own accord.

It gives your hair that natural, rich, well-groomed effect, instead of leaving it stiff and artificial looking as pastes do.

Glostora also keeps the scalp soft, and the hair healthy by restoring the natural oils from which the hair derives its health, life, gloss and lustre.

Try it!—See how easy it is to keep your hair combed—any style you like—whether brushed lightly or combed down flat. If you want your hair to lie down particularly smooth and tight, after applying Glostora, simply moisten your hair with water before brushing it.

A large bottle of Glostora costs but a trifle at any drug store.

PREAKNESS RACE FRIDAY USHERS IN RICH STAKES

Gallant Fox Favored in $50,000 Event.

Baltimore, Md., May 3.—[Special.]—On next Friday afternoon at the ancient Pimlico race course will be run the $50,000 added Preakness stakes. It is the first of the great three year old stakes of the year, and coming eight days ahead of the Kentucky Derby, it will furnish a strong line on how the 56 year old Kentucky race will be run on the afternoon of May. 17.

For the Preakness, Gallant Fox, a son of Sir Galahad III., will be the favorite. If he should win the Preakness he will go into the Derby as a short priced favorites. And he is not likely to be a false favorite. He should go on to victory in the Derby because the opposition he is meeting in the Pimlico race looks much stronger than the western colts who will await a clash with him in the Derby.

Strong Field Named.

Others in the Preakness field will be Desert Light, Swinfield, Gone Away, Crack Brigade, Sweet Sentiment, Crazy Coot, Sarazen II., and probably several lesser lights. But it is to be strictly an eastern Preakness, with the possibility there will not be a western candidate at the barrier.

There are several western colts which might make it interesting for Gallant Fox in the Preakness. Among them are High Foot, Buckeye Poet, Tannery, and Sydney, but their owners have all decided to pass up the Preakness and wait for the Derby.

Should Gallant Fox or any colt that wins the Preakness turn out to be another superhorse, he could easily become the high money winning thoroughbred of all time almost before the summer season hits the half way mark. For besides the $50,000 prize of the Preakness, he has the $50,000 Kentucky Derby, $50,000 American Derby, $70,000 Arlington Classic, and $60,000 Belmont stakes to shoot at before mid-July. Later in the season there will be the Lawrence Realization, the Travers, the Latonia championship and the rich cup events.

Sande to Ride Favorite.

Gallant Fox will be ridden in the Preakness by the old turf idol, Earl Sande. The famous jockey is staging a comeback after being away from the saddle for more than a year. He rode Gallant Fox in the Wood Memorial stakes at Jamaica and demonstrated all his skill. Soon after the running of the race he was engaged to ride Gallant Fox in the Preakness and the Derby.

Whichone's absence from both the Preakness and Derby takes some of the interest away. He was eligible for the Preakness and was not nominated for the Derby. By passing up the Preakness with Whichone, Trainer Healey has indicated he will not bring the two year old champion of last year to the post until late June or early July.

Mills Open Defense of City Semi-Pro Ball Title Today

The race for the Chicago Semi-pro league title will start this afternoon with the champion Mills meeting the Chicago Giants at Mills stadium. The Mills team, which won the title last year, is intact with only one exception. George Biehl, who has played in the American association, will cover first base instead of Eddie Fallon. Manager Harley has picked Lefty Sullivan to pitch the opener.

Capt. Hasselman will lead his Clayton Smith team against the Colored All Stars at Logan Square park.

The B. B. R. Cubs will face the Hammond Collegians at Turner field, Hammond, Ind., in the feature game of the Midwest Baseball league. Eighteen other games are scheduled. They are:

Ely Herrins vs. Green Briars at Blues' park. Rogers Park at Blue Island. Bricklayers vs. Sportsmen A. C. at Chicago Heights. Union Printers vs. Evanston at Mason Park. Union Giants at Rock Island. OUTDOOR LIFE SHOW TO OPEN HERE TOMORROW

Coliseum Will Become Sportsman's Mecca.

BY BOB BECKER.

Chicago will become the vacation mart of the middle west tomorrow when the eighth annual outdoor life exposition opens in the Coliseum. Attractive "samples" of many kinds of vacations will be on display during the show, because bits of mountain, forest, and lakeland playgrounds are being brought to the exhibition to give prospective vacationists varied and easy choice.

The entire array of exhibits will be backed by hundreds of spruce and balsam trees to further the illusion that the visitor, upon entering the Coliseum, has left the city behind and is in the outdoors.

Exhibits from Canada.

Official representation from four states — Wisconsin, South Dakota, Michigan, and Minnesota—is an important feature of this year's show. Exhibits will be brought from Canada for the first time. They will come from the Nipigon river country, in Ontario; from the Rainy lake district, Fort William; the Canadian Soo, and other vacation lands across the line.

Another feature of the show which will contribute to its wilderness and vacation atmosphere is the group of wild animals which will be assembled against backgrounds of their natural habitation. This collection, scattered throughout the Coliseum, will be the largest ever brought to the outdoor show. The list includes bears, coyotes, muskrats, skunks, badgers, porcupines, mink, and beaver. The Wisconsin game farm will send a consignment of wild turkeys. To complete the wild life exhibits numerous tanks of black bass, muskellunge, and other game fish will be put on display.

Indian dances by a group of 12 Ojibways from northern Wisconsin, log rolling contests, and casting tournaments for boys and adults are among the entertainment features of the show.

To Hold Casting Tourney.

Tomorrow night Chicago's champion tournament casters will compete in the first of a series of contests which will be held during the week. The Chicago Fly Casting club and the Illinois and Lincoln Park clubs are arranging the tournament which will see a number of nationally known anglers in action. Frank Steel, the Chicagoan who holds the championship for dry fly casting at unknown distances; Eddie Davis, holder of the national half ounce bait casting title; Howard Chatt a member of the Illinois Casting club, and A. G. Wicklund and A. J. Naugle of the Lincoln Park club, are among the prominent local anglers in the contests. A casting tournament for boys under 16 years of age will be held next Saturday, the last day of the exposition.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

VIADUCT TO EASE TRAFFIC JAMS AT NORTH AND LAKE

Grade Separation to Be Built This Year.

BY HAL FOUST.

The intersection of the North avenue and the Lake street roads, in Elmhurst, has become one of the worst traffic bottle necks in the metropolitan area.

The need for a grade separation at the point was obvious and might have been contemplated while the construction of the North avenue road was being planned a few years ago. As it is, the state highway department has just completed the design and specifications for the structure and has yet to secure the necessary right of way.

However, District Highway Engineer Lamb said that the right of way will probably be acquired before midsummer and the grade separation constructed before cold weather ends the building season in the fall. Little can be done to relieve the situation this summer.

Lake Street on Trestle.

The design, as made public by State Highway Engineer Sheets, gives Lake street a 44 foot pavement on a trestle passing over North avenue. North avenue's two 20 foot strips of concrete will pass under the trestle at grade. There will be no ramps; village streets at grade will connect North and Lake for motorists who want to turn.

North avenue and Lake street are two of the busiest highways in the metropolitan area. North avenue, although with inadequate connections with Chicago streets, is the only 40 foot pavement from the city to the Fox river valley. The Lake street road, one of the oldest trails out of Chicago, serves Elgin and is part of a transcontinental route. Lake street last year was widened to within a mile of the intersection, and this widening is to be extended by the state to Elgin.

Under present conditions traffic from both roads crowd onto one 18 or 20 foot pavement for a little over a block. The motorist going west on North avenue squeezes into the one lane of traffic bound northwest on Lake street and then has to make a left turn through a lane of Chicago bound traffic onto a village street, and then a right turn from the village street onto North avenue again.

North and Mannheim.

Even with the construction of this grade separation, North avenue's connections with Chicago will be far from ideal. The traffic that now uses North avenue, notwithstanding the obstacles, is so heavy that the intersection with Mannheim road is a second bottle neck. The Chicago Motor club advocated a grade separation at this point for the state's biennium program, but the proposal was voted down by the road advisory committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago Regional Planning association.

Just west of 25th avenue there is an unpaved stretch at the site of a proposed grade separation with the Indiana Harbor Belt railroad tracks. These tracks will probably be elevated this year, permitting underpasses for Harrison and Madison streets and Washington boulevard, as well as for North avenue.

Just east of the River road, at the Soo tracks, is a gap on the southern of the two 20 foot pavement strips. This, according to the state highway department, was left open in contemplation of early construction of a grade separation with the railroad tracks. However, the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago Regional Planning association defeated an effort of the Chicago Motor club to get this grade separation on the state's construction program.

To Pave Gap.

Under present conditions two lanes of traffic moving westward on the north strip of pavement are met at the gap by two lanes of cars going east on the south strip. There are delays, confusion, and sometimes bent fenders, as all of the traffic has to crowd onto 20 feet of concrete. County Highway Engineer Quinlan and State Highway Engineer Sheets said last week that this gap will be paved in the near future.

Coming into Chicago, the North avenue road does not lead to adequate streets. The county's road program calls for the construction of Vinson road, paralleling the Soo tracks through the forest preserve, from North avenue to Augusta street. With the completion of Augusta this will form a fairly desirable western entrance to the city.

WAUKEGAN TO USE SUBSCRIPTIONS TO BUILD ROAD

Although a $175,000 bond issue for the purpose of building a lake front in Waukegan was twice defeated by the voters, the road is to be built anyway, it was announced by Waukegan city officials.

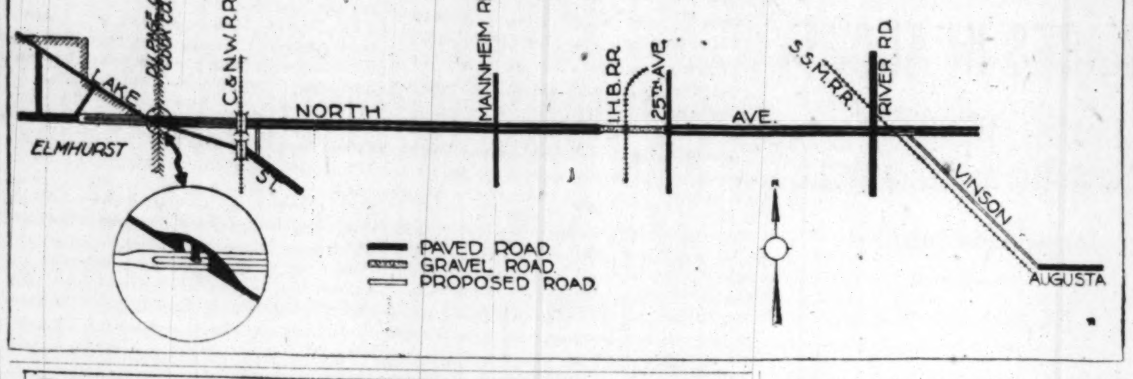
The road is to be constructed by popular subscription, most of the cost to be defrayed by business and professional men of Waukegan. Work is to be started within a week on the first section of the road, to cost $25,000.

This section will provide a thoroughfare leading to the Johnson Motor company plant, there being no road there at the present time. A temporary road was washed away by heavy storms some months back, and caused great inconvenience to several hundred employés.

Georgia Offers Reward for Traffic Light Shooters

ATHENS, Ga.—[U. P.]—There's a reward of $50 waiting here for information leading to the conviction of the person responsible for shooting out the traffic lights at a street intersection. The city council put up the money, lest the practice develop into a habit.

LAKE-NORTH GRADE SEPARATION



Sunday drivers, for the rest of the summer, will run into long and troublesome delays at the intersection of Lake street and North avenue, shown at the left side of the map. It has become one of the worst bottle necks in the metropolitan area. The map shows the location and a diagram of the proposed grade separation at this point, but it cannot be completed before fall. The map also shows other weak points in North avenue's connection with Chicago.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

VANDALS ATTACK CAR.

Chicago, May 1.—This is a hot one. I parked my car on State street in the alley between Wacker drive and Lake street, behind a parking station.

I went to a theater and I returned to the car, stepped on the starter, and no soap. I, being a mechanic, raised the hood and found all spark plug wires disconnected. I replaced the plugs and repeated operations and the car started, but soon quit. Then I found the fuel flow had been turned off. While I was working on the car one of the parking station attendants walked over and offered apologies for the officer on the beat, who, he said, was very angry because I parked in alley, which is against the law. I guess I was lucky there was no ax handy.
ALLEN MEHLMAN.

$2.50 FOR TIRE CHANGE.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 29.—My wife, while visiting in the city recently, found a flat tire on the front wheel of her car and sought garage assistance in changing the tire. She walked six blocks from the point where the flat tire was discovered to the Rex garage at 3229 Armitage, and after some discussion prevailed upon the proprietor to send a man back with her to change the tire. This cost $2.50. The work on the tire and the time of the trip consumed less than thirty minutes.

Had I not lived in Chicago fifteen years I would have felt justified in standing for the holdup, but it looks like this is too much of a penalty for a lady driver carrying an Indiana license in Illinois.
H. H. AKERS.

SHE CHARGES SHAKEDOWN.

Chicago, April 28.—THE TRIBUNE is to be highly congratulated on its editorial of April 21. The practice of shakedowns is a direct assault on the character of respectable citizens. Why does the public permit these insults? Because it is not the public united that is attacked, but the lone individual.

If they were united in one large body to force a discontinuance, then something could be accomplished. The police are arrogantly confident in their power, knowing that they have crooked politics to back them and to justify their acts under the much abused veil of "duty." That they are endangering the reputations of their victims by leaving them open to further insults from the filth loving and the evil minded seems to afford them much amusement.

Should more policemen get the same treatment as the notorious "Indian Joe" they would soon abandon this practice, which is no less than common highway robbery and blackmail. Isn't it ludicrous that the supposed guardians of our welfare are nothing less than common criminals, too yellow to fight real hardened criminals?

My fiancé and myself were taken to the Niles Center station and booked for disorderly conduct at 9:30 in the evening of April 20 for refusing to give a bribe. We were just coming back from a trip to Lake Geneva, and having turned off on the wrong road, we stopped the car with lights lit and engine running to try and find our location and to change places. The street was one located in a section of vacant property.

My companion was adjusting the front seat so that I could drive when the door of the car was rudely jerked open and a light flashed in our faces, and we were informed that we were under arrest for disorderly conduct.
MISS G. T.

REV. CRAWFORD IS VICTIM.

Naperville, Ill., April 28.—The public, I think, is entitled to know the following facts: While attending a banquet my car was left under Wacker drive, near but not within a parking concession. A policeman seen near the spot gave me a sense of security in leaving the car where I did.

However, on returning about 10 o'clock I found a door of the sedan had been forced open as with a violent thrust of a crowbar and the handle of the same door had been smashed off. I am convinced that this was not done by a thief trying to make away with the car, nor by any one backing into it. It was an act of maliciousness, and I am told that tires have been punctured and other damages done to other cars in this vicinity.
REV. J. O. CRAWFORD.

IN BROOKFIELD.

Chicago, May 1.—It seems as though small villages are still preying upon the motorists. I was passing through the village of Brookfield going thirty-five miles an hour when one of their motor police stopped me and said I was going forty-five.

I was arrested at this place once before and therefore was taking great pains not to exceed the speed limit. For this reason, I am positive I was not going forty-five.

I hope you will warn all motorists to steer clear of this town.
P. M.

IN RIVER GROVE.

Chicago, April 30.—My husband had an experience in River Grove that I think is well worth publishing so others can avoid it. He is a painter and has been working at the speedway. He parked his car at Thatcher and Grand avenues and rode the rest of the way to work with another painter.

When he returned for his car at 5 p. m. he discovered it was gone. He immediately notified the police and was told it had been towed to a garage. A woman in a coffee shop, according to the police, had reported the car had stood there for two days and two nights. The police patrolling this road knew better. They knew it was not a stolen car because it was locked and parked off the road. So what business did they have ordering it towed to a garage?

My husband had to pay $5 to the Thatcher garage and service station for the one block towing before he could recover his car.
MRS. H. F. SWANSON.

1929 LICENSE PLATES.

Chicago, May 2.—In regard to the articles in the newspapers on the arrest of employés of the National Garage Owners' association for towing cars out of vacant lots in the south shore district. Recently I had occasion to pass the lot at 71st street and Merrill avenue, where this arrest occurred, and noticed at that time five cars in the lot bearing 1929 licenses and numerous cars with no city vehicle tax.

If our police are so prompt in picking up other things, why can't they take care of these delinquent licenses? Recently my car was struck by a car bearing a 1929 license—and just try and trace the owner of a car with a 1929 license at this late date. Is this police protection?
W. D. G.

CALIFORNIA AVENUE.

Chicago, May 2.—For a point of information I would like to know why some of the vehicle tax money is not used to repair California avenue, between 39th and 36th streets. If there were a check on the autos that travel on this street morning and evening, it would be found that the boulevard has nothing to talk about, but they can go only at a slow pace or the car would be broken in two.

There is a hole at California avenue and 38th street that is 10 inches below the street level and cost me $4.80 for a broken spring, and I was traveling only eight miles an hour.

If some of the city officials had to travel over this street it would have been repaired before now, but as it is the public has to pay vehicle taxes and the officials repair side streets where there are about fifty autos in twenty-four hours.
E. K. HAVICE.

HARPER AND 54TH.

Chicago, April 30.—I would appreciate very much to have you investigate the condition of the northeast corner of 54th place and Harper avenue. There is a large sink hole just in the line of traffic, and one night recently several persons in our apartment counted fifty-four cars which had to stop to investigate damage resulting from dropping into this hole. Not only is it extremely annoying to listen to this continuous bumping and crashing, but it is also disastrous to tires and springs.
GEO. R. CLAY.

SLEIGH BELLS FOR AUTOS.

Newton, Ia., April 27.—I feel sure over half of the accidents can be avoided by having an electric bell on all automobiles that will ring automatically. I would suggest a bell sounding similar to a sleigh bell.

I have heard that at one time people were compelled by law to have sleigh bells. I never heard of any one kicking on the sound of sleigh bells. This is a life saving idea and for the good of humanity.

Now, I am not one fond of noise, but I prefer it to being a murderer of the people.
A. LISTER.

NO STREET LIGHTS.

Chicago, May 1.—I take it for granted that you are always championing the cause of the people. Won't you please get something done about the street lights at night in our neighborhood, which are out about four nights a week? It makes it very hard to drive without lighted streets, and untold accidents may result.

Why doesn't this great city of ours practice economy where it should be practiced? There are countless other places where they could eliminate a lot of expenses.

Please bring some of our city officials to their senses and have them quit this foolish nonsense.
MYRON GOLDENBERG.

FAVORS BRICK ROADS.

Iowa City, Ia., May 1. — Vitrified paving brick with the proper foundation and filler, without question has proven to be the longest lived and most economic type of highway surfacing.

Some of the brick pavements without tar filler and with only a sand base have proven longer lived than certain types of concrete paving. I refer now to the softer type of brick.

We know that some of the concrete highways have not come up to expectations. I believe vitrified brick should be given a more thorough trial in surfacing the highways which carry very heavy loads and heavy traffic. I believe up-to-date brick construction with proper base should be used in sections, for example, along the Lincoln highway in Illinois. At the same time, build a modern concrete surfaced section, adjoining it. The sections to be five miles or longer.

TRIBUNE GETS REPORTS OF SIX AUTO RACKETS

Police Order Drive on Extortionists.

Six complaints of rackets against motorists are published in today's Voice of Traffic.

A young woman, who requested that her name not be published, charges police near Niles Center tried to shake down her and her fiancé by placing an embarrassing complaint against them. They were arrested, she relates, when they stopped their car for a moment on a side road, with the motor running and lights on, to change places at the wheel.

"A Racket," says Chief.

The experience told by Miss G. T. is not uncommon. In most cases, the culprits enjoy a protection that resembles blackmail.

The Rev. J. O. Crawford of Naperville and Allen Mehlman, a mechanic, report that their cars were damaged while parked without paying a fee near places that charge a fee. Police Commissioner Russell ordered Deputy Commissioner Stege to investigate.

"It's a racket," said Commissioner Russell. "There's an organization that is trying to take the law into its own hands and force automobile owners to pay storage fees by sticking ice picks in tires on cars that have found free parking space. There will be some arrests and some men sentenced to cells before the police department ends its investigation."

$5 for Half Block Towing.

Mrs. H. F. Swanson relates how her husband, a painter, left his car parked in River Grove and the police ordered it towed to a garage a half block away, costing her husband $5.

A writer, whose name is withheld, alleges that he was falsely accused of speeding in Brookfield.

H. H. Akers, an oil company official of Indianapolis, writes that his wife was charged $2.50 by a Chicago garage for thirty minutes' work in changing a tire.

SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE

The New Oakland Eight is a colorful, thrilling car. It develops more power per pound of weight than any other automobile of comparable size. It displays qualities of acceleration, speed and power that few cars can match, regardless of price. It is exceptionally alert—exceptionally smart. It's the kind of car that people watch when it flashes by.

Yet the very features which give Oakland its superior performance also make it a remarkably reliable car. Its high power is applied to transmission and rear axle in such a smooth, even flow that strain on these parts is materially reduced. And because its reciprocating parts move at an unusually low rate for any given road speed, its engine life is unusually long.

The Oakland Eight embodies sixteen years' engineering experience with eight-cylinder automobiles. Its basic principles are proven principles. Its many advanced features make for simplicity and certainty of performance. And every car undergoes approximately 25,000 separate inspections while being manufactured!

That is why the New Oakland Eight is winning the respect and regard of owners. Mile after mile, month after month—it performs with that unfailing dependability which is, by far, the biggest factor in the continued enjoyment of an automobile.

BILLBOARDS ON HIGHWAYS HELD TRAFFIC HAZARD

State Seeks Opinion on Their Removal.

BY HAL FOUST.

State Highway Engineer Sheets last week requested Attorney General Carlstrom for an opinion on what the state can do to combat billboards on private property that interfere with traffic on the highways.

The highway officials have specific statutory authority to keep the rights of way clean of advertising signs, and Director Cleaveland of the department of public works has ordered this done. However, there are billboards on private property adjacent to the rights of way that are a menace to motorists as well as eyesores, and it is at these that Mr. Sheets is now aiming his ax.

Plans Test Case.

"If the attorney general's office can back me up," the highway engineer said, "I am willing to create a test case so that the Supreme court can determine whether the highway department has the power to prohibit signs on private property that interfere with traffic.

"I'm no lawyer, but it's my understanding that the state has been restrained from such policing by the constitutional restriction on confiscation without compensation. The property owners have contended that their title to their land included a right to lease it for billboards.

''Maybe Mr. Carlstrom can find a way to get around this. I've heard an argument—it seems sound to me—that the state under its police powers might bar billboards that are traffic hazards, that it would not be confiscation of private property because the value of the land as a site for billboards is not an inherent asset of the property, but is an asset entirely contingent upon its propinquity to a public highway."

Would Clear Obstruction.

With the authority he seeks, Mr. Sheets could tear down such signs as "STOP, eat at Ma's place," "CAUTION, use Blah's lotion after shaving," "DANGER, use Dr. Quack's hair tonic"—the billboards designed to catch the motorists' eyes by their similarity to traffic directions. In this same category are billboards with color and shape resembling the official highway signs.

With the authority he seeks, Mr. Sheets could also clear approaches to railroad crossings and highway intersections where the view is obstructed so as to create a hazard.

Places of obvious danger on the roads have become favorite sites for billboards. In the last few years, the speed of traffic has increased so much that motorists no longer read the advertisements that blot the scenery where the pavement permits stepping on the gas. The signboards for this reason are beginning to cluster around sharp turns, busy intersections, or railroad grade crossings where the driver must apply his brakes.

A Clutter of Signs.

An example of such a preferred billboard site is found on the Waukegan road, just south of Glenview, at a dangerous crossing of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad. The pavement extends north and south; the rails lie northwest and southeast.

On approaching the crossing from the south, a motorist must turn his head sharply over his right shoulder to see if there are any trains coming from the southeast. His eyes meet a clutter of billboards in the acute angle between the highway and the railroad. If there is a train approaching, he will probably see it between the billboards, but there is a chance that he won't because of the signs.

Even with the rights of way kept clean and the hazardous billboards removed from private property, there will remain much to be desired in clearing the scenery on the roads around Chicago. The demand for such beautification becomes more urgent each year as more families are devoting much of their leisure and obtaining much of their recreation by riding over the rural pavements.

In the Fox river valley, for example, the natural beauty of the river road between Dundee and St. Charles has been well nearly ruined for pleasure driving by commercial placards that mar the landscape.

On the west coast, the Automobile Club of Southern California with the coöperation of women's clubs, chambers of commerce, and service clubs, is leading a campaign for the restoration of highway scenery that might be worthy of emulation.

Unsightly Stands.

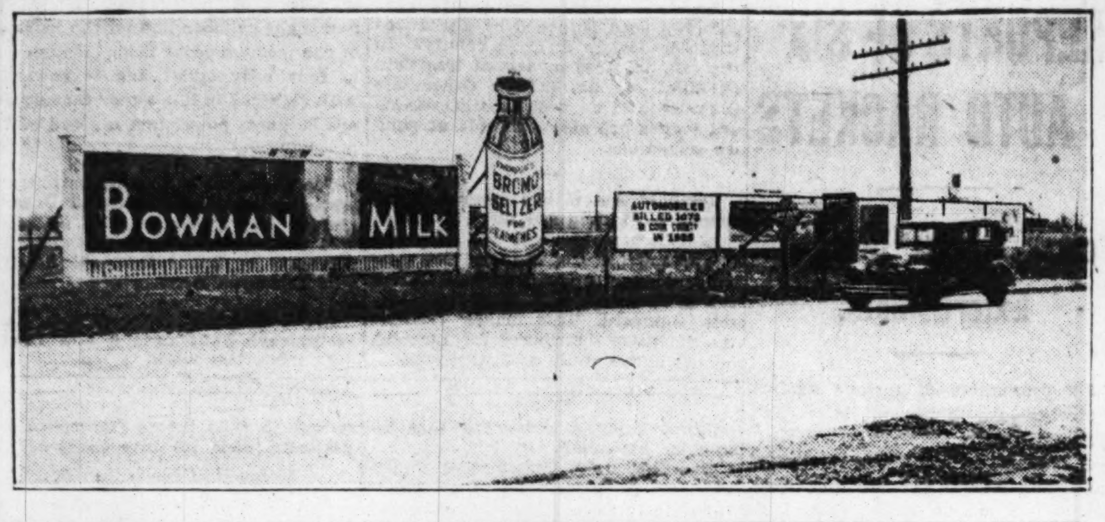
Following the example set by California, the owners of property along the Joliet road might form an improvement club, those along Roosevelt road might organize another, and so on for the rest of the main highways leading into Chicago. The members of each group could agree among themselves not to lease billboard sites. In California, it was found that many signs had been erected on private property without the owners' consent.

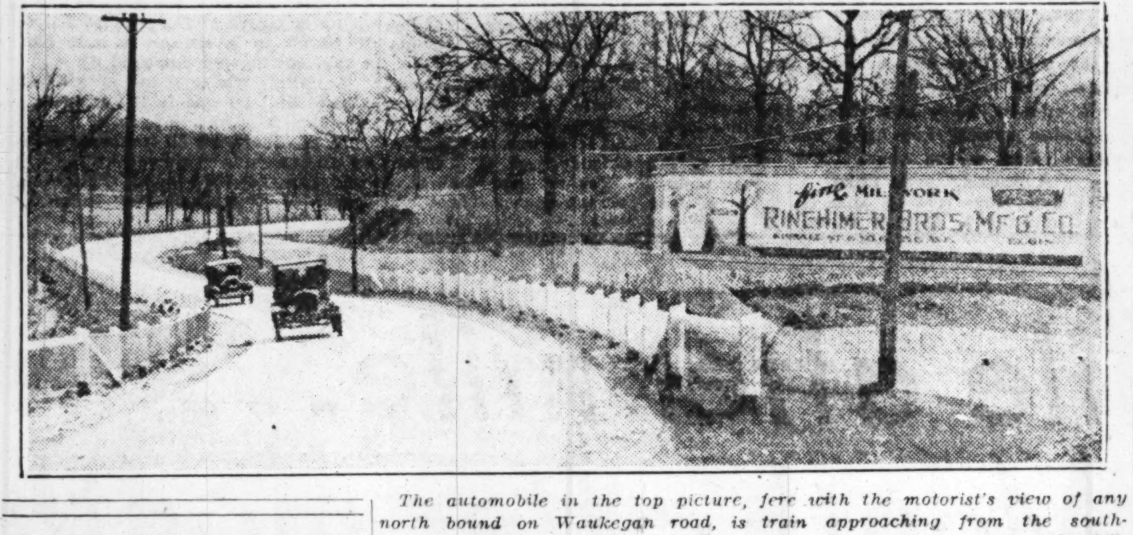
In addition to the billboards, the roads around Chicago are marred in places by unsightly hot dog stands and illy kept filling stations, some in buildings little better than shacks or shanties. The proprietors could improve their businesses and at the same time save the public from a few eye sores by using some paint on the buildings and, at little expense, develop grass plots, flower beds, and neat gravel entrances.

NOISY BUMPERS.

It is not necessary to strike some obstruction to apply a force to the bumper. Like the rest of the car, it is subjected to numerous forces — bumps in the road, weaving of the frame, and the like—in ordinary service. The result, often, is a loosening of the connections. That means a noisy bumper unless the connections are made tight. Sometimes the noise is rather hard to locate.

BILLBOARD TRAFFIC HAZARDS





The automobile in the top picture, north bound on Waukegan road, is approaching a dangerous grade crossing over the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Pacific railroad just south of Glenview. Behind the clutter of billboards are the tracks. The signs—one advertising traffic safety—interfere with the motorist's view of any train approaching from the southeast. In the lower picture the billboard shown mars the view of a wooded knoll on the river trail north of Elgin, where the scenery was a delight to the motoring public before it became pockmarked with commercial placards. The Tribune's photographer reported that this particular sign is in the Kane county forest preserve.

AUTO TRUCK MEN OPEN CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION

Would Save Industry from Unwise Laws.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is conducting what it calls a "truck educational campaign." Its primary purpose is to save the motor transportation industry from unwise legislative proposals that would handicap commerce and raise the cost to the consumers of those articles now hauled over the pavements.

Much of this proposed legislation is advocated by politicians inspired by the hostility of passenger car drivers toward heavy machines that hog the road and the right of way, taking advantage of their superior weight. President Seanor of the Motor Truck Distributors' Association of Illinois believes that the truck owners can relieve this hostility by better training of their drivers. The unpopularity of the truck, he said, is caused in the most part by a small percentage of drivers who operate their machines without skill or without courtesy.

Truck Production Up.

Also a source of public ill will that the operators' organization seeks to correct is the noise on the highways at night, the bang and rattle of poorly maintained trucks that disturb the sleep of farmers and villagers, particularly in metropolitan areas where night hauling has developed due to congestion on the pavements in the daytime.

Notwithstanding handicaps, production of heavy-duty motor trucks for the first quarter of this year shows a steady, normal increase over 1928 and 1927, although the figures are somewhat below the abnormal peak reached in the corresponding period last year.

Tonnage originating on motor trucks now exceeds that carried by railroads, although the greater average haul by rail gives the railroads an annual ton-mileage of over 400,000,000,000 as compared with over 20,000,000,000 by truck.

The tax burdens being shouldered by the motor truck and their effect upon the progress and growth of the industry at large is one of the main topics of the campaign.

Pay Plenty of Taxes.

"One of the most erroneous and insidious statements made about commercial vehicle operation is that 'trucks ride free on the highways which are built by the public'," said Alfred Reeves, general manager of the national chamber.

"Recent tabulations made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce from official government figures," he continued, "show conclusively that the truck not only is paying its share of highway construction and maintenance expense in registration fees, but that over the country generally it is paying nearly twice as much per vehicle compared with the passenger automobile.

"Commercial vehicles compose only thirteen per cent of the nation's automobiles, and pay more than twenty-five per cent of the total registration receipts for all cars. The large annual mileage of trucks and their higher rate of gasoline consumption compared with the passenger car make this differential still greater."

Motor trucks are effecting big savings in moving perishable fruits and vegetables, according to a recent series of reports by the United States department of agriculture.

Motor trucks are moving 65 per cent of the fruit in southern Indiana, 23 per cent in southern Illinois, 53 per cent in Virginia, and 16 per cent in Delaware and Maryland.

U. S. Must Decide on Roads in Western States

Another highway problem has come up to congress for financial solution. More than one-half of all the land in the eleven western states is public domain, and to cut through these lands and connect with main highways on either side is obviously a government responsibility, and not one for the states in which public lands are located. In these eleven western states the people of the United States own 51 per cent of the land, and west of Denver public domain is 38 per cent of the entire area.

SOLID TIRES ON TRUCKS RAPIDLY DISAPPEARING

Survey Reveals Steady Decline.

The laws of economics are ridding the streets and highways of solid tired motor trucks that destroy pavements. The operators are substituting the pneumatic wheel cushions to obtain greater efficiency from their machines.

The Chicago Motor Coach company reports that the laws of economics are causing them to change their equipment long before required under the act of the last session of legislature requiring all buses to have air filled tires by next summer.

Statistics compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce reveal that solid tires were standard equipment on only 4.7 per cent of the 805,000 trucks manufactured in the United States in 1929.

Greater Speed.

The significance of this trend is indicated by the fact that in 1921 more than 29 per cent of the trucks manufactured were equipped with the solid or cushion type tire.

The steady decline in the use of solid tired freight vehicles is attributed by executives of the chamber to economic factors such as increased speed and lowered maintenance costs which result from the use of pneumatic tires.

The automobile chamber of commerce contends that the economical advantages of pneumatic tires have become so generally recognized as to obviate the necessity for legislation solid tires from the streets and highways.

"I can't agree with the chamber as far as Chicago is concerned," said Ald. Thomas J. Bowler [41st], chairman of the council committee on traffic and safety. "It's probably true that the hard tires are disappearing, but it takes only one such truck to break a pavement. We ought to get rid of all the hard tired trucks, treating them just as we have the buses, giving the owners a year or so to change their equipment.

Houses Being Shaken.

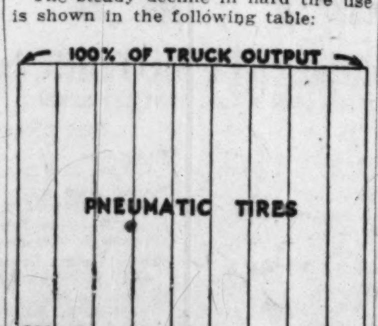
"Out in my ward, not only are the pavements being torn to pieces but also the houses are being shaken and plaster jarred from the walls by hard tired trucks loaded with building material. Every time one of these trucks hits a hole in the pavement—making that hole bigger—the earth is shaken for a radius of a half block.

"It would not be practical for us to have to lay pavements thick enough to bear the pounding of these few trucks with solid tires. The practical thing for us to do is to make all vehicles use pneumatic tires so that our pavement money can be extended over more mileage and so existing pavement can be saved."

The Table of Decline.

Further evidence of the growing disfavor of solid tired trucks is the fact that nearly 75 per cent of the 570,372 solid tires produced in 1929 were used for replacement purposes, while only 142,592 cushion tires were used to equip new trucks and trailers.

The steady decline in hard tire use is shown in the following table:



The figures are on authority of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

AVIATION

PLAN INNOVATION FOR CHICAGO AIR RACES IN AUGUST

Race Horse Start Will Be Attempted.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Plans for a spectacle of speed and color unsurpassed by previous air carnivals are being laid by the Chicago air race committee, directors of the 1930 national air races. The annual speed classic will be held in Chicago beginning Aug. 23 and continuing until Sept. 1.

The glamour of the Derby race track and the automobile speedway will be added to the dash of flying to give this year's air tourney even more of a gala air than last year's races. The race committee has definitely decided that all speed events around the closed courses will begin with a "race horse" start.

Pilots in Silks.

Planes sporting a band of brilliant color around their fuselages will be taxied into "paddocks" before the grand stands and will remain in the stalls with their propellers whirling until they are called to perform in the air. Sitting in the cockpits coaxing the motors to warm will be pilots clad in bright silk flying togs, distinguished from one another by the colors of their helmets and blouses.

Instead of taking off singly as in past races, the ships will line up abreast and jump into the air simultaneously at the drop of a flag. They will shoot away to a pylon a few miles away and from this point start the roaring grind around the triangular course before the spectators. The race events committee, under the direction of Maj. R. W. Schroeder, will endeavor to use the race horse start in practically all the races in the tournament.

Capt. Maxwell M. Copening, secretary of the Chicago Air Race corporation, recently announced that the prize purse for the races will approximate $100,000. The handsome prize awards are expected to stimulate great interest among the pilots and manufacturers of aircraft.

Land Speed Trophy.

Plans are being made to accommodate a daily crowd of 100,000 people at the Curtiss-Wright airport north of Glenview, where the races will be held. A preliminary survey shows that areas adjacent to the airport will be sufficient for parking approximately 40,000 automobiles without interfering with traffic to and from the scene of activity.

The races will mark the inauguration of the race trophy offered by Charles Edwin Thompson, Cleveland air accessories manufacturer, for the world's record speed for land planes. The donor of the trophy expects the race to attain the same importance in the field of land planes as the Schneider cup race now holds in the realm of seaplanes.

The nation's foremost woman flyers are preparing to enter the women's air Derby, which will likely be the first on the program of cross-country races. Among those who have already signified their intention of taking part are Amelia Earhart, Ruth Elder, trans-Atlantic flyers; Elinor Smith, holder of the women's altitude record; Bobby Trout, Phoebe Omlie; Louise Thaden, winner of last year's Derby, and Ruth Nichols.

Other cross-country races are being planned from Los Angeles, New York, Miami, Toronto, Seattle and other points on the rim of the North American continent. Canadian and Mexican army flyers are due to fly here to take part in the nine day program.

DOX May Be Here.

The air race directors are negotiating with foreign governments to send representative types of aircraft to Chicago for the American classic, and the city plans to greet the giant Dornier DOX on one day of the race meet if the German ship is able to make its contemplated trans-Atlantic flight in August.

Safety will be the keynote of a national air parley to be held in conjunction with the races. Legislators from each state, air law experts, air line operators, and transportation officials will meet in a three day convention to evolve a nation-wide system of unified air control.

AVIATION QUESTIONS

Questions relating to aviation are answered in this section by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, famous world war flyer, who formerly held the world's altitude record. Inquiries should be adressed to the Aviation Department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Q.—What is a "closed course" race, referred to in connection with national air races, and how are these races held?—J. M. L., Antioch.

A.—Airplanes which fly in a circuit, finishing where they start, are said to be flying a closed course. Usually, during the national air races, the planes are routed around three pylons on a triangular course. There are usually two courses, one ten miles in length and the other five miles in length. The planes take off before the spectators and circle the pylons until they have covered 50 miles or 100 miles according to the nature of the race.

Q.—What is the name of the glider with a motor which was flown at St. Louis several weeks ago? Can it fly very far?—A. D., Chicago.

A.—The "power" glider, so-called, which you refer to is the "Aeronca." It is an ordinary glider, converted to carry a two cylinder motor. It recently successfully completed a 10 hour flight from Cincinnati to New York.

Q.—What air transportation service is there between Chicago and New York City? If more than one, which carries the greater number of passengers?—B. D. G., Oxford, Ind.

A.—At present there is no air passenger service between Chicago and New York. The National Air Transport company, which flys the mail between these two points, recently announced plans for the inauguration of such a service, but since the announcement this company has been taken over by United Aircraft and Transport corporation. This company plans a service which will cover the continent between New York and San Francisco passing through Chicago. Passenger service now extends only to Cleveland where air passengers are placed on trains for the remainder of the trip. For further information on air travel address the Air Travel bureau, Palmer house arcade, Chicago.

Q.—Can either a man or woman with a private pilot's license enter any race at the 1930 National Air Races in August at the Glenview airport? Where can I get a copy of the rules for these races —E. B., Chicago.

A.—Flyers holding only private pilot's licenses may not take part in many races at the 1930 national meet. The race committee is planning some events for the less experienced pilots, although most of the races will be open only to seasoned flyers. You may obtain some information regarding rules of the races from the headquarters of the race committee in the Sherman hotel. These rules have not been completed as yet. They will be published in this section when they have been completed.

Scandinavian Countries Plan Greater Air Service

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN. — Vastly improved air services will closely link the Scandinavian countries with the continent this spring. Throughout the winter a German mail pilot has made daily trips between Copenhagen and the continent, railway connections being made for the air passengers at Copenhagen for points north in the Scandinavian countries. This service will be increased soon, however, by German, French, Danish, and Dutch air liners, which will fly to Berlin, Paris, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and London.

Air Line Flies Million Miles Without Injury

Pilots of the Stout Air Lines recently completed their millionth mile of flying with passengers between Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago and on aerial tours and special chartered flights. In attaining this mileage record Stout pilots and the mechanics who serviced the transport planes have set a safety record of carrying more than 107,000 passengers without an injury to a passenger, Stout officials announced.

NK RATE CUT ILS TO BESTIR NDON MARKET

merican Issues in Public Favor.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NDON, May 3.—A disappointing period, with an absence of signs pansion and public support, de- the surprise of a reduction of ank rate to three per cent, was experience of the London stock et this week.

erally speaking business was in gible proportions all around the . Sufficient time has not elapsed the lower bank rate to show its effect. Following closely behind ilar movement at Brussels and mpanied by reductions in the rates at New York and Paris, rday's decision bore every ap- ance of central bank coöperation. ith the international financial sit- on, as represented by the foreign ange, appearing none too favor- , and continental competition for in the London bullion market pre- ing any supplies of gold reaching Bank of England from that re, other factors, such as the e depression and the fall of com- ity prices to record low levels, the downward tendency of money s abroad, are still showing all at has been recently stressed when ng up bank rate possibilities.

Foreign Action Ahead.

t is evident that these factors, com- d with the desire to assist in coming international loan opera- s of an important nature were dy influential in the Bank of Eng- d's policy. Knowledge that inter- onal financing on an extensive e is in early prospect has tended ampen public enthusiasm, bring- uncertainty as to what power the d markets will have in absorbing huge amounts of the loans on the .

actors of moderate importance ap- r to have undue effect on market ditions here, such as, for instance, poor success of this week's British ion of the Sao Paulo coffee reali- on loan. Although issued under auspices of three of the leading king firms, THE TRIBUNE under- nds that between 80 and 85 per t of the bonds offered here have n left with the underwriters. The e price of 96 is considered too h in city circles.

Loan Less Attractive.

t was originally proposed to issue loan at 93, but the sponsors of the erican portion of the loan did not rove of this figure, and conse- ntly the higher rate was decided . This considerably reduced the action of the loan for the general estor, since both the existing Sao ulo 7½ per cent coffee loan and the Paulo 8 per cent loan are obtain- e at present market prices, offer- considerably better returns on the ney.

Elsewhere the market has not yet y recovered from the disappoint- nt created by the additional budget ation. With much new financing ad, there is obviously no particu- scope for extended speculation, d adjustments in securities offering mparatively high yields will follow a matter of course. The under- rent of the past year's financial iculties is still running strongly, d the fact that the industrials are ving only fractionally and not alto- ther favorably, indicates that cheap ney possesses drawbacks.

Transfer Funds to U. S.

The tendency of some large in- stors to transfer considerable por- ns of their funds into American urities is continuing, and this has reased the demand for the dollar change on a quiet market, causing e sterling dollar rate in New York l to lag.

Both newspaper advice and an in- asing number of stock exchange uses are recommending stocks and ares likely to interest clients con- ering the expediency of placing part their money at least out of the ch of the present Labor govern- nt. All of which indicates the gen- al lack of confidence, bringing un- tainty and marked weakness in se- rities, with the additional factor of ia revolt news affecting the senti- nt of the market.

Favorable comments are current in y circles of the action of the legal n of Minnear & Falconer of Stone- en, Scotland, in sending a com- nication to all members of the Unit- States congress urging the pay- nt by the federal government of the diated bonds of southern states.

ARIS MARKET IMPROVES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ARIS, May 3.—News of the reduc- of discount rates at New York, and London led to a sharp re- ry on the Paris market after a e of dull and irregular sessions. bourse particularly was impressed the unexpected reduction of the k of France rate to 2½ per cent— lowest since 1898—and the general d of the market has sensibly im- ved.

ench financial circles are express- satisfaction at the measure, indi- ng that there is an abundance of ney on the Paris market. This eral reduction in rates is also con- dered as a stimulus to economic ac- ity and as insuring the forthcoming ng plan bonds and other impor- international loans might find a orable field. It also shows a per- entente between the big interna- al markets.

Oppose Boost in Switching District Rates

BY SCRUTATOR.

The city of Chicago has joined at last with shippers in a fight to prevent the interstate commerce commission from advancing rates on rail shipments originating and reaching destination within the Chicago switching district.

It may be advisable here to outline just what the switching district is. It is an area some forty miles in length, extending from Evanston to northern Indiana, and from seven to fifteen miles wide. Thirty-five railroads with a total trackage of 5,000 miles are in this district and serve 4,000 private industries with sidings.

By a natural process of growth this switching district has over some decades become in effect a complete transportation system. It has conditions peculiar to itself, existing nowhere else. This transportation system has until recently had a rate structure agreeable both to shippers and to carriers.

Cites Importance of Rates.

The public generally does not concern itself directly with the intricate troubles of roads and shippers over rates. But the importance of switching rates in the district may be exemplified by a few figures. About 40 per cent of all railroad car movements in the area are estimated to be intradistrict. Fifteen hundred or more carloads of freight a day are moved from one point to another within this district.

The rates originally fixed by the shippers and carriers in 1911 were 1.5 cents a hundred pounds when the shipment was confined to one or two of the rail lines and a half cent additional for each other road over whose tracks the shipment passed. The minimum rate for a one or two line haul was $9 a car then. Since 1911 there have been increases that brought the one and two line hauls to $15 a car minimum and three line hauls to $18 minimum.

These increases since 1911, it may be fair to say, bring the switching rates at least on a par with the increase in general price level indexes. But the new scale of rates proposed by the commerce commission's examiners specifies 3 cents a hundred for one line, 3.5 cents for two line, and 4 cents for multiple line hauls.

Estimate Extra Cost.

To make the matter as little complicated as possible, and to avoid a surplus of statistical matter, it may be stated that the shippers estimate the additional cost to Chicago district industries, if they continue to use the service at higher rates, will be three million dollars annually.

The interstate commerce commission itself was apparently the promoter of a reconsideration of the rates. Some years ago it made a mileage scale on steel articles from Pittsburgh to points in the middle west. The minimum rate for a minimum haul was 6 cents a hundred pounds. Because hauls could be made within the switching district at lower rates for distances even longer than the minimum ten miles on the mileage scale made to fit different conditions, there were suggestions, it is claimed, from the commission that carriers bring the naturally made rates into line with those formulated by the adding machine method.

See Congestion Burden.

A large majority of the district shipping is intrastate. Some authorities estimate it at 75 per cent of the whole. There seems legal warrant for the interstate commerce commission, however, to overrule any action that may be taken by the Illinois commerce commission toward holding the present rate levels.

The shippers do not admit the railroad contentions, in the hearings before the commission examiners, that the business is or has been unprofitable. The city would not like to see hundreds, if not thousands, of truckloads of freight passing daily over its streets and adding to congestion, which will almost surely occur with higher rail rates in the district. Neither the shipping element nor the city cares to assume a new burden of several million dollars a year until it is more clearly demonstrated that the railroads are not making money on switching at present rates.

Sheet & Tube Officials Say Dividends Will Be Stopped

Youngstown, O., May 3.—(AP)—Officials of Youngstown Sheet and Tube company said today that their action in suspending from transfer all stocks whose holders demanded cash in connection with the company's pending merger with Bethlehem Steel corporation will mean that such stock is prohibited from voting and also from drawing dividends. Observers saw two possibilities if this statement holds good. One is that at a meeting of directors called for Monday directors representing the Cyrus S. Eaton interests may be ousted. Eaton is leader of the anti-merger forces. At a recent directors' meeting four members, including Eaton himself, were elected to represent his interests. The other question is the ability or willingness of merger opponents to continue a long legal battle while millions of dollars' worth of their stock was drawing no income from dividends.

RAPID STRIDES TAKEN BY CITY IN RECENT YEARS

Resources Boon to Growing Markets.

BY O. A. MATHER.

R. A. WOOD.
[Moffett Photo.]

Perhaps few persons, either Chicagoans or residents of the middle west, realize the great strides in finance made by the western metropolis in the last few years. And perhaps few envision to what extent Chicago, already the country's second financial center, may develop in the future.

So, for information as to what has been accomplished and what lies ahead, a chat with R. Arthur Wood, president of the Chicago Stock exchange, may prove interesting and instructive. For this dynamic and redheaded broker has played considerable part in bringing Chicago to the fore as a financial center. For three years he has been head of the stock exchange and, unless all signs fail, is about to have a fourth term thrust upon him.

"The resources of the central states, with Chicago the geographical center, have been merely tapped," Mr. Wood starts right out. "Why, Chicago is just starting to become an important lending center, and the stock exchange, although it has made rapid strides in recent years, has still its real growth ahead.

Attains World Prominence.

"Chicago has the greatest hinterland of agricultural and mineral resources in the world. And her industrial growth and commercial development are yet in their infancy, although they have attained a position of world importance. With the waterways development through the great lakes and St. Lawrence river and through the Illinois and Mississippi rivers to the gulf, our commerce and industry will assume a decidedly international flavor.

"The center of population in this country, as well as the economic centers of manufacturing, agriculture, mineral production, and transportation, all have moved steadily until they are now near Chicago. Its great development cannot be shown better than by pointing to comparative figures in population growth. In 1920 there were approximately 3,583,000 persons in the metropolitan area of Chicago. Today, according to estimates based on the work of the 1930 federal census now being taken, the population of this same area is around 4,600,000, an increase of 25 per cent in ten years.

"Historically, financial development always follows development in other directions. The central states area only recently has found itself able to finance programs of progress without going to other centers for money. Leading banks, investment houses, and the stock exchange are fully cognizant of their obligations to the people of this territory in developing Chicago financially.

Public Utility Center.

"The banks are growing, expanding, merging and doing everything possible to serve better the central states area and eventually the nation. Investment bankers and underwriters of stock and bond issues are financing new industries. They have made Chicago the world's center of public utility operation. In bond offerings Chicago's growth has been steady. In 1927 the proportion of bond offerings in Chicago was 10 per cent of the nation's total; in 1928 it was 12 per cent; and by 1929 it had risen to 14½ per cent."

But Mr. Wood could go on indefinitely about the future of Chicago and the middle west. So we divert him to his hobby, the stock exchange, and get a new burst of enthusiasm.

"The Chicago stock exchange is doing its part in all this broad program by improving its machinery for providing a market place for securities of central states—and now national—corporations. We have ex-

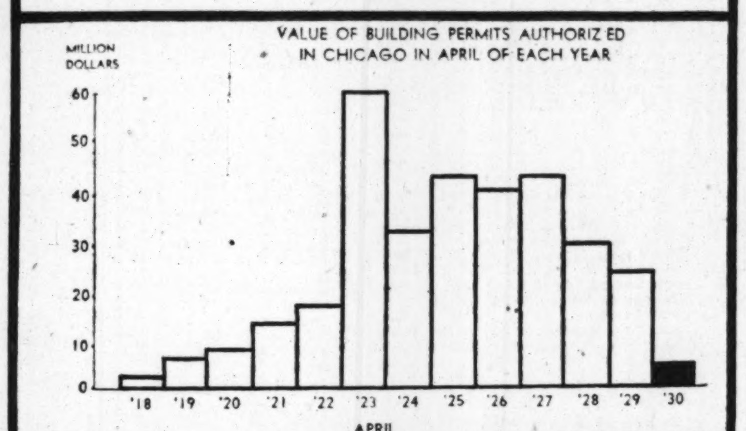
CHICAGO BUILDING PERMITS IN APRIL WERE LOWEST FOR THE MONTH SINCE 1918



NEW BOND FINANCING IS LED BY INDUSTRIALS; TOTAL IS $171,743,000

New York, May 3.—New bond financing increased this week, issues aggregating $171,743,000 being placed on the market. This compares with $144,527,000 in the previous week, $96,537,000 two weeks ago, and $192,530,000 three weeks ago. A year ago new bonds in the amount of only $58,777,500 were offered. This week's volume was the third largest weekly total for the year to date.

Industrial financing again led the list with $84,000,000, comprising four issues, one of which consisted of $55,000,000 Fox Film corporation 6 per cent one year notes priced at par. The next largest issue, $15,000,000 United States Rubber company 6s, carried a three year maturity. The issue of $12,000,000 Houston Oil Company of Texas 5½s, will mature in ten years.

Foreign financing this week consisted of two issues, the larger of which was the $35,000,000 state of Sao Paulo (Brazil) coffee devalorization loan 7s, which were offered on a 7.56 per cent basis. This was the American portion of the £20,000,000 international loan for the Sao Paulo coffee industry. It was reported more than 90 per cent subscribed on the first day of offering.

The issue of $10,000,000 Piedmont Hydro-Electric company 6½s, which was brought out on a 7.20 per cent basis, was the first Italian financing done here in about two years.

STERN REVIEW INTERPRETS NEW SECURITY ISSUES

The slight increase in new security issues in April over March is interpreted by Lawrence Stern & Co. as an indication of moderate improvement in general conditions in the investment market.

According to the company's survey, new security offerings last month totaled $900,745,278, compared with $867,313 in March and $548,364 in April, 1929. Bond offering in April amounted to $683,759,874, and stock offerings $216,985,404, as compared with $640,637,936 for bonds and $226,675,500 for stocks in March. That the increase over 1929 was due almost entirely to new bond financing is shown by the fact that in April, 1929, new bond offerings aggregated $317,461,636 and stock offerings $230,903,129.

Natural Gas Industry . . .
CONSIDERABLE stress has been laid upon the possibilities in the natural gas industry.
Admittedly the natural gas industry has an unusually attractive future.
Many investors desiring to participate in the profits of this great industry are uncertain as to the companies in which to place their funds.
In the early stages of any industry many new issues are floated and many investors buy them hoping for quick profits.
Frequently such stocks are sold far above their intrinsic worth, and can frequently be purchased later for a fraction of the prices at which they are originally offered.
With the latest issue of McNeel's Financial Service a Special Investment Analysis has been published on the natural gas industry, with definite recommendations as to which stocks to purchase and which ones to avoid.
This Special Analysis is available, free upon request, to investors interested in the possibilities in the natural gas field.

SAYS "TALKIES" CUT INCOME OF LYON & HEALY

The "talkies" and the crash in the stock market were responsible for the drastic decline in earnings last year of Lyon & Healy, Inc., one of the country's leading music houses, Raymond E. Durham, president of the company, says in his annual report to stockholders.

R. E. DURHAM.

"A large percentage of professional musicians are out of work because of the talking picture and other developments," President Durham says. The detrimental effect on the business is being offset to some extent, he explained, by the increasing use of musical instruments by schools and school children.

The company has made a recovery during the present year. Retail sales in the Chicago district for the month of April were the largest in the history of the company, being 21 per cent ahead of last year. Total piano sales last month were 66 per cent greater than those of April, 1929.

Consolidated net profit of the company last year was $12,580 as compared with $364,477 in 1928. Net operating profit was $152,303, against $501,321.

Gives Advice to 250,000 on Investing

BY HOWARD WOOD.

[Director Investors' Guide.]

THE TRIBUNE Investors' Guide, which will celebrate its sixteenth birthday anniversary May 25, yesterday passed the quarter million mark in total number of letters received.

When this department made its first appearance in the financial section of THE TRIBUNE in 1914 an announcement at the head of the column stated that the Investors' Guide was "intended especially for persons of moderate means, aiming to give advice on the selection of sound securities."

This aim has not been changed, and the gradually increasing number of readers who have taken advantage of the service indicates that it has filled a need. Last year 20,571 letters were received, a new high record for one year, and approximately 25 per cent more than the year before, and mail receipts so far in 1930 have been heavier than a year ago.

Letters from All States.

In the first year of the service two-thirds of the inquiries came from residents of Chicago and suburbs, and practically all the rest from the region directly tributary. Gradually this proportion has been altered. The number of letters coming from the city and suburbs is larger, but the increase in inquiries from downstate in Illinois and from Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana, Iowa, and Michigan has been greater. Letters come not only from every state in the Union and from Canada, but from Europe, South America, and the orient.

In order that the increasing number of inquiries may be serviced promptly and in a satisfactory manner the staff of the Investors' Guide has been enlarged and its library and files expanded to include all the available data on thousands of corporations whose securities have a general market as well as information on tens of thousands of smaller companies. In its work this bureau has the coöperation of reputable dealers and organizations throughout the country.

Aid Against Fraud.

One of the chief functions of the Investors' Guide is to protect the inexperienced investor against fraud. A great many readers who have written in time have been given information that enabled them to protect their savings from unscrupulous promoters. At times when some fraudulent enterprise has been particularly active the Investors' Guide by coöperating with other agencies has been able to assist in scotching it.

The majority of the letters contain requests for definite information. A few of them are petitions for tips on how to speculate. The Investors' Guide is conducted primarily to aid investors. It will not dispense tips or suggest the purchase of specific securities or guess whether the market price of a stock is going up or down.

All correspondence addressed to the Investors' Guide is held in strict confidence. The published letters are accompanied only by initials of the writer. Never is the name of the writer or his address revealed.

Many Repeat Requests.

Each of the quarter million letters received has not come from a different reader. Many have written more than once, and some never make an investment without first consulting the Investors' Guide. On the other hand, many who daily follow the column in THE TRIBUNE have not taken advantage of the personal service offered. Often a letter will state "I have read the Investors' Guide regularly, and now I have a question to ask."

The Investors' Guide will continue to be one of the public service features of the Daily and Sunday TRIBUNE.

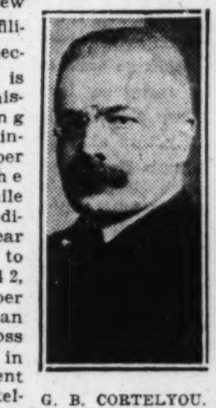
CONSOLIDATED GAS SYSTEM HAS RECORD BUDGET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 3.—The construction budget of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York and its affiliated gas and electric companies is the largest in history, totaling $139,761,342, an increase of 34 per cent over the 1929 budget, while actual expenditures this year are estimated to be $97,561,042, which is 9 per cent more than the actual gross expenditure in 1929, President George B. Cortelyou has announced.



G. B. CORTELYOU.

The budget provides for certain developments which will take more than a year to complete, so that the total expenditures scheduled will run over into 1931 in the amount of $42,000,000. The budget reflects the continued growth and expansion that is expected in the residential and suburban sections of the city.

CHICAGO STOCKS SAG AMID WILD TRADING SCENE

Volume Sets Short Session Peak.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Prices broke sharply on the Chicago stock board yesterday under the weight of heavy selling and amid scenes of wild trading unwitnessed since the hectic days of the October-November crash last fall. The ticker fell behind the market during the early trades and at the close was 18 minutes late.

Stock sales for the day set a new high record for a Saturday session. Transactions amounted to 562,000 shares in the two hour period, which compares with the previous record for a short session of 340,000 shares, which was established on Aug. 3 last year.

Bond trading also broke all previous marks for short trading days. The value of bonds sold was $314,000, most of which was accounted for by trades in Insull Utility debentures, which dropped an even 2 points to close at 105½.

Utilities Hard Hit.

Principal sufferers in the heavy liquidation were the utility stocks, which were scaled down from 1 to 10 points and in one instance to 22½ points. Cities Service broke through to 28 as the bears hammered with unrelenting persistency. Middle West Utilities was knocked down to 30 and closed within a fraction of its low for the day. Cities Service finally rallied from its bottom to finish at 30, off 8⅜ for the day.

Among the volatile utility issues losses ranged higher than 20 points. Public Service no par skidded 22⅛ points to close at 300. Commonwealth Edison fell 9. United Gas dropped 8. Losses by other issues in the group were North American Light and Power, 2¼; Central and Southwest, 4½; Associated Telephone, 1⅞; Central Public Service, 2.

Industrial stocks did not receive the punishment given the utility shares but were uniformly lower at the close. Majestic Household sustained a loss of 5 points on sales of 14,000, closing a point above its low. A. M. Castle fell 3½ on comparatively light trade. Electric Household lost 4, and Gleaner Combine was down 3. Pressure on Jefferson Electric was particularly severe and the issue went down to 43, a net loss of 8 points under heavy realizing.

Holds Up Well.

General Theaters was comparatively steady. Offerings in the stocks were readily absorbed by its backers, and at the close the price was off less than a point on sales of 16,000 shares.

Grigsby-Grunow retreated nearly 3 to 19. Next to Middle West it was the most active issue on the board with sales of approximately 50,000 shares.

Motor shares escaped with losses of

DEL. & HUDSON WITHDRAWS ITS MERGER PETITION

Marks End of Independent Rail Programs.

Washington, D. C., May 3.—(AP)—The last of the great independent plans for consolidation of railroads in eastern territory which has been submitted to the interstate commerce commission was withdrawn today when the Delaware and Hudson company gave formal notice that it would no longer ask consideration of a petition it filed last year.

The Delaware and Hudson company, which is now a holding corporation not engaged in railroad operation, asked authority to acquire among others the New Haven, Boston and Maine, Reading, and Western Maryland systems, proposing to operate them all as a collection of terminal transportation agencies reaching the north Atlantic coast and serving equally all east and west trunk lines.

Change in Status.

In notifying the commission of the corporation's intent, H. T. Newcomb, its chief counsel, explained that the holding corporation, in view of its recent relinquishment of railroad operation and the creation of an independent unit to run the Delaware and Hudson system, was no longer under jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission.

At the time of filing its original proposal to acquire the eastern terminals, the Delaware and Hudson company was a railroad operating enterprise, the letter continued, and as such was subject to the commission's control in the matter of acquiring any additional railroad property.

Other Withdrawals.

Since its character had changed and it had become solely an enterprise for holding securities of other corporations, the Delaware and Hudson company would not object to the dismissal of its petition, so it asked that no prejudice be set up against any future renewal of the proceeding.

Previous to the Delaware and Hudson proposal today, the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Baltimore and Ohio and the Wabash railroads have all withdrawn from the commission petitions by which they sought authority to acquire ownership of various other railroads in the northeast portion of the United States.

Earnings.

In the final analysis the important question for any investor to decide before putting his money into a proposition is just this:

"Is this company likely to make money?"

Because such a decision must be largely a matter of judgment based on known facts, the success of any investment depends largely upon the wisdom and experience of the investor. If he does not possess the necessary information he must know how to get it and when he does get it he must know how to correlate it.

A stockholder is a participant. He is a part owner, no matter whether he owns stock in a small town shoe store or U. S. Steel corporation. In either case he, as part owner, is interested in just one thing: "Is my company going to earn money?" If his company makes profits his equity will return him an income on the capital invested, and if it makes more than a moderate profit not only will he receive an income, but his equity will probably increase in value so that if he chooses he may sell his share in the business for more than he paid for it.

The bondholder, although he bears an entirely different relation to the company, is likewise interested primarily in its earnings. His problem is to lend his money at a reasonable rate of interest to an organization that will be in a position to pay its debts when they fall due. If it earns money it can probably do this. If not its creditors may have to foreclose, and foreclosures are not profitable for creditors.

Too many investors, particularly investors in stock, base their decisions on market tips rather than on a sound appraisal of the investment offered. They see a few trees and not the forest.

"Consolidated Amalgamated common is going up," one will say. "My brother-in-law's uncle says there's a big pool behind it and they expect it to rise twenty points."

Such tips are worse than useless. They're dangerous. Participants in any pool that is powerful enough to manipulate the market price of a stock successfully are not foolish enough to peddle their secrets to friends and relatives. Any information disseminated by manipulators is passed out for their own ends. It only seems to leak out.

Letters that come to the Investors' Guide indicate that the little fellow usually gets the right tip at the wrong time.

Top yesterday, $11.10; average, $10.15.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: 19,000 cattle, 48,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep.

Meager week-end hog receipts were hardly large enough to establish quotations after directs had been deducted from the supply. Poor quality forced the top and average lower at $10.15 and $10.00, respectively, but quotations were fully steady, considering the kind of stock offered.

Eastern buyers searched the yards for light weights eligible to $10.20@10.30 on Friday, but had to return their orders unfilled, owing to the absence of top kinds. Only pen holders remained at the close.

July Light, $10.40.

Light hogs for July delivery sold at $10.40 on the futures market yesterday, within 10c of the high point earlier in the week. Trading in other months was slow, while the "to arrive" market was almost at a standstill, due to the fairly large supply at western markets, which may indicate an increase at Chicago early next week.

September light were bid $10.25 and offered at $10.35 at the close. May mediums were offered at $10.10, June mediums at $10.40, and September mediums at $10.30. Bids for September heavy ranged up to $10.10. Light hogs for Monday and Tuesday were bid $10.15 on the "to arrive" market. Mediums carried bids of $10.00, and heavy $9.75, at the close.

Fluctuations in the cash trade were mild during the last week, with total receipts almost exactly the same as a week ago. The general average price of hogs figured $9.95, the same as the preceding week's average, while total receipts at 129,900 compared with 127,101 a week earlier.

A slight improvement in the market for fresh pork on the local trade, coupled with broader eastern demand for hogs, were the controlling factors. Outsiders bought 21 per cent of arrivals, against 18 per cent a week ago and 18 per cent a year ago.

The largest cattle receipts since middle of last January forced prices to among the lowest levels in several years during the week. The general average at $11.45 equals the lowest since June, 1927, and compares with $13.65 a year ago and with $13.00 two years ago.

Phenomenal Gains in Lambs.

The phenomenal advance in the lamb market last week carried the top for wool lambs from $10.10 to $11.10 in five days. Closing sales were highest since middle of March and $1.25@1.50 above the low day ten days ago. Bullish reports from Colorado and Nebraska were largely responsible for the upturn. These two states have fewer lambs on hand than at this time in 1929. Three months ago Colorado and Nebraska were feeding 2,050,000, against 1,580,000 on the same date in 1929. A slight gain in prices on the wholesale trade added zest to trading toward the end of the week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 48,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 24,188 cattle, 27,622 hogs, and 23,796 sheep a week ago and 14,745 cattle, 41,308 hogs, and 21,437 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 45,000 cattle 120,000 hogs, and 82,000 sheep, against 40,888 cattle, 106,811 hogs, and 77,425 sheep a year ago.

AMERICA MAY TAKE THIRD OF REPARATION LOAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS, Belgium, May 3.—Having agreed for the most part on how they are going to handle the first German annuity loan, which by the new theory of reparations embodied in the Young plan will go to market like any commercial issue, the bankers of nine countries have wound up conversations with each other and the International bank people here.

But the amounts to be floated by the several countries are fixed more or less, although they will depend to some degree on later developments. The American market will be called on to take slightly less than 30 per cent of the $300,000,000 loan or something in the vicinity of $90,000,000. In American circles close to the International bank it is considered that this refutes the charges that a vast proportion of the loan would be "dumped" in America.

France appears to take about the same amount; if anything, slightly more, while the English will handle only about $50,000,000 and the Germans $5,000,000 or $10,000,000. The Dutch will take the large slice among the neutrals with something between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000, and the Swiss around $10,000,000.

RAPID STRIDES TAKEN BY CITY IN RECENT YEARS

Resources Prove Boon to Growing Markets.

tended or authorized our quotation ticker service to 40 important cities from coast to coast, making it possible for investors all over the country to keep informed on Chicago listed securities.

"The great press associations are carrying our daily tables of sales to the important newspapers throughout the country. Our membership now includes firms with headquarters and offices in more than 200 important cities of the world and new firms are coming in all the time. In recent months, twenty-four brokerage firms outside of Chicago purchased exchange seats.

Ranks Second.

"So, the Chicago exchange has become the largest securities market in the country outside of New York city. Our volume reached more than 82,000,000 shares during 1929, or more than twice the previous record year of 1928. This year for the first four months, our share volume has passed 29,000,000 shares, compared with 21,000,000 in the first four months of 1928, an increase of 40 per cent.

"Our bond trading in the first four months of this year was nearly seven times that of the same period last year. There can be no question but that the Chicago exchange will grow in bond trading, as well as in stock trading.

"Prior to 1928 there had never been a half million share day on the Chicago exchange and in 1928 there was only one such day. But in 1929 there were 23 days on which trading was 500,000 shares or more. On three of these days the volume exceeded 1,000,000 shares, reaching a peak on one day of 1,220,000 shares

"But we have just begun our work. We expect to be doing a million shares a day before long and we believe trading of some three or four million shares a day in a few years will be a common experience."

Folks, Meet Mr. Wood.

What sort of person is Mr. Wood? Well, over on the stock exchange floor they call him "Art." But he dominates that floor without being domineering. He isn't suave; in fact, he can be brutally frank and hardboiled when occasion demands, but he has keen judgment and so doesn't hurt others' feelings. He's of more than average height, stocky of build, and radiates enthusiasm.

He likes golf and plays a lot of it—in fact, he is vice president of the Western Golf association and a member of several golf clubs around Chicago. But his game is only ordinary; he drives with his irons. They say he's a better musician than golfer. He has a good voice and in a crowd chooses the songs and leads the singing.

He was born in Chicago in 1886 and was reared "back o' the yards," as his father was an old time cattle merchant and an associate of Gustavus F. Swift in pioneering the meat packing business. As a youth he attended Hyde Park High school and then studied agriculture at the University of Wisconsin. He put his training into practice by starting an apple ranch in Washington — and went "broke." So he returned to Chicago in 1916 and entered the securities business, first with McNear & Co., then with F. M. Zeiler & Co., and recently as partner in Clement, Curtis & Co.

Still Picks Apples.

He did much better in the securities business. He purchased a stock exchange membership in 1918 for $1,100 and saw it worth $110,000 last August. During that interval he traded for himself and accumulated a comfortable fortune. But he still owns the old apple ranch, where he puts in his vacation every year and superintends harvesting his apple crop—when there is any.

Wood was first elected president of the Chicago exchange in 1927, and transactions perked up to 10,000,000 shares that year. He was reëlected in 1928 and 1929, and sales last year topped 82,000,000 shares. The membership in three years has increased from 235 to 470.

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

Utility Average.

The average for utility shares has now receded to a point below where it stood a year ago at this time, eliminating all of the advance since the end of January this year. The anomaly in this situation lies in the fact that utility companies in general have shown gains over 1929 months, both in output and earnings, a fact which is not true of business generally.

Frightened?

To the few calm observers in Wall street yesterday it seemed that the market was suffering more from fright than anything else, but the fear uppermost in everybody's mind was that something of the hysteria which accompanied the break of last autumn might develop again.

Disappoints Some.

Not a few traders were disappointed over the American Light and Traction statement for the March quarter. Net income of $2,786,629, after charges, depreciation, federal taxes, etc., was equal to $3.73 a share after preferred dividends. In the corresponding three months last year the company earned $3.71 a share.

Humble Oil.

Outside of profit taking there is nothing in the way of Humble Oil. This stock has done well ever since the first of the year. Officials of the corporation are optimistic over the general outlook.

BUSINESS OF U. S. MUST GO AHEAD, WHITE ASSERTS

F. EDSON WHITE.

"Business simply cannot stay back in a country where there are 100,000,000 earners and spenders of money," was the assertion made yesterday by F. Edson White, president of Armour & Co., in a statement wherein he expressed confidence in the outlook for business.

"I have discussed the immediate outlook with various men in whose judgment I have a great faith," Mr. White continued, "and I find there is a general feeling that conditions have improved greatly in the last month, and that the second quarter will show a marked improvement over the first.

"The biggest factor in prosperity is new wealth, represented by crops and other products of the soil like minerals and lumber. When the spring planting is done and when the early harvest commences, new wealth begins pouring into circulation and the demand for manufactured goods grows."

Charge Brokerage Firms with Perpetrating Fraud

New York, May 3.—(AP)—A temporary injunction restraining two stock brokerage firms, Hansell & Co., Inc., and Howard F. Hansell and A. Newton Plummer, from further dealings in securities was issued today by the Supreme court. The state bureau of securities charges that the brokers perpetrated a fraud in broadcasting misleading information concerning stock of the Crex Carpet company which has factories in St. Paul, Minn., and Newburgh, N. Y. They are alleged to have put out circulars giving false information regarding the carpet company's assets, earnings and unfilled orders, in an attempt to create a larger market price for 15,000 shares of stock they held.

Expect Reduction Soon in Reichsbank Discount Rate

BERLIN, May 3.—(AP)—The reduction of the discount rate of the Reichsbank to 4½ per cent within a few days was regarded today as probable in reliably informed financial circles. The rate is now 5 per cent. Announcement, it was said, should be forthcoming not later than next Wednesday.

OTIS ELEVATOR.

Sales of Otis Elevator company were higher for the first quarter than for the similar period of 1929, W. D. Baldwin, chairman of the board, has announced. Stockholders have approved the recommendation to make the preferred stock cumulative, which previously had been noncumulative. Otis has carried $50,000,000 of uncompleted business into the present year.

GAS CONTRACTS.

A. F. Hockenbeamer, president of the Pacific Gas and Electric company, announces that the company's entry into the natural gas field has already yielded contracts with an annual revenue of approximately $1,000,000.

FINDS LEADING STOCKS DECLINE 1.1% IN APRIL

The composite market appraisal of 100 leading common stocks declined $391,457,000, or 1.1 per cent, in April, to $34,466,240,000 at the end of the month, according to Frazier, Jelke & Co. This is the first decline recorded in any month since November, 1929.

Of the thirteen groups represented in the 100 issues, seven gained and six lost ground. The biggest decline, $465,339,000, or 21.6 per cent, was recorded in the mining group. Exclusive of this decline, which results from the recessions experienced by only seven issues, the entire group registers a small gain. Other losses were 7.8 per cent in the motors, 7.4 per cent in the rails, 6.5 per cent in the steels, 6.3 per cent in the railroad equipments, and 5.8 per cent in the chemicals.

The largest gain for the month was in the amusement classification, which appreciated 9.3 per cent. Other gains were 9 per cent in the oils, 7.4 per cent in the foods, 5.1 per cent in the utilities, 3.8 per cent in the chain store issues, 1.3 per cent in the miscellaneous industrials, and 1.2 per cent in the electrical equipments.

UTILITY SHARES BREAK IN WEAK CURB MARKET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, N. Y., May 3.—In the most active Saturday market of the year to date liquidation of all classes of curb stocks, but particularly the utilities, was resumed on a large scale and new low prices for the week and in many instances for the year were recorded. So voluminous was the pressure of business that the ticket was thrown more than an hour behind the trading on the floor.

What happened in today's short session is illustrated by the performance of some of the leaders. Electric Bond and Share opened with 16,900 shares at 102⅛, off some 3 points and subsequently broke some 6 points more. American Super-Power opened with 11,700 shares at 33⅛, off nearly a point, and dropped about 3 points more.

ARRANGE BIG MERGER IN DYE, CHEMICAL FIELD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 2.—Arrangements for the formation of a new company through the consolidation of the dyestuffs and chemical division of the Newport company and the International Printing Ink corporation was announced today by Dillon, Read & Co., bankers for both companies.

The consolidated company will have assets of more than $25,000,000 and an authorized capitalization of 350,000 shares of cumulative preferred stock, $100 par value, and 2,000,000 shares of common stock without par value, of which there will be outstanding 119,239 shares of preferred and 657,844 shares of common stock. Net earnings of the combined properties available for dividends totaled $3,500,000 last year.

The Newport company, formed in 1929, produces a diversified list of organic and inorganic chemicals. It has three plants producing more than 275 products. The International Printing Ink corporation is one of the largest manufacturers of printing ink and allied products. It has nine plants in this country.

MADLENER TAKES EXECUTIVE POST WITH CORN FIRM

Expansion of the activities of National Cornstalk Processes, Inc., and plans to add five additional working plants in the corn belt are revealed in the announcement that Albert F. Madlener Jr., will become associated with the company in an executive capacity on May 15. Mr. Madlener has resigned as assistant vice president of the Cosmopolitan State Bank of Chicago.

Mr. Madlener is a son-in-law of Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, who with a group of other prominent men formed National Cornstalk Processes, Inc., to use cornstalks as raw material for industrial products. Associated with Mr. Lowden in the company are Joseph E. Otis, George N. Peek, Eugene V. R. Thayer, and Chester C. Davis.

The company will act as a holding company and has already acquired the Maizewood Products corporation with a large plant in Dubuque, Ia. Negotiations also are in progress for another plant.

French Wrest Another Record from America

PARIS.—[U. P.]—A Frenchman has wrested another laurel from the dripping brow of an American. Having tried flagpole sitting and found it tiring, Noel Coussanes of Perpignan sharpened his pencil and wrote a geographical description of Africa on the back of an ordinary postcard in 5,151 words, and then leaned back and asked the world if this was not indeed better, much better, than the puny mark of 3,205 words hung up by Harry Block, New York diamond cutter, last year.

Which Companies Will Increase Earnings in 1930?

Most corporations will earn less in 1930 than in 1929. You, as an investor, should give special attention to those companies that will show increased 1930 earnings. Their stocks will likely do well marketwise because increasing earnings forecast higher stock prices.

STOCK SELLING WEAKENS WHEAT MARKET PRICES

Report Gov't Is Moving Out Cash Grain.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Weakness in the New York stock market more than offset short covering in wheat, and while there was a rally at one time, the finish was heavy, with net losses of 1@2½c, with May showing the most strength. The latter finished at $1.00½@1.00¾, a new low for the season, while July was $1.02⅛@1.02¼. Winnipeg lost only ⅝@¾c for the day.

The government is moving out cash wheat from Kansas City and Omaha to New Orleans, around 200,000 bu being shipped from Omaha according to reports. The trade also had reports there had been sales of No. 2 hard winter at New York at 3½c over Chicago May, equal to about 93c Chicago, but whether this represents fresh grain or getting rid of wheat bought some time ago at a much lower basis than prevails at the present time is unknown.

Grain markets showed a heavy undertone the greater part of the week, with May wheat, December corn and all deliveries of oats selling at a new low for the season. The finish was about the bottom, with wheat showing net losses of 2¼@3c; corn, ¼@1⅝c; oats, ½@1⅝c, and rye, 2⅝@3¾c as compared with a week ago. Lard was unchanged to 10c higher and bellies, 42½@75c higher for the week.

Government Supports May.

There was evidence of government support in the May delivery on the weak spots during the day, and cash houses also took May against sales of the deferred deliveries. The trade had reports that the stabilization corporation had taken over some of the cash wheat held in private elevators. The May sold at the lowest figure of the season and while having a strong rally at one time on comparatively limited buying the trade felt there was nothing in the general situation to warrant expectations of a major upturn.

Southwestern mills have started to book new crop flour, and some sales were said to have been made for shipment as far ahead as next October. The basis was not given, although under normal conditions prices are usually somewhat below the old crop. Crop comments from the southwest showed little change. Crop observer, Kinyon, who is out for J. S. Bache & Co., estimates Kansas at 100,000,000 to 110,000,000 bu; Oklahoma, 33,000,000, and Texas, 20,000,000 bu, while H. C. Donovan expressed the belief that the crop would ultimately feel the effect of the abnormally hot weather in January and February.

A little export business in Manitobas was put through on the break, according to Winnipeg messages, but the seaboard reported the demand as slow. A leading exporter was a buyer of futures at Liverpool. The latter closed ¼@½d lower. Buenos Aires was 1⅞@2c higher, with an advance in foreign exchange a factor.

Corn Market Unsettled.

Corn fluctuated erratically within a range of 1¼@1½c, breaking early, only to rally above Friday's finish and then weaken with wheat at the last, closing with net losses of ¼@⅝c, May being 78¼@78⅜c and July 80½@80⅝c. Trade was mainly of a local character with commission houses fair sellers at times. Forecast for unsettled weather for the week had some effect on sentiment, as it is feared that rains will delay field work. Expectations are that there will be a fair decrease shown in the visible supply statement on Monday. Buenos Aires closed ½@⅝c higher.

Cash interests were on the buying side of May oats, putting the nearby month to a fractional premium over the July. Houses with country connections were sellers of the deferred months, but the market showed independent strength and the finish was unchanged to ½c higher, May being 40⅞@41c, and July 40¾@40⅞c.

It is understood that all of the rye now afloat at Chicago has been disposed of and liberal clearances are looked for during the present week. Trade in futures was not large, with less liquidation in evidence, but the close was ½@1c lower with wheat. May finished at 57⅝c, and July, 62¾c.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A moderate export business was put through at the seaboard, but the bulk of the wheat was Manitobas sold by the pool. Local handlers sold 16,000 bu wheat; 57,000 bu corn and 38,000 bu oats to the domestic trade. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 474,000 bu wheat, 25,000 bu corn, 4,000 bu oats, and 83,000 bu rye.

Offerings of cash wheat were not large and the basis on spring was somewhat firmer. No. 2 red was 2½@3c over; No. 2 hard, 1@2c under, and No. 1 northern, May price to 1½c under.

Cash corn sold fairly with the basis ½c higher to ½c lower. No. 2 mixed brought ¾@1½c over; yellow, 1@1½c over, and white, 2½@3c over May, while No. 3 mixed was May price to ½c under; yellow, ½c over to 2c under, and white 2@2¼c over the future. Oats basis was steady to ¼c higher, with No. 2 white 1@1¾c over and No. 3 white ½c under to ½c over May.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 12 cars; corn, 135 cars; oats, 37 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 13 cars.

COTTON OFF $1.00 BALE

All cotton markets had a heavy tone yesterday, with prices off $1.00 to $1.50 a bale in practically all markets, with the close at inside figures. Old crop futures were 10 to 18 points lower in Chicago and 18 to 21 points off in other markets. New crop deliveries in Chicago lost 23 to 30 points and in other markets 19 to 23 points.

In the spot market New York dropped 20 points, equal to $1.00 a bale, the price being 16.40c. New Orleans broke 15 points to 15.75c, with sales 180 bales. Galveston finished at 15.80c and Houston at 15.70c, with sales in the latter market of 1,186 bales. Liverpool closed 1 point higher to 1 point lower, with sales of 2,000 bales of spots.

Declines in stocks in Wall street, and in grains in all markets, were largely responsible for the liquidation and the break.

Weather conditions were unsettled, with forecast for showers in the west and clear in the east. Reports from the cloth and yarn markets were mainly unfavorable. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

New low prices for most grains, while bringing in fair support on wheat, failed to inspire good buying. Traders have become so accustomed to declining markets that they are in some respects disappointed if they are not realized every day or so. Lowering of prices has not changed the situation or brought in any more consumptive or export demand. The markets are believed to be oversold and sharp rallies are to be expected at any time.

Wheat traders are predicting that May will drop to $1.00 or under and that the government will furnish support at the $1.00 level. Elevator interests are understood to be taking the May on the breaks. After the close there was active buying of bids, particularly on July wheat.

Cash interests in Chicago figure that with reports of hard winter wheat being sold at the Atlantic seaboard at 3½c over May, it equals 93c in Chicago. It is said that the government is moving out the wheat being delivered on track and taken on May contracts. There is an advantage in getting grain on tracks as it lowers cost of handling. Wheat is being moved from southwestern markets to the gulf and possibly some of the Chicago wheat is going to New Orleans and to southeastern Atlantic ports for export.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

AS SUMMER SUN NEARS IT'S TIME TO PICK AWNINGS

Types Available for Any Size of Purse.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Last year did you by any chance make a resolution to the effect that: "Next spring we are certainly going to have awnings on our home!"

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

Well, "next spring" has come again, and awnings, which a decade ago were little more than regulation boxed affairs, their chief and only concern in life to afford protection against the sun, have now blossomed forth as vivid and gorgeous creations of real beauty and artistry. New designs have been evolved, wrought iron scroll work has been incorporated in their structure, and they have become a vital part of the exterior color scheme of the house.

Because of this important color rôle that awnings play, their color scheme should be carefully considered. The predominating color of a house may not always be in its walls but may be in the roof or shutters or trim. Wherever it lies, the awnings should harmonize with this so-called "dominant color." Incidentally it may be mentioned that no awnings should conflict with green, a color which is so lavishly displayed in trees and lawn and shrubbery that it cannot be disregarded.

Spanish Style Gay.

The home in Spanish style is usually gaily colored and the awnings here can reflect this brilliant spirit. Decorative and even elaborately fashioned wrought iron hardware goes with this style.

The American bungalow, the simple colonial, the Dutch colonial requires light, cheerful colors, with perhaps a scalloped edge or deep valance fluttering a hospitality in the breeze and a hardware that is comparatively simple.

On the other hand the English cottage with its steep roofs is often seen with awnings of modified hue. And where a house is "far from new" the owner should eschew the brilliantly colored materials, since the contrast will be too hard on the house. Soft shades of green or rose or blue or tan or purple, plain or in delicately striped combinations, blend more easily with old walls and roofs.

Where an owner has any doubts of his own ability to make a wise selection he should call in an awning expert. Many large awning manufacturers conduct efficient service departments, with men whom they send out to give definite information and advice regarding suitable types and sizes of awnings. Since awnings are an investment which should hold up well for five or ten years and a conspicuous investment besides, it is as necessary that they should be as correct in their color and decorative details as they are strong in their weave and lasting in their dye.

Wide Range in Price.

Awnings as far as cost is concerned have a wide range and their cost is not prohibitive, since awnings are manufactured to fit small purses and large. They may be purchased ready made or made to order.

As for awning styles there are three general kinds: 1. Awnings with sides. 2 Awnings without sides and with the simplest of hardware. 3. Awnings with out sides, but with very decorative ornate hardware.

The first two types are suitable on almost all homes, while the last type is more suitable to ornate styles of houses such as the Spanish, Italian, and so on.

There are box awnings for casement windows and bungalow awnings in all combinations of colors. The hood awning is always popular for bedroom windows and circular awnings are found over circular window openings. There are awnings for the open porch and canopies for the terrace.

Frequently one sees the material in the awnings repeated in coverings for chair and hammock and sun porch cushions. One can also employ a valance of this same awning material on the sun parlor windows by way of change for the home.

Other Conveniences.

Garden tables and chairs protected from the sun by colorful umbrellas match, of course, the awnings on the house and tents for children, and awning roofs for the youngsters' beloved sand pile are a much enjoyed investment. There are also portable play houses for children which may be taken up or put down in a few minutes. One model of this sort weighs around 300 pounds and is screened all around with extended awnings which may be dropped during wet weather.

Awning manufacturers advocate thoughtful care of awnings if they are to last a long time and preserve their freshness and beauty. If one sees a storm coming in summer time one can raise the awnings as one lowers the windows. If awnings happen to have been left down and are drenched with rain they should be left down until they are thoroughly dried.

Awning arms are manufactured in various architectural styles and bright harmonizing colors. They can be used with awnings which have, or have not, sides and with the pull up or spring roller type. For awnings and architecture go hand in hand these days and because they add so much to the livability and charm of a home during the summer months, their installation pays for itself many times over, with the years.

ENHANCING BEAUTY OF HOME

Carefully chosen awnings become an integral and color contributing part of the Dutch colonial home above. Protection from the sun is only one of the many services these brilliantly hued awnings of today render, for besides their admitted practical value they give an appealing and distinctive color touch to house and lawn and terrace.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Termite Nuisance

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Is there anywhere I can go to get literature on making a house "termite proof"? In the last house we lived in—a rented house—we suffered from these creatures, which did a lot of damage to the supporting timbers. I have heard somewher that the U. S. government issues pamphlets on this subject, but do not know how to go about getting them. MR. E. D. F.

Answer—Write to the U. S. Department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., for leaflet 31-L, Termites in Buildings. Thomas E. Snyder, entomologist and author of the publication has made an extensive study of termites.

Sticky Paint.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Several years ago we painted the inside of our closed in porch and it remained sticky for months. We could not seem to remedy the trouble. We are going to repaint it this year. I am sure the paint itself was satisfactory. What do you think the trouble may have been? L. P.

Answer: The trouble was probably due to a lack of air in the enclosed porch. Surfaces which are closed in and where air does not circulate require more time to become hard. Open up your porch as wide as possible and have it open for a while after the paint has been applied and the condition will probably remedy itself.

Plastering Basement Ceiling.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: We are told that we should have our basement ceiling plastered but feel we can't afford it, not, at least, a three coat job. Is there much advantage to a plastered ceiling? Is a two coat plaster job satisfactory on the ceiling of the basement? Mrs. T.

Answer: Plaster and lath have a certain insulation value which will add to the warmth of your first floor as well as to economy of fuel. It is also a fire retardent. While a two coat job is not so efficient as the standard three coat it will nevertheless afford you considerable protection on your basement ceiling.

GARDEN FITTINGS ADD TO BEAUTY OF HOME PICTURE

Lawn Furniture, Sun Dials on List.

BY HOMER GRANT.

Days are drawing near when the home owner begins to think about giving to the yard and garden various bits of adornment to add to the loveliness of the house entourage.

The question of garden furnishings comes first and these can be quite simple or elaborate as the style of the garden and the purse of the owner determines.

There are three ways of furnishing the garden or rather, to be more concise, three ways by which one can secure the furnishings to put into one's garden.

The first way is to buy the furniture already built and prepared for immedite use. The variety of such furniture is wide. It comes in all styles and many different materials.

Partially Made Objects.

The second way is to buy the materials already cut and then proceed to build them and paint them oneself. In this way the cost is lowered somewhat.

The third way is to make the garden furniture entirely oneself, lowering the cost still further. Which method the home owner decides on depends on his temperament and on his purse.

Sun dials and sun houses, tables and settees, benches, chairs, entrances, tellises and bird houses are all garden features designed to add enjoyment and beauty to the exterior.

One cannot, perhaps, secure them all at once, but one can buy a few things at a time; some this year, some next year, and so on until the landscaping picture is complete.

Should Not Be Overcrowded.

No matter how small a garden or lawn may be one can find room for a few of these charming accessories snuggling cozily in some appropriate spot. Naturally, however, no garden small or big should be overfurnished. A cluttered garden or a cluttered living room is equally to be avoided.

Other attractive touches to an exterior are the familiar potted plants, or doorway plants, placed on each side of the doorway steps. These do not have to be expensive or elaborate.

Wooden containers are healthy homes for these so-called "garden tepchildren" and ordinary little washtubs, prettily painted and aglow with bright plants, help to make an alluring entrance picture. Again large pottery bowls, vividly hued, are sometimes seen, filled with ferns and vines.

Lily pools, too, gleaming in the sun, give beauty to the place. There are dozens of inexpensive and sturdy varieties of lilies and plants to choose from and neither the making of the pool nor the growing of the lilies is as hard as is sometimes imagined.

ANCIENT GODDESS IN MODERN FORM TO COMMAND CITY

Storrs Discusses Ceres Statue for "The Pit."

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Holding a sheaf of wheat in one hand and a grain trader's sample bag in the other, a heroic statue of Ceres, Greek goddess of corn and the harvests, next summer is to command the attention of pedestrians in the financial section from its lofty pedestal atop the new Board of Trade building — some 600 feet above the sidewalks.

JOHN STORRS.

The work of casting the statue in hard aluminum is now in progress at Providence, R. I., and officials of the Board of Trade hope that it will be put in place in time for the ceremonies which will mark the opening of the world's most important food trading market. The date of the opening has been tentatively set for June 15.

Making the statue doubly interesting to Chicagoans is the fact that it is the work of John Storrs, a Chicago born artist, who lives a greater part of the time in Paris, where he has acquired the reputation of being one of the greatest sculptors of the present day. Mr. Storrs, who is now stopping in Chicago, discussed his work from his temporary studio at 105 East Delaware place.

Points to Consider.

"When I was given the order to execute a sculptural piece to cap the tall Board of Trade building, I had two major points to consider," Mr. Storrs explained. "First I wanted my work to be in architectural harmony with the building on which it was to stand. Second, I wanted it to be symbolical of the business of the organization the structure was to house.

"The first point I have accomplished through treating the subject in an extremely modern manner. The vertical lines of the building itself are retained in the lines of the statue. Because of the great height at which it will stand the matter of detail did not have to be taken into consideration. The outline of a woman's figure is suggested rather than rendered exactly.

"As to the second point, I borrowed a thought from the classical period. Ceres well symbolizes the activity of the Board of Trade, so I took this goddess sister of Jupiter for my subject. However while the thought is classical, the treatment is entirely modern.

To Be in Silhouette.

"From the street the statue will appear to pedestrians mostly in silhouette. The hands holding the sheaf of wheat and the sample bag extend from the body abruptly instead of being attached to arms. The face, too, is suggested, inasmuch as there are no regular features."

Incidentally, Chicago's Ceres might be said to have been born in romantic surroundings, for Mr. Storrs' studio in the Rue du Cherche Midi is located on land that once formed a part of the gardens about the residence of Mme. de Maintenon, one of France's most romantic figures. It was in this studio that Mr. Storrs built up the statue in clay for the forms from which it is being cast in aluminum.

The Chicago Ceres is to be thirty feet high. This work has been described by some of the nation's leading architects as one of the finest pieces of architectural sculpture to be found in America. By architectural sculpture they mean the harmonizing of building design and sculpture so that the effect is one of unity. In most cases sculpture is selected without consideration for the design of a structure it is to adorn.

An Outstanding Position.

In passing Mr. Storrs said he considers the pedestal atop the Board of Trade as one of the most commanding positions for a statue to be found in America. He was especially enthusiastic in his comments on Chicago architecture, declaring the newer buildings here to surpass those of New York in design.

Mr. Storrs is the sculptor for the monument which the United States government is putting up at Brest, France, to commemorate the action of our navy during the war. This monument is to take the form of a tower 125 feet high and it will stand in a park overlooking the bay. Architectural work in connection with it has been in charge of Ralph Milman, senior partner in the Chicago architectural firm of Howard Van Doren Shaw Associates. Mr. Storrs also is making a heroic statue of Christ, which is to be placed in the new, modernistically designed Catholic church at Cork, Ireland. This church was designed by Barry Byrne, another Chicago architect. And, finally, Mr. Storrs has been asked to submit designs for sculptural work to adorn the administration building of the 1933 Chicago fair.

HUGE BLOCKS IN OLD FIELD WHOLESALE TO STAY WHERE THEY ARE

We are satisfying herewith the curiosity of the many Chicagoans who have been wondering what is to become of the huge blocks of granite forming the walls of the old Marshall Field & Co. wholesale store when that landmark is torn down. The blocks of granite will not move from their location—at least for the time being—as they will be used to fill the hole left when the old structure is torn down.

The old Marshall Field wholesale house occupies the block bounded by Wells, Franklin, Adams, and Quincy streets. The ground has been leased for a term of years to R. G. Lydy for use as an open air garage. The use of the land necessitated a level surface and it was decided to employ the old granite blocks to obtain this. It is planned to start tearing down the structure on May 15.

MAN'S FEATS IN NATURE CONTROL RIVAL MECHANICS

Now Makes Plants Grow to His Bidding.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The inventive mind of man has in recent months made much more progress in the science of bigger and better plant life than the change from garden hoe to be-wheeled and be-motored garden implements.

Reports of hybridizing flowers and other unusual creative formations are now rivaled by stories of straightening the summer squash's neck and other feats just as unique if not entirely practicable.

As a matter of fact, most seedsmen now sell the new strain of yellow summer squash with the straight neck. Not that gardeners have ever objected to the crook, with its handy hook to hang over one's arm while bearing it from field to kitchen. Vegetable men nowadays are becoming quite insistent in pointing out that this vegetable is really a pumpkin and not a squash. Hereafter, to be truly accurate, we must call the new vintage "straight neck summer pumpkin" and not "crook neck summer squash," states Robert Adams, horticulturist of Cornell university.

Rôle of White Rat.

Scientists opine that a monument to the little white rat probably will never be erected, yet that little animal has played an important part in the discoveries of science. At Iowa State college, the rats nearly outnumber the students. In the chemistry building where numerous nutrition experiments are under way, 3,500 white, black, gray and mottled little rats are living in long rows of cages. Even the psychology and home economics students are utilizing these sensitive little fellows in some of their tests.

The effect of mineral, protein, carbohydrate and vitamin contents of various foods, including vegetables, is determined by feeding the animals rations in which the food elements are known. One set of rats is indicating the probable effect on humans of various amounts of rock phosphate, calcized rock phosphate, copper, magnesium, or iron, in foodstuffs. Dr. V. E. Nelson has directed this work the last eleven years.

Word for Watermelons.

While most lovers of ripe watermelons have always said these seasonal vegetables supplied, "juice, seeds and happiness" to the consumer, the federal bureau of home economics in Washington now reports tests showing this vegetable to be a good source of vitamins. Those of the Tom Watson variety contain considerable A vitamin, are well supplied with the C vitamin, while "delectable quantities" of vitamins B and G were discovered. Since the Tom Watsons comprise about 90 per cent of commercial shipments in the United States, the discoveries may be expected to receive impetus from melon growers.

Production figures show, however, that the American public does not need vitamins as a reason for eating watermelons. During 1929, the federal department of agriculture reports, a total of 67,616 carloads of approximately a thousand melons each found a ready market on the basis of refreshing juiciness and flavor alone.

Dr. Ernest Reed, professor of botany at Syracuse university, recently discovered while studying a theory that sugar is concentrated principally in the heart of the beet, that the formerly discarded "tops" of the beet contains large amounts of sugar. It has been estimated that $10,000,000 can be saved in this plant industry alone by the simple expedient of shifting the "topping" knives one and one-half inches when cutting off the excess vegetation in the field.

Can Increase Yield.

"Sugar meet growers," Dr. Reed explains, "have been leaving at least one-tenth of their crop lying to rot in the fields. They can increase their sugar yield substantially by application of this discovery, if the leaves can be pulled or cut off economically without removing large portions of the beet."

Dr. Reed also has created a new unnamed plant by crossing the Swiss chard and sugar beet, considerably larger than the latter and producing more sugar. It must, he says, run the gantlet of the plant law of survival of the fittest before general acceptance in Michigan, Colorado, California, and other beet growing areas.

WEEDS IN LAWN.

We have a large lawn that would be beautiful if we were able to keep weeds from growing despite our efforts to do so. Will you please in your question and answer column give us some advice regarding the eradicating of this pest? L. W. M.

REPLY.

Getting down on all fours and pulling weeds out by the roots is one sure way of getting rid of weeds, by feeding grass and by treating the lawn with arsenate of lead. This lead arsenate treatment is a recent development in weed control. It is so simple and yet so effective not only for weeds but also for grubs and for earthworms, that it has become almost a panacea. The treatment was developed four years ago by Mr. B. R. Leach of the Japanese laboratory at Riverton, N. J. He advised 5 per cent arsenate of lead mixed with soil or compost and top-dressed annually on 1,000 square feet. This definitely controls grubs and earthworms and most weeds, except white clover. It is worth trying by every one and the time may not be far distant when we shall even spray the lawn for weeds just as we now spray the nursery and the orchard for other pests.

CARE OF CALLA LILY.

I have a yellow calla lily which has reached quite a large size. There are two spadices in the flower. Is this common in the calla? Please tell me what is the care of the bulbs after blooming? I. S.

REPLY.

In the calla lily one spadix is normal: a flower with two spadices in it is not common. Where more than one appear it is considered a malformation. If your calla lily plant produces flowers with two spadices for more than one season it would be worth while to save it.

The calla is a house plant but is usually kept outdoors in the summer, and in the fall the plants are taken up and repotted indoors. In the summer some gardeners turn the pots down on their sides in a shady place, where they will not need any attention until repotting time—when it is time to start growth again.

PLAN BEFORE YOU PLANT, IS ADVICE TO THE GARDENER

Key to Economy, Efficiency in Vegetable Patch.

There still is time to plan the vegetable garden before planting for those who have decided on one after feeling the out of doors appeal that spring makes each year. And this planning before one makes purchases of seeds and plants will make the plot whether large or small more economical as regards cost and more efficient in considering production and the amount of labor necessary.

Many amateurs find that a back yard garden adds materially to the table during the summer and fall, yet they do not remember to lay out a schedule early enough so that when they purchase seeds and plants they know how much or how many they will have room for through an estimate of space and production of the various kinds of vegetables.

"So many rows of this or that of known length," gardeners say, enable them to purchase the right amount of seed and prepare and plant their garden without too much study and too much comment by the neighbors. Most seed does not have enough vitality for use the following season, so that it is economy to buy only one year's needs at a time.

Cornell university experts, according to Robert M. Adams of that institution, estimate the following amounts of various kinds of seed necessary to plant 100 feet in a row:

One-eighth ounce: cauliflower, celery, tomato.

One-quarter ounce: cabbage, egg plant, and parsley.

One-half ounce: cucumber, lettuce, muskmelon, parsnip, squash, turnip.

One ounce: carrot, chard, onion, radish, salsify, watermelon.

Two ounces of beet and spinach seed; two quarts of onion sets; a pint of bush beans and about half as many pole beans; from one to two pints of peas; and from six to ten pounds of potatoes. The approximate number of plants for a 100 foot row: asparagus, 60-80; cabbage, 65-90; rhubarb, 30-50; and tomatoes, 35-50.

Hens Lay 1,799,700,000 Eggs for Market in 1929

The estimated total farm production of eggs from the year 1929 was 149,975,000 dozen, with a gross farm value of $40,292,000. In 1928 the estimated production was 144,706,000 dozen, with a gross farm value of $37,768,000. The weighted average yearly price per dozen in 1929 was 26.8 cents, compared with 26.1 cents for 1928.

American Can Company to Build $3,000,000 Addition

LET CONTRACT FOR TALL FLATS ON GOLD COAST

$1,500,000 Co-op for Astor Street.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

For the first time in many months a major industrial project is the outstanding news of the week; in fact it is the most important piece of business construction in point of money invested that has developed for a long time. The American Can company yesterday started excavating for a $3,000,000 five story addition to its big Englewood plant, at 60th street and Western avenue.

Simultaneously contracts were awarded for the $1,500,000 coöperative apartment project, announced last December, to be erected at the southwest corner of Astor and Goethe streets. This is to be known as 1260 Astor street and will be one of the most expensively constructed structures of its kind in the country. Already seven of the twelve apartments have been sold.

Will Make Large Containers.

Although the big American Can company's project is the largest industrial development in Chicagoland in many months, only a few details are available. The plans for the huge structure were drawn by the company's chief engineer, C. G. Price, and it will be equipped with the most modern machinery to be found in any plant of its kind in the world, it is understood.

The new addition will be used principally for the manufacture of large containers for industrial purposes. It is possible, however, that the new cellulose container, announced recently after eight months of experiments, may be made here. This novel receptacle is transparent, noninflammable, colorless, nonbreakable, noncorrosive, and tasteless, and is designed to replace metal and glass containers of all kinds.

Six Plants in Chicagoland.

The American Can company, largest manufacturer of its kind in the world, owns and operates fifty-three plants in the United States, five in Canada and two in Hawaii. The three Chicago plants are located at 1834 Clybourn avenue, at 39th and Canal, and at 60th and Western. There are also three plants in Maywood, one of which is the largest in the Chicago area.

The company's general offices for the central district, comprising the midwestern states, are at 104 South Michigan avenue. K. S. Breckenridge of Chicago is a vice president and also a director of the company. H. W. Phelps is president.

The American Can company has been a consistently large investor in new construction. During 1927 its outlay for new buildings was $8,020,000 and during 1928 the total was $7,345,000. Last year it spent $8,480,000. The concern's total investment in land, buildings and equipment is placed at $127,000,000.

Back to the Gold Coast.

Now back from factories to flats—of the gold coast brand. The de luxe $1,500,000 "No. 1260 Astor" will house the following: George A. Ranney, vice president and treasurer of the International Harvester company; Barrett Wendell, partner in Lee, Higginson & Co.; Sterling Morton, president of the Teletype corporation; Warren Crawford, a partner in the Crawford-Dyer company; J. Alexander Waller, manager of the Civic Opera building and the Illinois Merchants building; Mrs. Mary Dana Stone, wife of John S. Stone, and Philip D. Maher, architect of the building.

Of the above tenant-owners, the first four will have duplex apartments, ranging in size from twelve to twenty rooms, with from six to twelve baths. Only five suites remain unsold.

Individuality will be the keynote of the layout and design of these apartments. For instance, Mrs. Wendell, who was a Higginson of Boston, is to have a complete room brought from the old Higginson homestead at Prides Crossing, Mass., and rebuilt into the apartment on Astor street.

Mrs. Stone, who has lived on this corner most of her life, and from whom the site was purchased, is to have as much as possible of the woodwork of the old mansion replaced in her apartment on the fifth floor of No. 1260.

Quietness to Be a Feature.

The street elevations will be of Bedford stone. All windows will be of plate glass. The interior will be unusually well built. For instance, all floors will be a foot and a half thick, with enough sound deadening to keep anything less than a bomb explosion from being heard above or below.

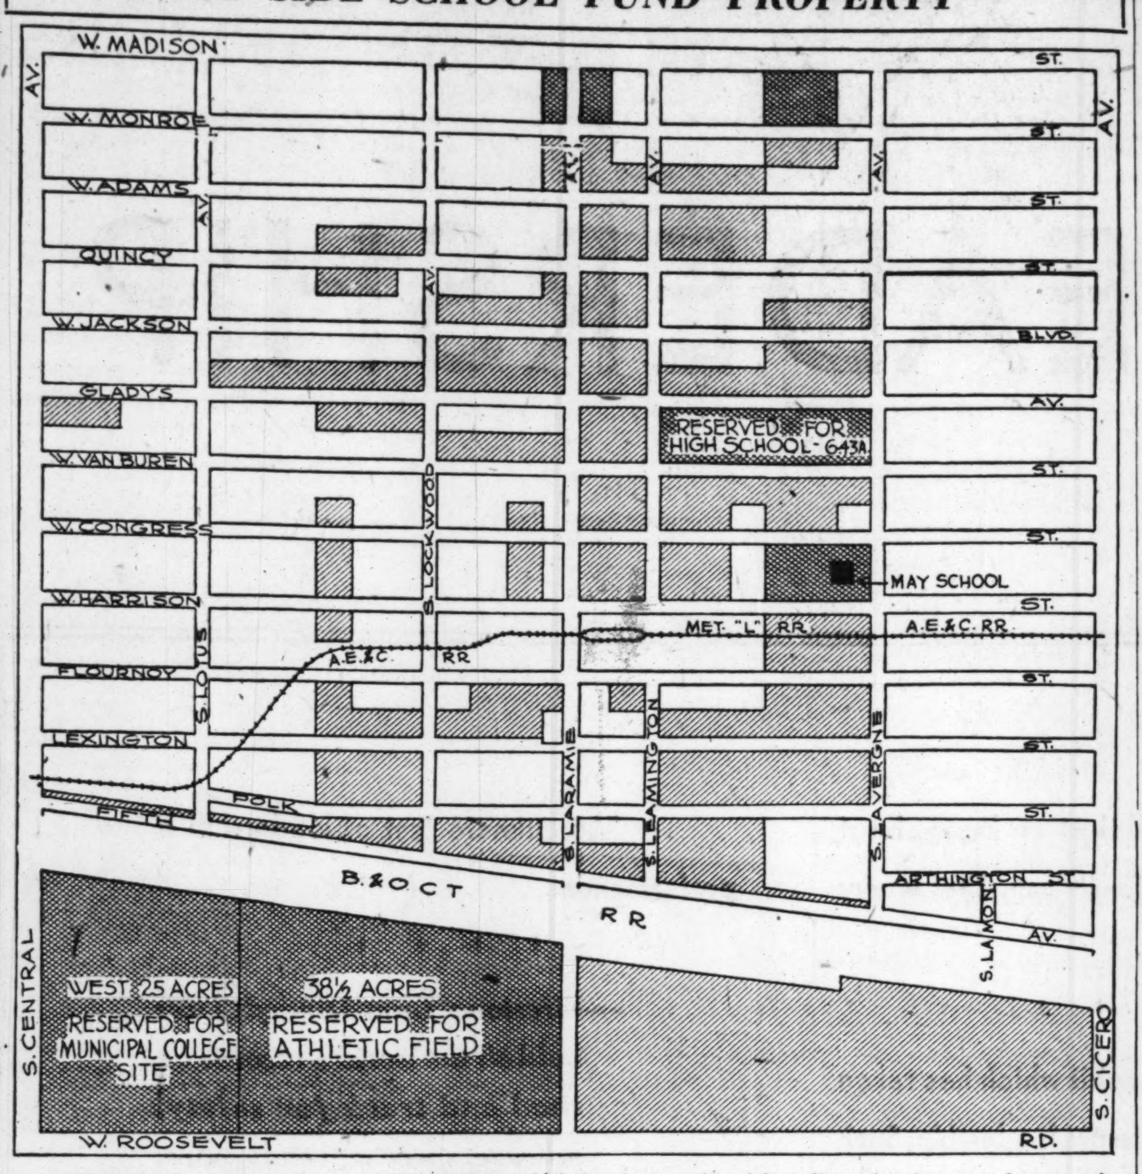
Instead of using every foot of ground area the building will only occupy 67 per cent, which means it'll have plenty of light and air on all sides.

The Ouillmette Construction and Engineering company has been awarded the general contract. Sudler & Co., who originated the project, are the sole agents and will manage the property. Wreckers will start clearing the site on June 1. Completion is set for October, 1931.

TAKES FLOOR AT 201 NORTH WELLS FOR OIL EXHIBIT

The Oil Equipment Exhibit of Chicago has leased the entire fifth floor of the 201 North Wells building for five years. It will be used to provide a year round display of equipment and articles used by the oil trade. The exhibit is sponsored by the management of the National Oil Show, Inc. There will be space for 105 exhibits, with sections devoted to petroleum products, automobile accessories, bulk plants, etc.

WEST SIDE SCHOOL FUND PROPERTY



Above is the square mile of school property which has been under violent discussion for years because of the demand by the west side citizenry for its sale. Out of the original square mile, or 640 acres, deeded the schools by the government only 210 acres remain unsold. And out of this 77.35 acres are still to be retained for educational and business purposes. As announced last week, the board of education has now voted for the sale of the 132.65 remaining acres.

The lightly shaded portions of the square mile bounded by West Madison street, Cicero avenue, Roosevelt road, and Central avenue represent the 132.65 acres to be sold. The heavily shaded portions, totaling 77.35 acres, are to be reserved for various educational and commercial purposes. Of these the 4.21 acres fronting on West Madison street are to be leased for business. The 6.43 acres bounded by Gladys, Lavergne, Van Buren, and Leamington are to be reserved for a junior high school. The May school grounds contain approximately 3.21 acres. The 63.50 acres bounded by Laramie, Roosevelt, Central, and the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal railroad tracks will be reserved for a municipal college site and an athletic field.

VOTE TO SELL SCHOOL LANDS BRINGS SMILES

Business Boost Seen by West Siders.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Authorization of the sale of the Austin school lands by the board of education last Monday afternoon and approval of the action by the city council Wednesday afternoon rewarded a fight carried on by practically every business and civic organization of the west side for six years. More than fifty west side business men, headed by J. Frank Lindsey, chairman of the Austin school land committee, attended the meeting Monday to emphasize finally the need for sale of the land which, they point out, will solve "an unhealthy local community condition."

The property is located in the area bounded by Roosevelt road, Madison street, Cicero and Central avenues. The land to be sold, about 132½ acres, with 77 acres to be retained by the board of education, was given a valuation of $7,000,000 one year ago by Nate DeLue, assistant business manager of the board of education, an increase of 1,500 per cent in thirty years.

Business Men Pleased.

Business men of the west side were enthusiastic in their praise of the action of the school board.

"It is the greatest piece of constructive work ever accomplished for the west side," said Mr. Lindsey. "The sale of these lands should increase the revenue to the board of education by $1,000,000. It will mean an additional 40,000 residents in this district. That influx will in turn boost business, industry, and public utilities. Tax values will increase in surrounding territories as well."

Mr. Lindsey further pointed out that during the last 143 years this land had not produced $1 in revenue for any purpose and had retarded rather than contributed to community expansion and development.

The Greater Austin Property Owners and Business Men's association has led the movement for the sale of the property.

"This is one of the best things that has ever happened to the community," commented Robert A. Schiewe, president of the organization.

"The West Town Chamber of Commerce hearily indorses the action of the board of education," said H. J. Ruggles, manager. "A district of weeds breeding crime and disease will now be transformed into a thriving community."

Mark Shanks, president of the chamber, has been one of the leaders in the movement for disposition of the land.

Other west side leaders who have taken an active part in the movement include George Madigan, B. W. Boman, president of the West Side Kiwanis club; C. C. Wedding, president of the Madison-Kedzie association, and Al Moore, president of the Austin Rotarians.

In the resolution of the board concerning the disposal, the property was declared no longer necessary for use by the board of education or the city, and it was further stated that its retention would no longer be profitable to the city. Certain reservations regarding specific portions of the land, however, were attached to the resolution, and recommendations were made concerning the sale.

Retain Site for City College.

Twenty-five acres at Roosevelt road and Central avenue, extending back to the tracks of the B. & O. C. T. railroad, are to be retained as a site for a municipal college for Chicago. Thirty-eight and one-half acres just east of this property fronting on Roosevelt road are to be reserved by the board for an athletic field. The remaining frontage on Roosevelt road between Laramie and Cicero avenues and backing up to the B. & O. C. T. tracks is for sale for industrial purposes.

The board has also specified in its report that 6½ acres bounded by Gladys avenue and Van Buren street and Leamington and Lavergne avenues be saved as a site for a junior high school. Lots 34, 35, 66, and 67 fronting on Madison street will be held by the board of education and leased for business purposes. Neither will the property of May school at 512 South Lavergne avenue be sold.

The sale of the land is to be conducted by the city council. Before any sale is made proposal to sell it is to be published in one or more of the Chicago daily newspapers once each week for at least four weeks. The first notice must be made not less than 30 days before bids are to be opened for the sale of the property. Acceptance of a bid by a vote of three-fourths of the members of the council will not become binding until accepted by nine of the ten members of the board of education.

Tied Up by Act of 1787.

In 1787 land was set aside by the United States government in every township throughout the country for school purposes. It was as a result of that law that 200 acres in township 39 became school property and remained inactive until 1857, when the school trustees of the township authorized the land to be divided into lots. A few of the lots were sold between that time and 1899, when the township was annexed to Chicago and by a decree of the Circuit court of Cook county the Chicago board of education paid $225,215.85 for the tract. At the time of the transfer of the land 26 acres were sold, but the remainder has been kept intact to the present day.

A committee of real estate experts appointed by the board of education studied the condition of the school land and reported to the board before the meeting last Monday. The members of the committee included Paul Steinbrecher, B. F. Lindheimer, Harrison B. Riley, and Albert H. Wetten.

News of the Architects

Zimmerman, Saxe & Zimmerman, architects, have moved—for the second time in forty years—to the new 430 North Michigan Avenue building, where they will occupy the entire eleventh floor. Their phone remains the same. For the first twenty-five years of its existence the firm was known as W. Carbys Zimmerman. The name was then changed to the present one. For thirty years the firm was in the Steinway Hall building, and for the last decade it has been at 211 East Superior street.

Armstrong, Furst & Tilton have moved their offices from 127 North Dearborn street to the thirty-fourth floor of the Roanoke tower, 11 South La Salle street. The members of the firm are John A. Armstrong, William H. Furst, and John N. Tilton.

K. M. Vitzthum & Co. have moved offices from the Bell building to the 21st floor of the One La Salle Street building, for which they were the architects. Their phone is unchanged.

PAVING ENGINEER UNION MEMBERS GO BACK TO FOLD

Return to International Gives a Mystery.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Four years ago the officers and members of the Paving Engineers' union, local 464, withdrew their membership from the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, the president of which is Artie Huddell of Boston, Mass.

The paving engineers severed affiliation when Huddell tried to enforce his famous supervisor plan, which deprives the rank and file of locals of voice in selection of their union representatives. It is said Huddell picks out a lieutenant in a local and then confers on him the authority to run the business affairs as a lifetime occupation. At the present time numerous locals of engineers in the country have procured injunctions to restrain Huddell from enforcing his one man rule.

Forced to Return.

Several days ago the paving engineers were forced to abandon their individualism and return to the fold. Engineers profess they are unable to untangle the method used to force them back into Huddell's union. Spring paving is about to commence and the paving engineers were told the teamsters who had been working with them for the last four years refused to continue to do so unless the pavers made peace with Huddell.

This information was delivered to them by the paving contractors with whom they held an agreement. The late "Big Tim" Murphy just before his sudden demise informed Huddell's Chicago lieutenants he could deliver the recalcitrant paving engineers back into the fold. He is said to have named his fee for the task at $50,000, which ended all negotiations.

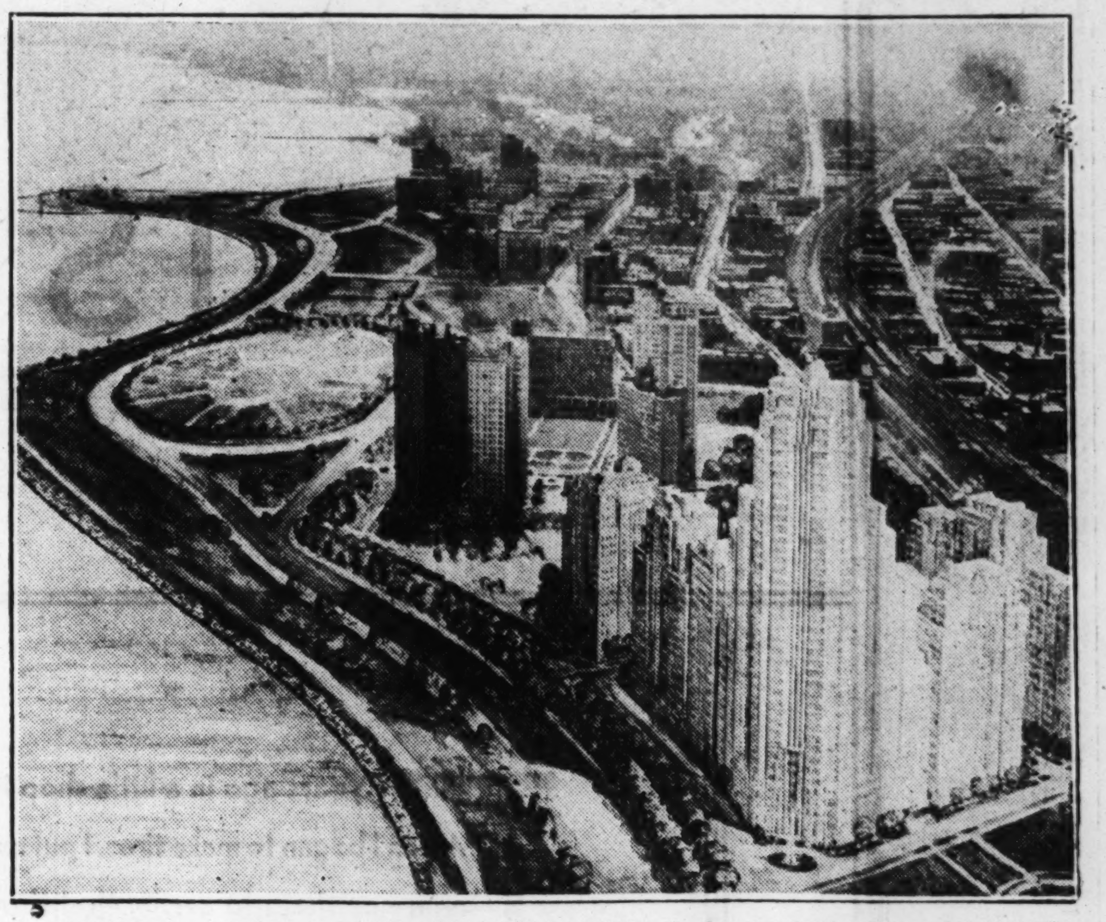
Should Have Large Union.

It was pointed out the engineers should have one of the largest international unions in the American labor movement. Engineers state that Huddell's rule has had a withering effect on the entire force of organized engineers.

Let Contracts for Bronze Foundry for Michigan Ave.

Contracts have been let and work has started on a foundry to make bronze castings, in the rear of the building of Zimmerman Brothers & Co., bank equipment, 4020 South Michigan avenue. T. F. Barrett Construction company has the general contract.

A LOOK AT CITY OF FUTURE



The above shows how the huge coöperative apartment building development for the Chicago Beach district—told about in this department last week—will look when it is completed. Ten large flat buildings will be built around the block bounded by East 48th street, Leif Ericson drive, East 49th street, and Cornell avenue. The ground in the center of the area will be landscaped. Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc., is the architect and the development is being fathered by the Starrett Investing corporation of New York and Chicago. The total investment will involve $50,000,000, it is stated. [Above picture by Chicago Aerial Survey Co.]

FACTS OF LEADERSHIP

THIRTY years ago in a little shop in Akron I began to make tires. I put my name on them to certify that they were the best tires I knew how to make and that I was ready to back them up.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The little shop has grown to a great factory which employs fifteen thousand workmen. Every one of these workers is a part owner of the business—every one of them is a stockholder. They have backed the quality of their product with their savings.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

From Akron we have pressed out through the world. We have plants in Los Angeles, Boston, Fall River and New Bedford. We have plants in Canada and in England. We have a plant at Singapore—in the heart of the East Indies—so that we may buy the raw rubber where it is grown. We have offices and expert buyers in every important rubber growing center in the world.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

When the British Rubber Restriction Act sought to raise the price of rubber, Firestone fought it practically alone and unaided. And, in order that this country might never again have to beg its rubber from a foreign power, Firestone planted an outpost of American life in Liberia on the west coast of Africa—the Negro Republic founded by Americans in the days of President Monroe. There we have a million acres to insure that America may always have rubber at a fair price.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The first little shop could make a dozen tires a day. Today we can make eighty thousand a day. That is progress. We will not make a tire that is just a tire. Every tire must express all that we know about tires and its fitness for its use. That is why we have progressed.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Such is the spirit which has taken Firestone into absolute tire leadership. Such is the spirit which maintains the leadership. Never has the leadership faltered. The record of Firestone is the record of the march of improvement in the tire industry. For Firestone brought out for automobile use:

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

—The first straight side tire

—The first rubber non-skid tread

—The first commercial demountable rim

—The first patented Gum-Dipping Process

—The first balloon tire

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Each of these five inventions marked a new era in tire building. Together they made possible the safe and economical high speed motoring of today.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

An automobile is no better than its tires.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Firestone has:

—kept ahead of the tire makers.

—kept ahead for the automobile makers.

—kept ahead for car owners in safety, comfort and economy.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

That is leadership.

The ultimate test of leadership is performance.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires hold all the world's records on road and track for safety, mileage, speed and endurance.

—for ten consecutive years they have won the 500 mile Indianapolis Endurance Race.

—were on the winning cars in the Pike's Peak Race—where a slip meant death.

—were on the Studebaker car which on a board track in Atlantic City in 1928 went 30,000 miles in 26,326 minutes.

—were on the G. M. C. truck, carrying a two-ton load, that hung up the coast to coast endurance record.

—ran 71,351 miles on a Detroit taxicab, before the first tire was replaced.

—and for 10 years Firestone has sold more tires on a mileage cost basis to taxicab and bus lines than any other manufacturer and now equips the world's largest taxi fleet and world's longest bus line.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Such are the facts of Firestone leadership.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Each year we have learned more about tires. Each year we have put that added knowledge into our tires to give added values.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

And so we can say, with all the facts before us, that, while there are many good tires, the best is Firestone.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

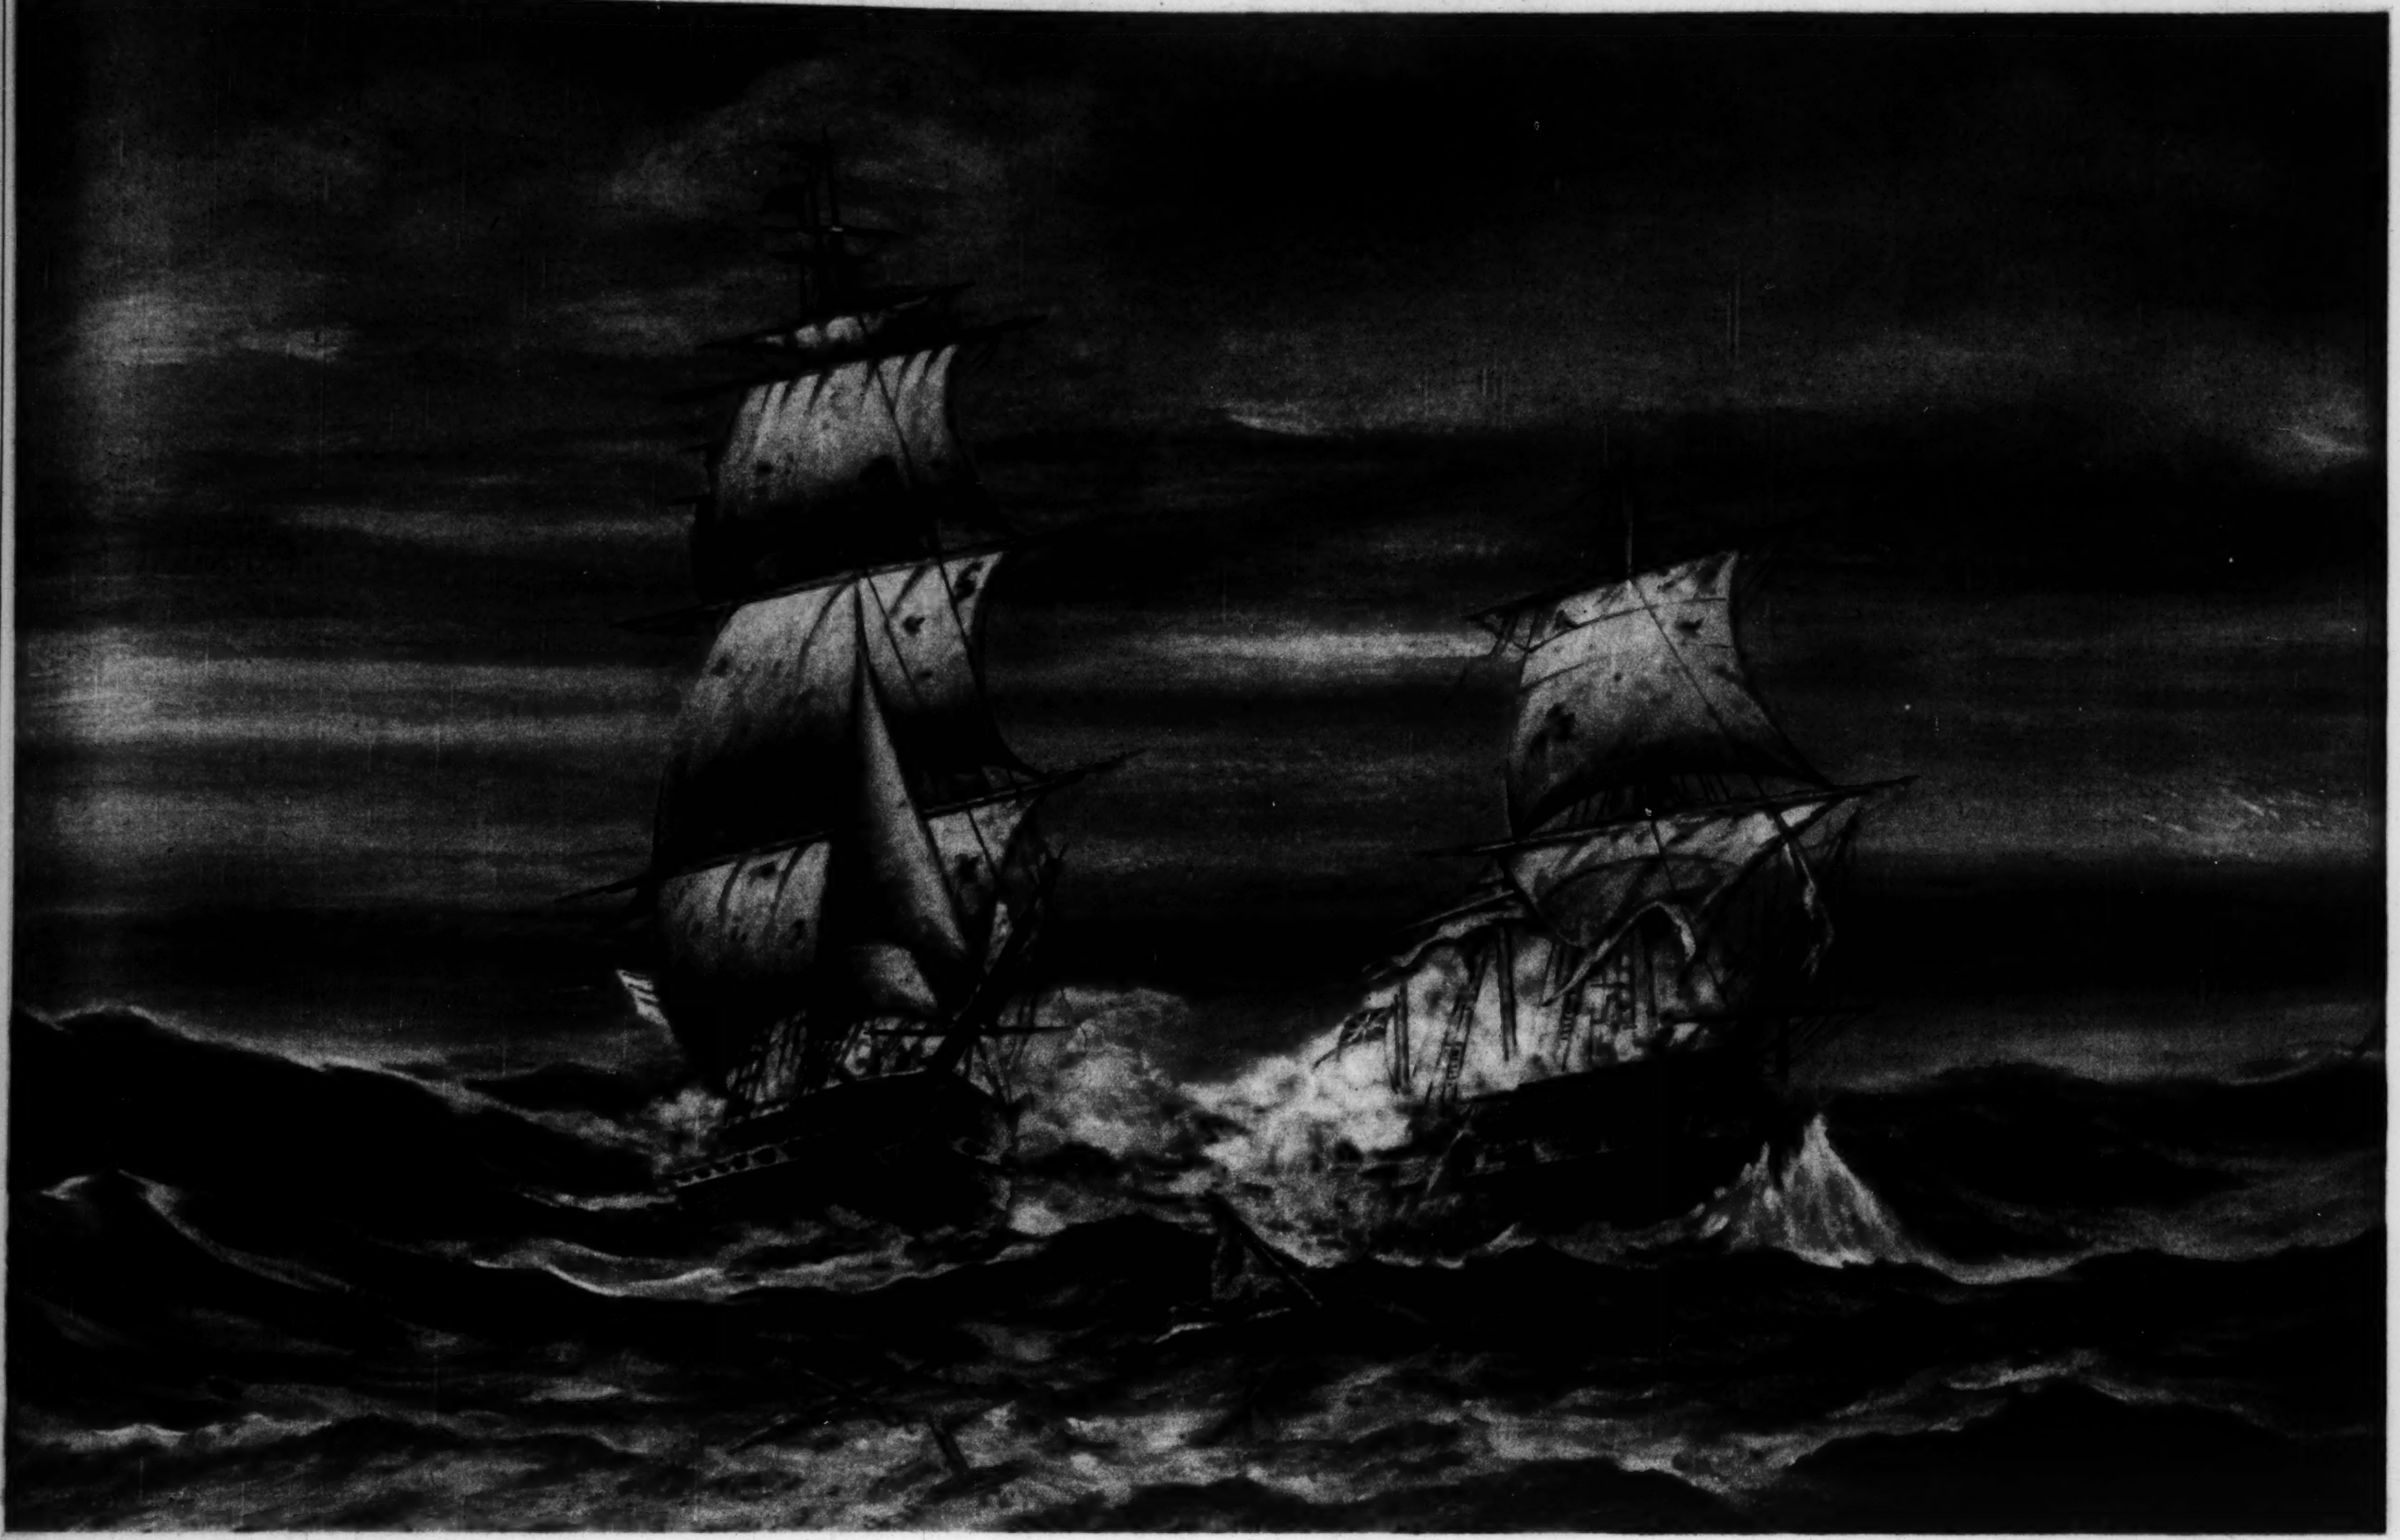
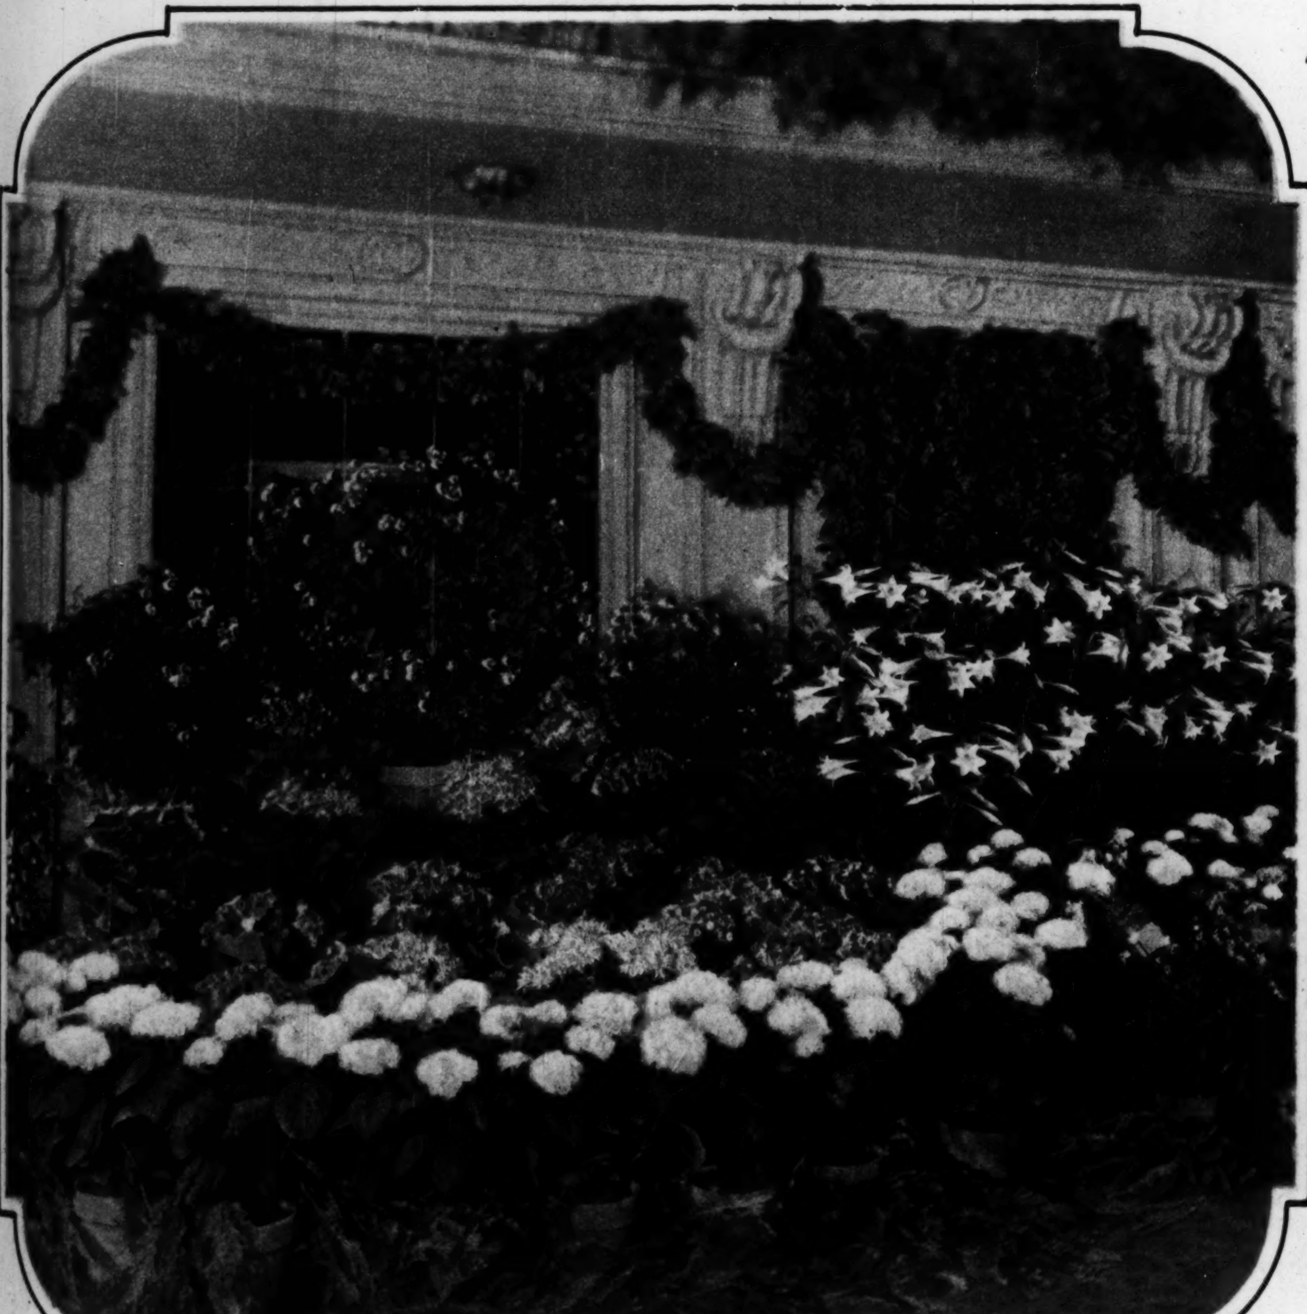
May 4, 1930



"THE LAST TOLD"—From a poet's verse Charles E. Hallberg, Chicago artist, took the title for his stirring pictorial account of the immortal victory of the Constitution over the British Guerriere, the principal detail of which is here reproduced. That conflict of 1812 gave the glorious name of "Old Ironsides" to the triumphant frigate, and more; it wrote into the sky of world naval powers the name of America, there to stand as an inspiration to generations to come. The Constitution, it will be remembered, is being rebuilt at Boston.



NATURE IN ONE OF HER MOST ENDEARING MANIFESTATIONS lent bewitching colors and subtle perfumes in lavish profusion to the Chicago garden and flower show at the Sherman hotel. In the exhibits here portrayed by the color camera were stately Easter lilies, delicately tinted hydrangeas, pink rambler roses, and cinerarias in striking tones of magenta, lavender, pink, and blue.

a distinctive new drink

CANADA DRY'S GOLDEN GINGER ALE . . . MADE BY A REVOLUTIONARY AND SECRET PROCESS, WHICH RETAINS ALL THE FLAVOR AND AROMA OF THE JAMAICA GINGER-ROOT IN NATURE'S OWN BALANCE

Here is an entirely new drink. A taste-sensation for the American palate.

Canada Dry's Golden Ginger Ale—worthy companion to Canada Dry, favored of connoisseurs the world over.

You have never known anything quite like it. There are other "golden" ginger ales, yes; but none like this. For until Canada Dry discovered the secret, it was not possible to capture the delicate essence of the Jamaica ginger-root in the exact and perfect balance set by Nature.

In Canada Dry's Golden Ginger Ale this is done. The result is a drink so zestful, so refreshing, so utterly different and delightful in flavor and aroma, that it is bound to win you instantly. Hold it to the light to catch the glint and sparkle of its fine-spun gold . . . colorful as the Mohave Desert at sunset. Breathe its delicate fragrance . . . reminiscent of palm trees and a coral beach under a clear, blue sky.

And then sip it—a little, at first, so you can better enjoy its rare and piquant flavor. This, surely, is the drink you have often wanted . . . not harsh and biting, not flat and insipid, but round, rich, full-bodied . . . as mellow as soft, autumn sunlight.

Years ago, Canada Dry could have given you a "golden ginger ale," had it been satisfied with an ordinary product. But it was not. First, some way must be devised to transfer all of the essences of the Jamaica ginger-root to a "golden" beverage. For ginger contains not only the peppery constituents of the fiber, but also essential oils from the sacs, which lend to it a very pleasing fragrance not unlike fresh orange or lemon peel, but which are so volatile that under ordinary processes they largely disappear.

The secret lies in the Lloyd Process —owned exclusively by Canada Dry

Canada Dry submitted the problem to Professor John U. Lloyd, a leading authority on botanical chemistry. He spent months in painstaking research . . . experimenting, testing, rejecting . . . until at last he discovered a process so revolutionary and far-reaching that it necessarily takes its place among the important business secrets of the nation.

Behind locked doors at the great Canada Dry plants, the Lloyd Process is as jealously guarded as were the trade-secrets of the guilds of the Middle Ages. Only two men know its full details, know how to operate the intricate apparatus. For this is what gives to Canada Dry's Golden Ginger Ale its distinctive and delicious cast—the true ginger flavor—incapable of being imitated by man, the result solely of the magic of sun and rain and soil.

You will want to be among the first to try this delightful beverage

Perhaps the thing about Canada Dry's Golden Ginger Ale which will please you most is that it is as good for you as it is good in flavor and fragrance. There are no harmful ingredients in this delicious drink to irritate your stomach; no synthetic substitutes for the true Jamaica ginger.

Canada Dry's Golden Ginger Ale is warm, pleasant, friendly. It has no brassy taste, no disagreeable "back kick."

You will want to try it today, of course, so you can learn its delicious flavor for yourself, and tell your friends about it. You can buy it at the same places you buy Canada Dry . . . leading groceries, drug-stores, hotels, clubs. It comes in large 16-ounce bottles, priced in retail stores at 18 cents. Probably you will want to get the convenient home carton of twelve bottles, so you will always have an ample supply on hand.

THE CAGELESS ZOO—Aerial photography reveals the present status of work on Chicago Zoological park near Riverside, where World's fair visitors of 1933 may view one of the world's important collections of animals. The camera looks eastward to the city, with Thirty-first street to the left. THE COMING OF THE STORM—Threatened with the wrath of the elements, a belated Colombian fishing boat makes all sail beneath lowering clouds to escape to safety across the harbor of Puerto Colombia. (Associated Press photo.)

BEFORE THE DELUGE—An interesting portrait of the late Czar and Czarina of Russia, believed rare, and possibly hitherto unpublished. The picture, just brought to light in sovietland, is thought to date from the glamorous days before their marriage, just after they were engaged.

REMEMBER 'WAY BACK WHEN the German Big Bertha began dropping shells into panicky Paris from seventy-five miles away? Allied artillery experts were puzzled as to method used to raise and sustain the gun's muzzle for such high arc trajectory. In Col. H. W. Miller's "The Paris Gun" the method is revealed, as illustrated by the accompanying picture, twelve years later.

BREWED EXACTLY LIKE the BEER you loved

The best malt-and-hop brew we ever created is at your command today. It is called Atlas Special Brew.

Brewed from the finest barley malt and Bohemian hops. Aged for months, as in the old days. Pasteurized after bottling.

The zest is there, the sparkle and foam, the flavor and aroma. The digestive helps are in it, and the aids to sleep. The tonic qualities, the soothing factors, the delights are there.

Not a Makeshift

Atlas Special Brew is not a "near-beer," not an imitation. Never was a malt-and-hop brew made with more care and skill.

There was never a purer brew. Even the water we use is specially treated to match the brews of Europe. Each bottle is certified.

Less Alcohol—That's All

Less alcohol, of course, but that you will not miss. Were you told that this was an old reserve, you could not discover the difference.

Atlas Special Brew has the old soothing effects. Drink it at bedtime as an aid to sleep. It has the diastase and peptase. Drink it at mealtime as a help to digestion. It has the esters and aldehydes—invigorators. It has the hops. Drink it as a tonic. It has all you loved of flavor and sparkle in the old-time brews.

Don't go without it. Above all, don't substitute with something wretched and impure.

Taste this Atlas Special Brew. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, delivered to your door. Just ask your dealer or phone us. Over 15,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states supply it. Look for the green Atlas Special label on each bottle. Years of scientific study are behind the Woodbury prescription for the care of the skin

★ DESQUAMATION

—medical term for the invisible peeling that goes on in every healthy skin, and brings out the new skin that lies underneath

Lift that Veil ★
There's REAL BEAUTY underneath

JUST underneath the skin you see, there's a lovely, transparent new skin waiting to come through!

It's fresh and clear as baby skin.

A veil of old skin covers it. A veil so thin you cannot see it.

But wait! Day by day, invisibly, this veil of old skin that obscures the real beauty underneath is peeling off to let the new skin through.

That's DESQUAMATION.

It's a natural process of the skin. And there's a promise in it for every girl.

Here's the formula prepared by the head of the Woodbury laboratories, to help the new skin come through clear and fresh:

FIRST BATHE THE FACE in warm water. Then work into your skin gently a generous lather of Woodbury's soap, which was made especially for this purpose. Now wash off with warm water. Your skin feels new, liberated. The Woodbury lather has freed it of the tiny, invisible dead cells that covered its surface. For Woodbury's acts on the skin as ordinary soaps cannot. Now tone the new fresh skin with a brisk splashing of cold water. Ah! how good it feels!

This is just the help the new skin needs to bring it out clear and glowing.

See what a prescription based on the fundamental processes of the skin will do for your skin.

Woodbury's is 25 cents a cake at any drug-store or toilet-goods counter. It also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

To meet the Woodbury laboratories' exacting requirements for a facial soap, Woodbury's is very finely milled. This also makes it last much longer than soaps for general toilet use. The Andrew Jergens Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

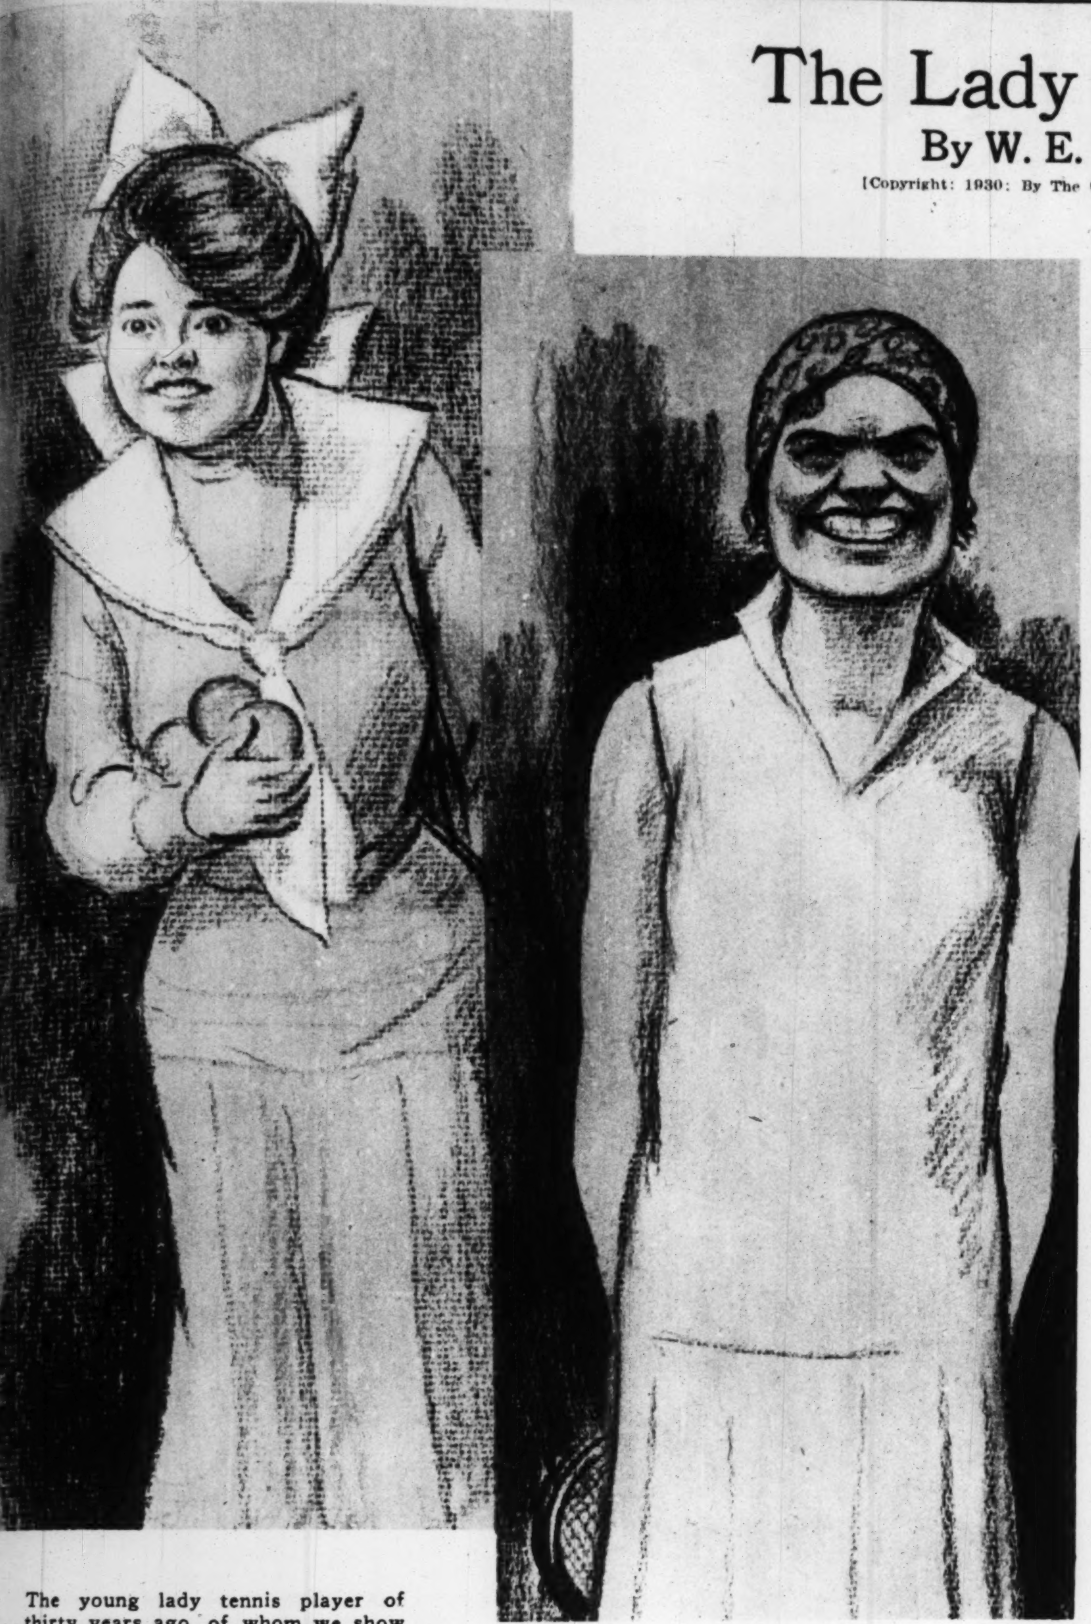
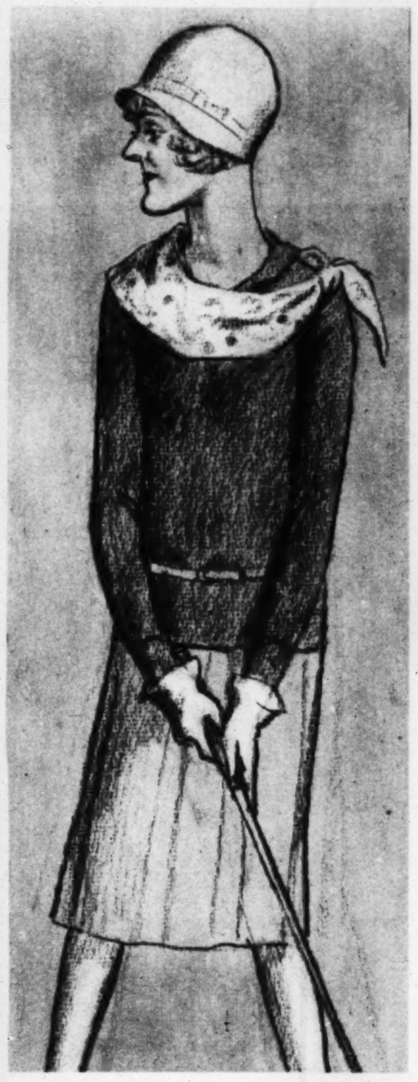
The Lady Athlete

By W. E. Hill

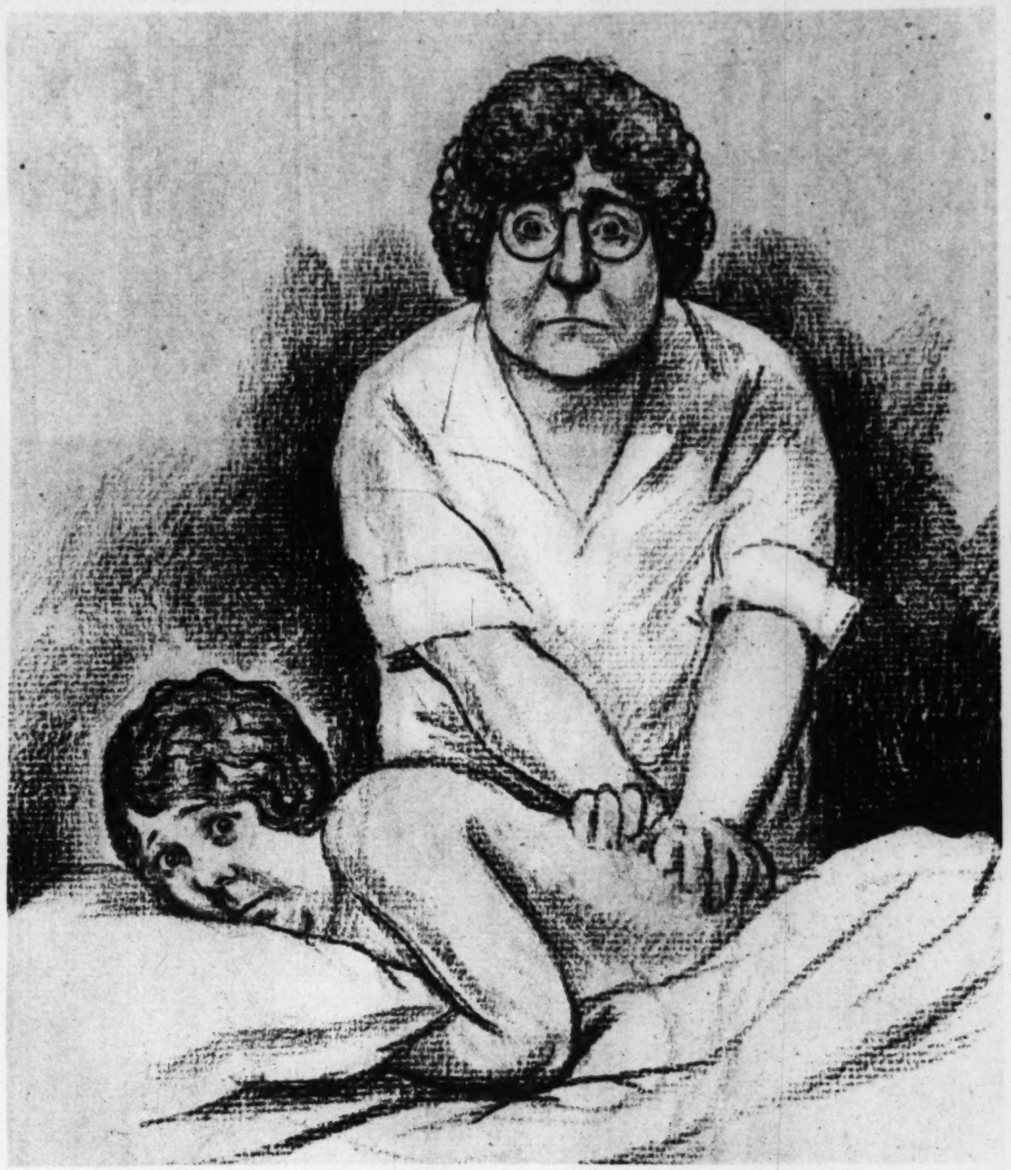
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]



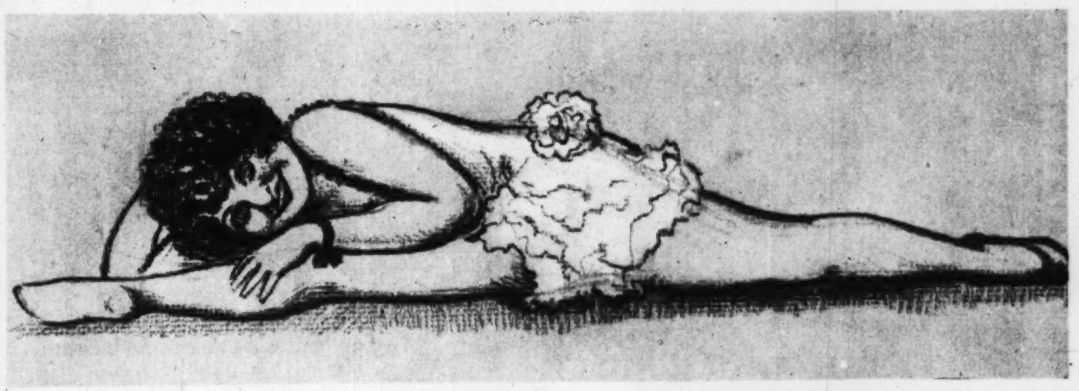
The young lady tennis player of thirty years ago, of whom we show a faint memory on the left, was considerably less peppy than the 1930 girl. A tennis girl of this advanced day and age can do things to her face when posing for a news photo that the old fashioned girl never even thought of attempting.



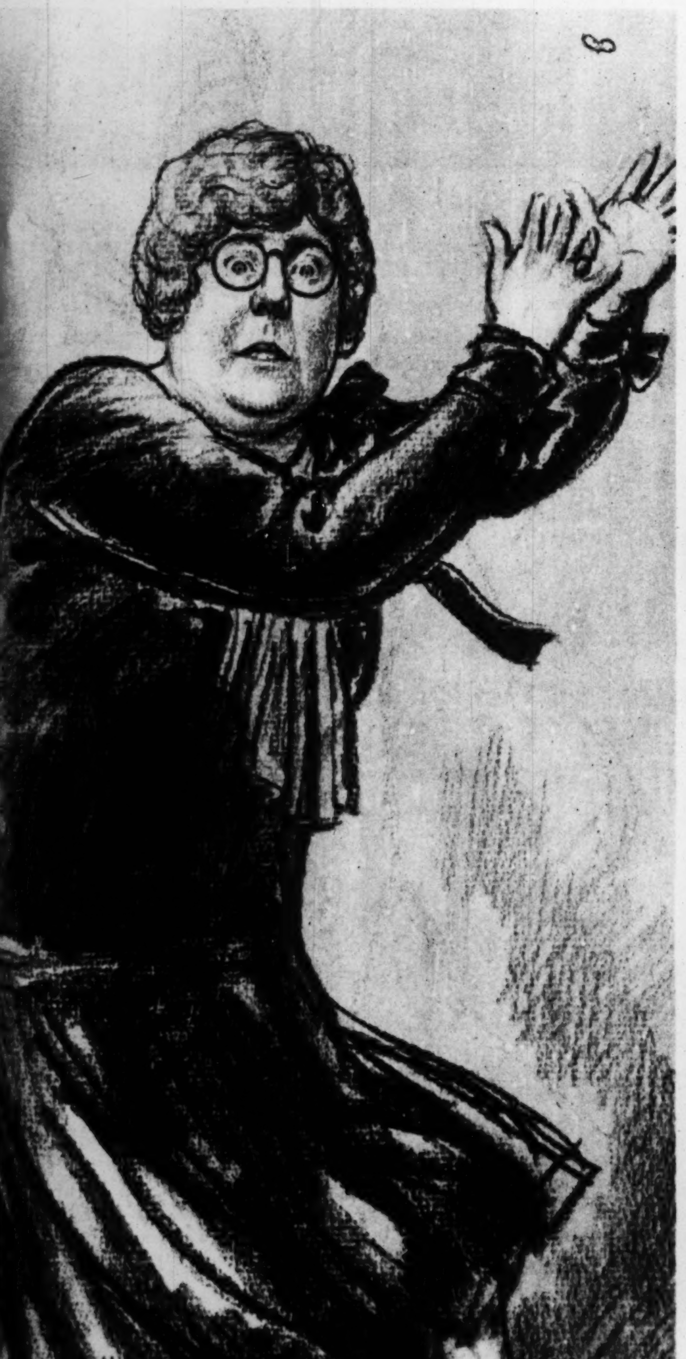
Emily is a golf bride. Before her marriage to Frank she practically took no exercise at all, except, perhaps, to get up from the davenport and walk over to see, if the radiator was on or off. But Frank has got Emily to take up golf, and Emily is just dear enough to want to be a dutiful wife. And for a whole week Frank went around telling the boys in the club that Emily said she didn't know how to hold her caddy. Then some spoil sport told Frank the joke appeared in Puck 'way back in 1898.



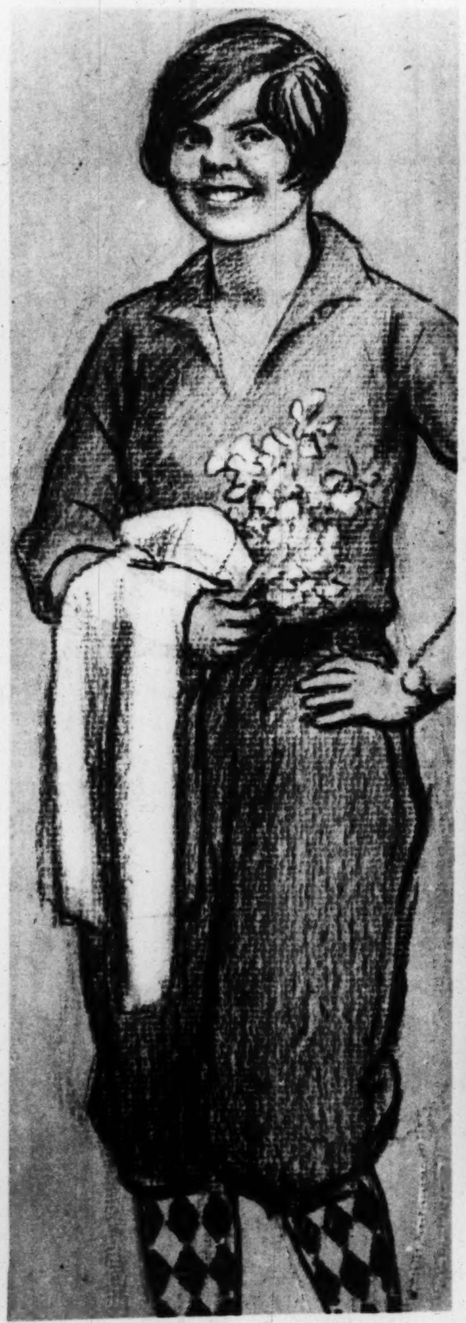
Mrs. Olga Wolquist is a very strong girl and gives assorted Swedish massage to a select few who can withstand harsh treatment. Loves to confide her hopes and ambitions to her clients. Tonight she's opening her heart secrets to Mrs. Horace Runkle. "If I had my life to live over again," says Mrs. Wolquist, "I'd take up embalming. That's a grand profession for a lady. No complaints from the customers and no back talk."



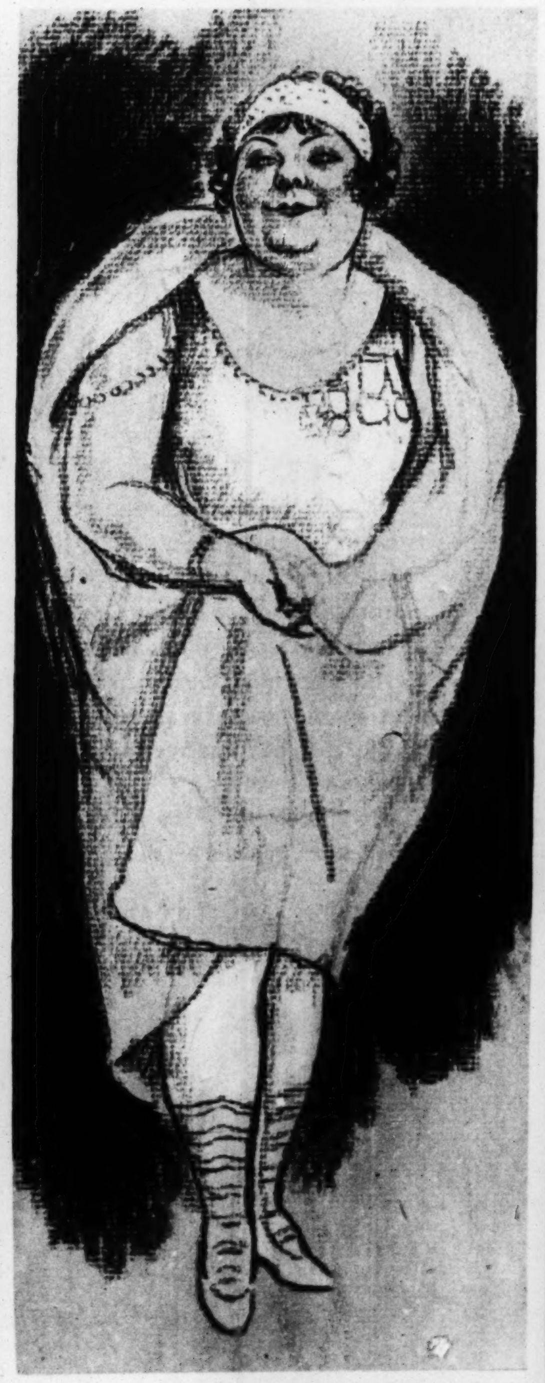
Clarine is a vaudeville acrobat and makes a refined art of her athletic ability. Listen to her, if you please, telling the orchestra leader to "try this on your piano!"



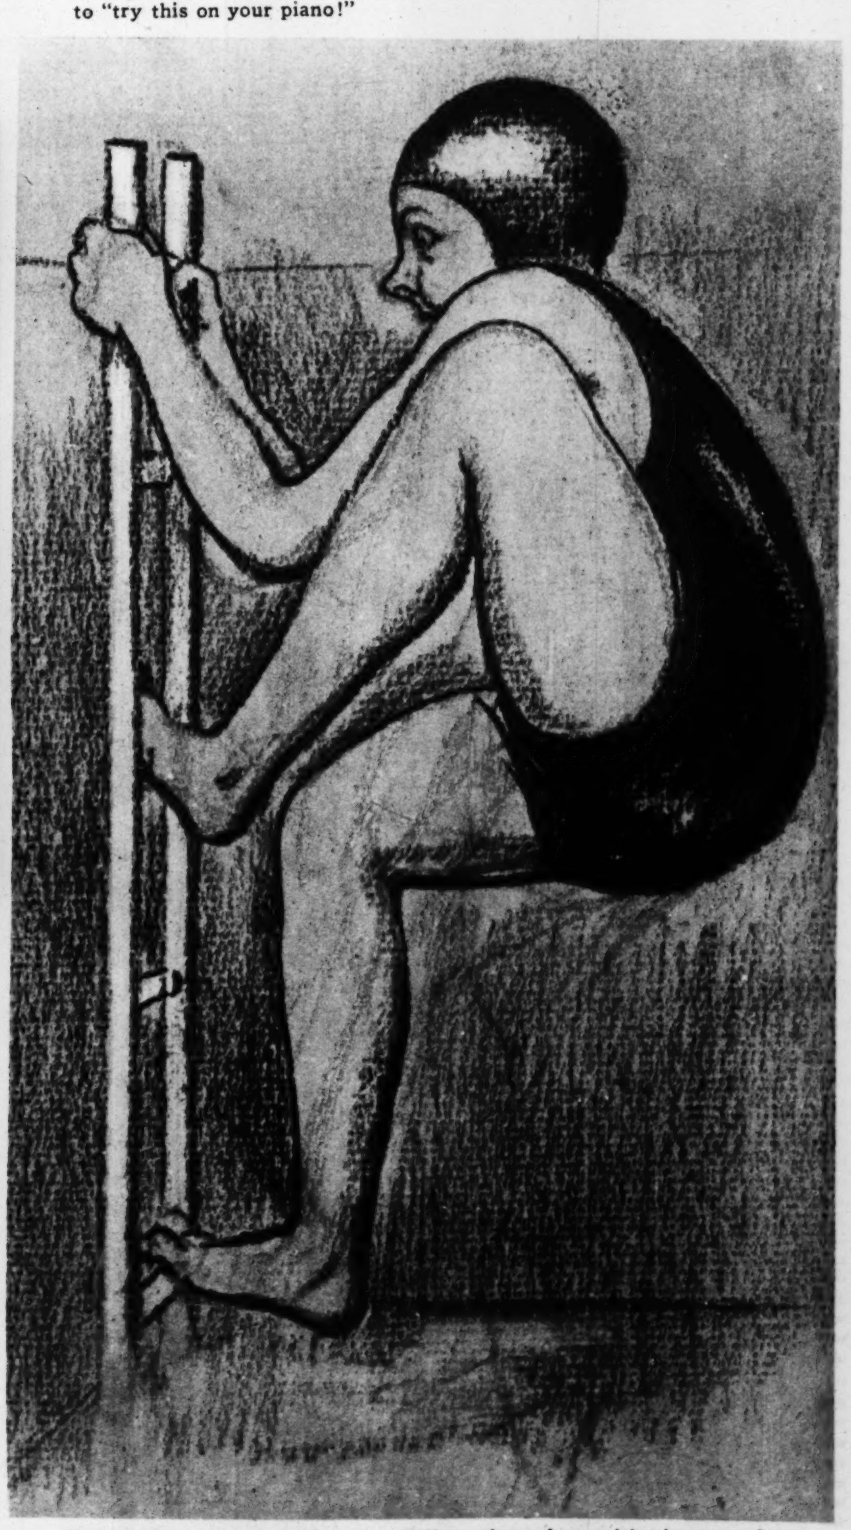
Many elderly ladies, although they seldom realize it, are very athletic around the house, at high jumps and ordinary leaps, whenever a moth shows its nasty face in the open.



The Sunday afternoon girl hiker will rush up and down small hills and big, uprooting big trees and leaving a trail of picnic lunch for miles around. She regards "No Trespass" signs as just a good joke on somebody's part, and when weary of the road will spend hours waiting for a hitch hike in just the right make of car.



Madame Sonia Breitkopf (nee Mandelbaum) is a professional strong lady of the more refined type. By that we mean that she never crushes any one's ribs or snaps a tibia in two off stage. The climax of Sonia's act is when she lies across two chairs with a board on top of her lovely body and lets an elephant, ridden by twelve stage hands, walk across.



Newsreels and roto sections are full up these days with pictures of athletic bathing girls, shown climbing in and out of pools and tossing off neat jackknife dives.

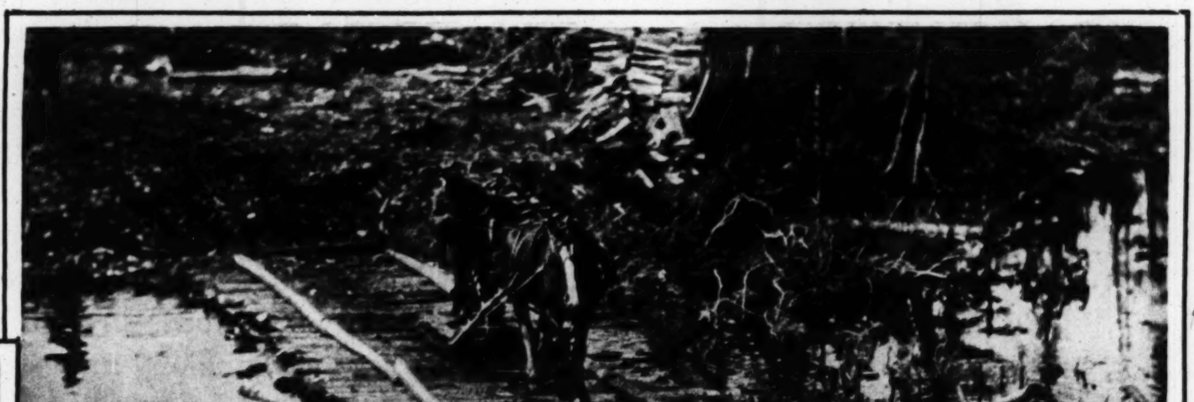
DYNAMITE SUCCEEDS WHERE MAN POWER FAILS—When a log jam gets beyond the power of man to break up, dynamite is used. Half a dozen sticks set off under the "key" logs of the jam speedily loosen it. Logs, accompanied by a cloud of smoke and spray, soar skyward. The jam disintegrates and surges forward with the river.

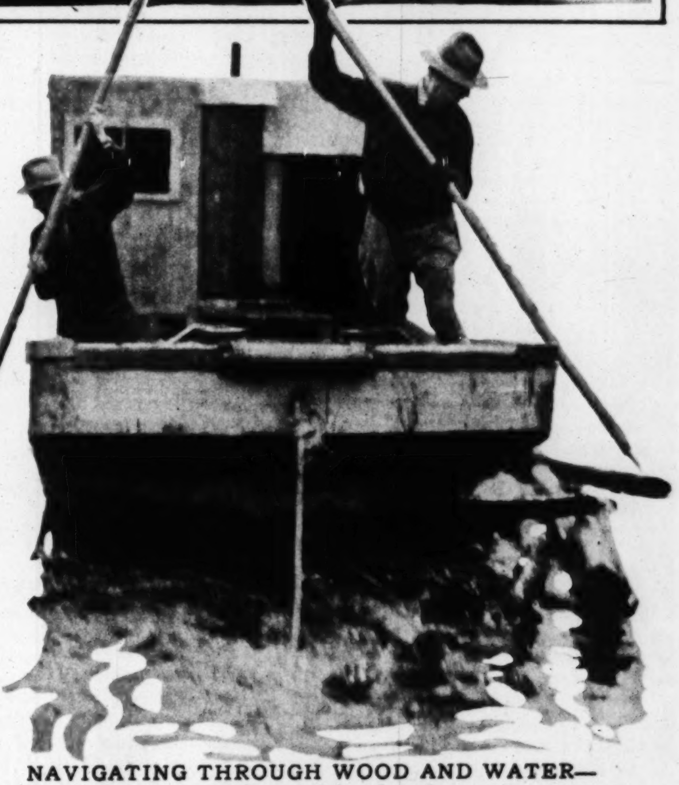
TREES TO TRIBUNES

The Romance of Newspaper Making—No. 4

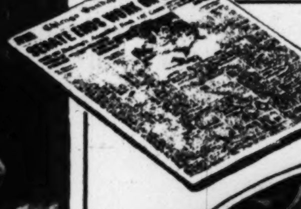
AT 11:30 a. m. today the broadcaster will narrate for you another chapter of the story of "Drive Time in Tribune Timberlands." Let his words take you to the grim northern lands where the Chicago Tribune has tamed a wilderness to provide it with paper. Don't miss this stirring tale of man's eternal conflict with the forces of nature. It comes to you from W-G-N. Have this page of pictures with you as you listen!

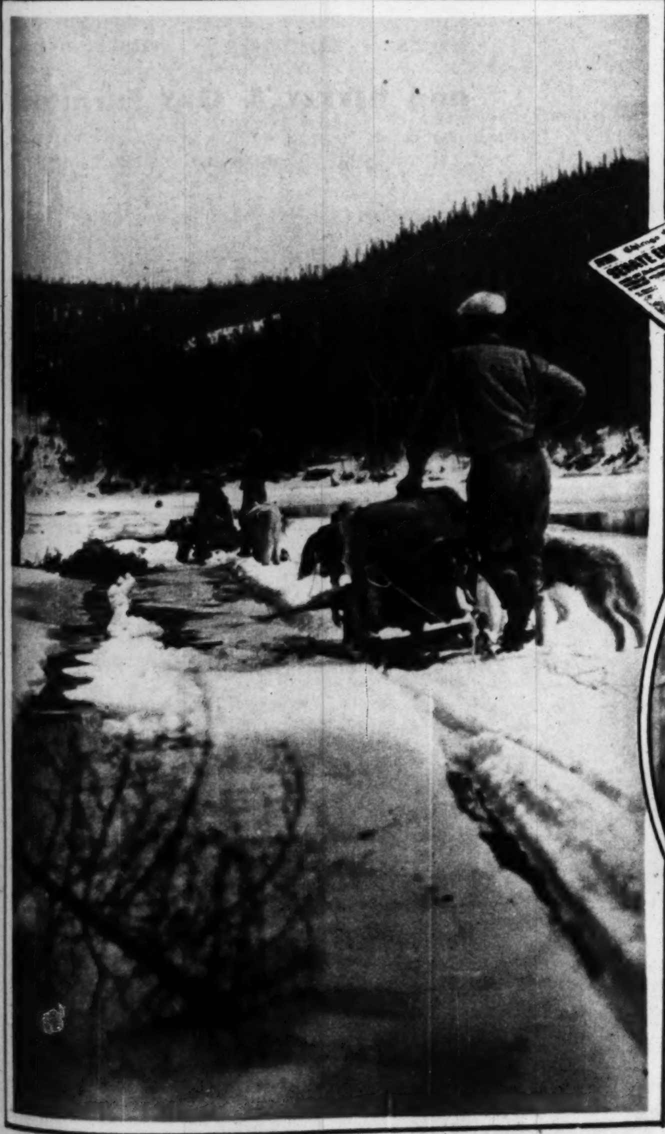


MACADAMLESS ROADS AND SNOWLESS SLEIGHING—Timberland roads are carried across swampy ground by laying a roadbed of logs. This is the type of road known as the "corduroy." The vehicle shown is a "bacognale," a crude sleigh used extensively, even when the snow has gone, for hauling supplies over rough forest trails.

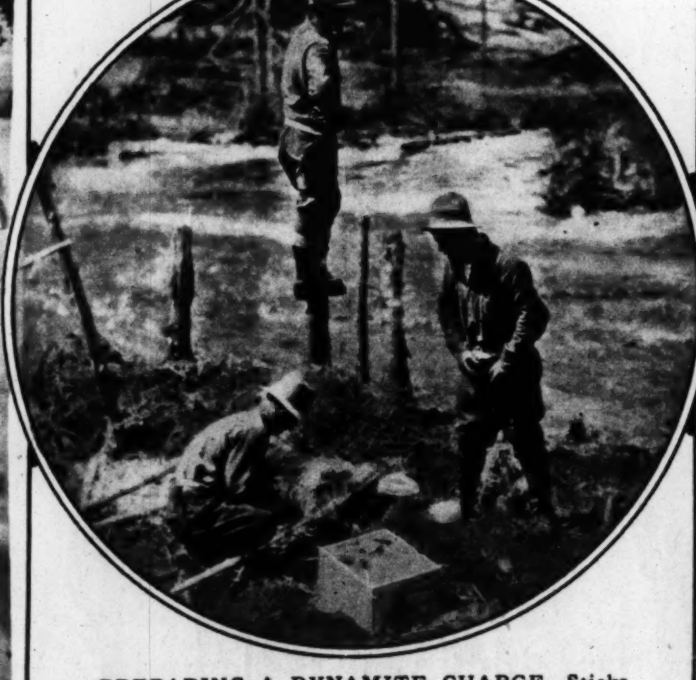


NAVIGATING THROUGH WOOD AND WATER—Sturdiness is the main requisite for the power scows which ply the big lakes in the Tribune's timber country. Few trips are made during the spring drive in which they do not have to buck their way through acres of floating logs.

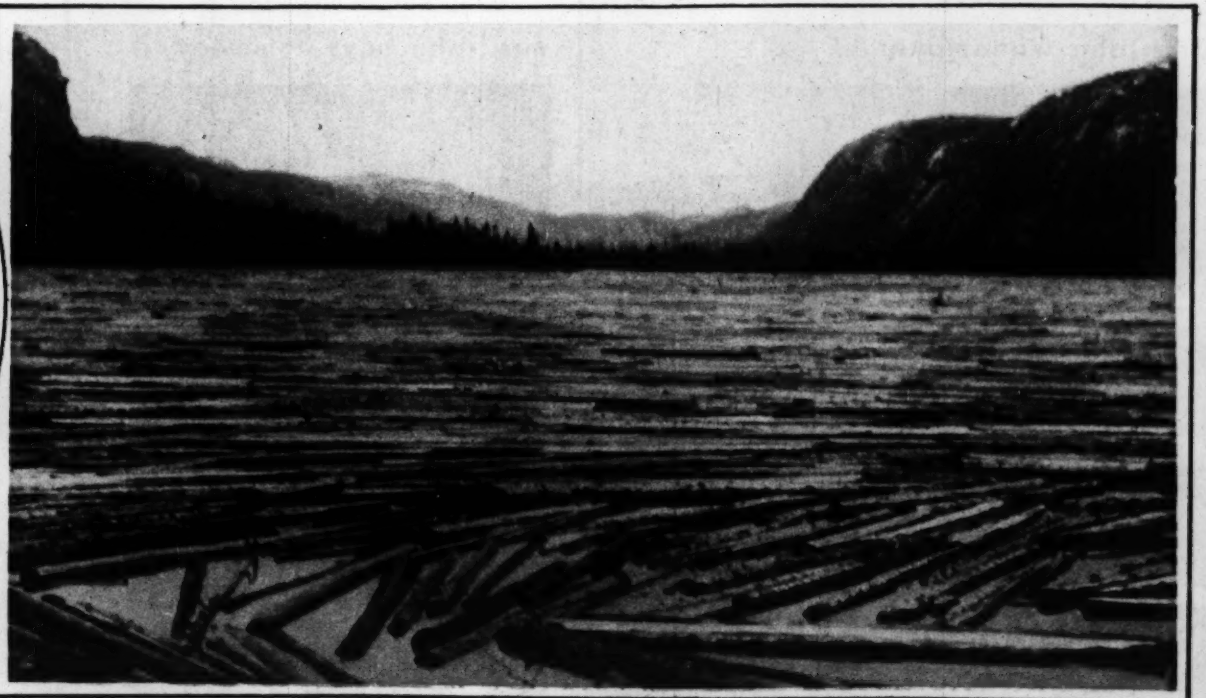




MAYTIME WHERE FUTURE TRIBUNES GROW—Dog-teams, usually associated with far northern travel, can be used in Tribune timberlands until well on in May. A week after this picture was taken, boats had replaced the "huskies."



PREPARING A DYNAMITE CHARGE—Sticks of explosive tied to the end of a long pole, a detonator and fuse complete the equipment used to blast a log jam loose. Compression for the explosion is had by placing the dynamite in the water under the logs.



SOUTH WINDS UNWANTED—Breezes are an important factor in taking Tribune logs down the lakes through which they pass on their way from forest to mill. Timberland waterways flow south, making northerly air currents desirable. In the picture above a huge raft of logs has been stalled by a south wind at the northern and wrong end of a big lake.

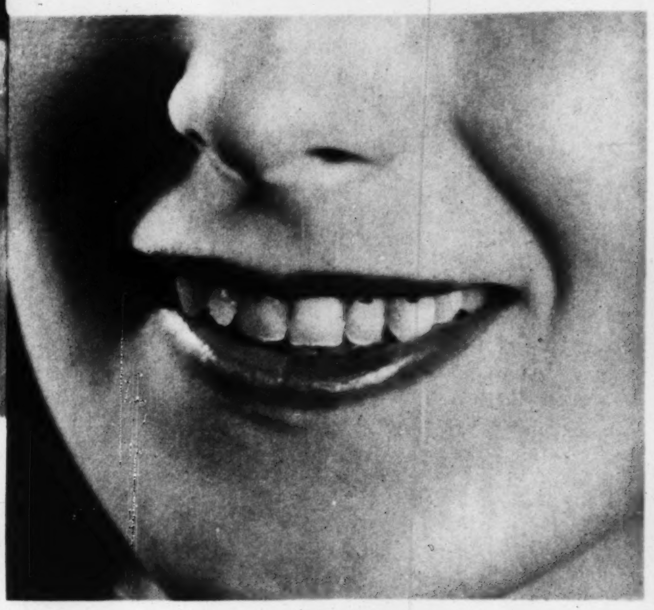
An example of gingival 3rd decay, a form of decay particularly associated with pregnancy, due to the presence of excess acids in the mouth at that time.



A cross-section of the tooth enamel, greatly magnified. Notice the "fuzzy" colony of decay germs attached to the enamel. These germs generate the acids which attack the teeth.

WISE IS SHE WHO AVOIDS THE "TEETH OF MOTHERHOOD"

Every expectant mother should know these facts about Squibb's Dental Cream—for it is the only type of dentifrice which affords these special benefits to protect the teeth during pregnancy

THERE'S AN OLD SAYING that every baby costs a mother's tooth. And certainly many women suffer serious damage to the teeth and gums as a result of pregnancy. What a pity! For the "teeth of motherhood" are by no means a necessary penalty.

During pregnancy, a woman's teeth are unusually susceptible to decay due, first, to the demands of the growing baby upon the lime stores of the mother's body . . . and second, to the presence of excess acids in the mother's mouth. Proper diet will supply lime salts. And Squibb's Dental Cream will protect the teeth and gums against acids.

For many years, doctors and dentists have advised expectant mothers to use Milk of Magnesia as a mouth wash to neutralize harmful acids. Squibb's Dental Cream is made with 50% Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. No wonder then today, that many physicians and dentists consider Squibb's the ideal dentifrice for the expectant mother.

Each time you brush your teeth with Squibb's you force tiny particles of Milk of Magnesia into the crevices and fissures of the teeth and render acids harmless even where your tooth-brush fails to reach.

More than that, Squibb's safeguards the gums. It definitely soothes irritation. Helps keep the delicate gum margin firm and healthy. And as long as the gum edge—The Danger Line—stays healthy, pyorrhea will not begin.

Use Squibb's Dental Cream regularly and notice the improved condition of your teeth and gums. Tooth decay is the work of germs which generate acids that attack the teeth. Squibb's Dental Cream combats these acids each time you brush your teeth.

It cleans beautifully and safely. It contains no grit, no astringents, nothing to injure the teeth or gums. You'll like the economy of the generous size Squibb tube. At all reliable druggists. E. R. Squibb & Sons, New York. Manufacturing Chemists to the Medical Profession since 1858.

The Danger Line is the line where gums meet teeth. As long as this knife-like edge of gum tissue keeps healthy, pyorrhea will not occur. In the cross-section above, notice the tiny crevice at each side of the tooth. The arrows show it. Food particles collect here, ferment and irritate the gums with acids. Eventually the delicate gum edge recedes. Then it is no longer a protection.*

Originated abroad for your beauty—brought to America for your convenience—The Eugène Method of Permanent Waving is preferred the world over for its grace and soft naturalness. It is the gentle method, considerate of your hair and you . . . . Please look carefully at the Eugène Sachet and its patented perforated steam tab, shown here.

THIS SACHET IS THE SECRET

This Sachet controls and directs the steam, where, when and as the operator wants it. Thus, stubborn root hair may be given more steaming than the tender ends . . . . . . And, in repeat-waving, only the new straight hair need be steamed at all. . . Be sure your hairdresser uses genuine Eugène Sachets—you'll know them by the Eugène Trade Mark—and gladly pay the extra cost for the safety they assure!

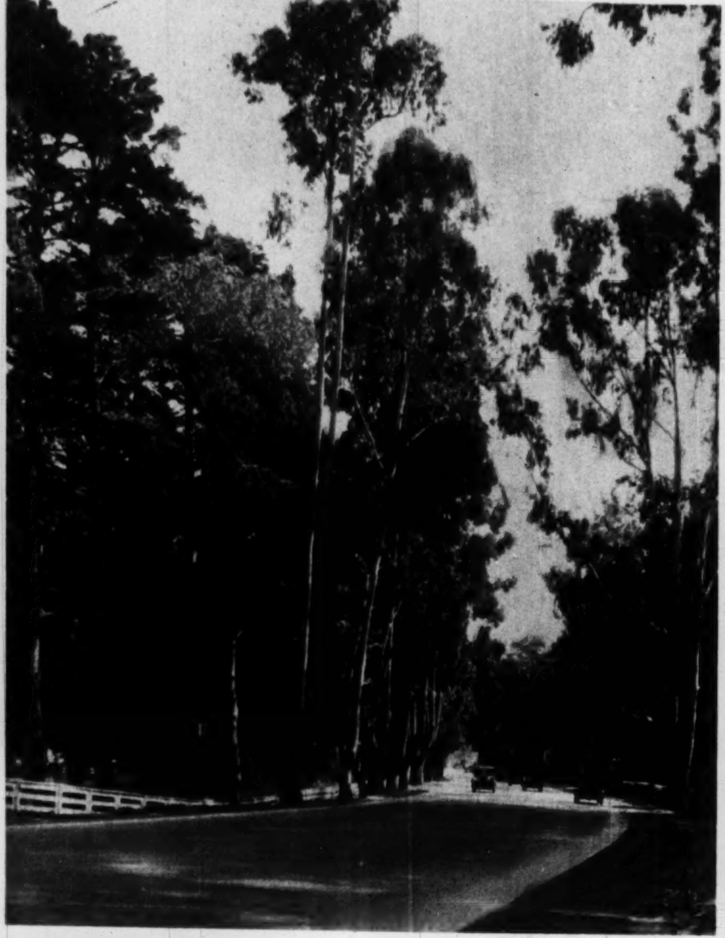
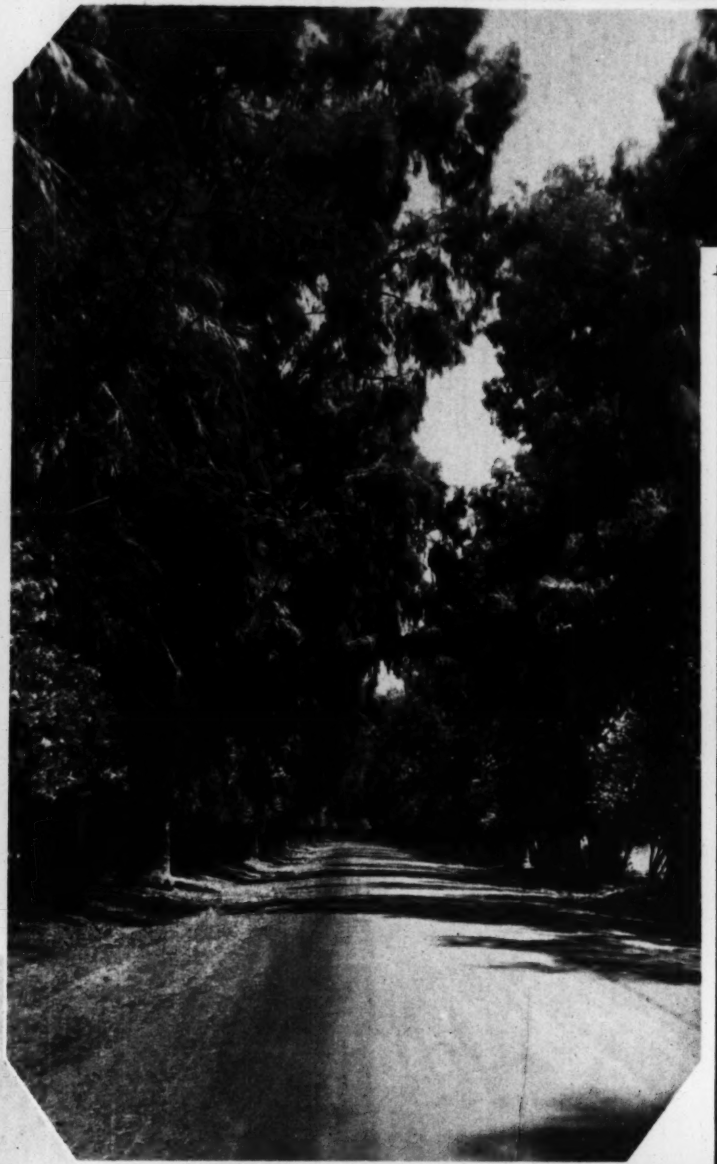
ALONG THE CHARMING MOTORWAY pictured here San Franciscans travel under arching foliage—a heritage from thoughtful and public spirited road builders of generations gone. It is the plan that Cook county's Forest Way shall one day equal or surpass the examples in this group. A first step toward a permanent arboreal improvement upon an important thoroughfare is being made this year; others will follow.
(Underwood & Underwood.)





KEARNEY DRIVE, near Fresno, Cal., is another example of results from bordering a highway with trees. It is eleven miles in length;* luxuriously shaded by rugged, venerable eucalyptus, interspersed with oleanders.

TREE LINED HIGHWAYS constitute the aim of Cook county's far seeing road builders. Here is an instance of what this development means: the Long Walk at Windsor, England, with trees centuries old.

The Accent here is on Refinement

This smart oxford is charming company for all street costumes of light woolens, crepellas, printed crepes and crepe de chines. Marcus F. Taylor.

Did you ever wish for an oxford that resembles the light, airy, graceful opera pump? One that suggests boulevards rather than hikes? Stetson presents it ... in this refined two-eyelet oxford. See the touch of elegance enscrolled by the delicate design of stitching and perforations ... and the abbreviated pointed tongue which coyly accentuates slenderness. In a light shade of beige or black kid. Other charming styles for the woman who glories in individuality.

the Secret of COOL BEAUTY

That Gladdens the hearts of admirers

Cool, tranquil beauty has ever aroused ardent admiration, and fortunate is she upon whom Nature has lavished so bountiful a gift. Yet it is amazingly easy to transform one's complexion to a cool smoothness . . . so sure . . . so sophisticated . . . so alluring . . . for Boyer's Flowers of Beauty Face Powder is unaffected by bodily heat . . . it is cool . . . clinging . . . beautifying.

It puts an immediate end to shiny skin and transforms rude-roughness into satin-smoothness that is charmingly youthful . . . and the effect lasts for hours and hours.

The fragrance is a rare and subtle odor that accentuates charm and allure . . . and the shades have been carefully blended to softly tone in with the skin coloring of any type . . . your druggist can give you exactly your right shade.

Never neglect pore protection

When you try Boyer's Flowers of Beauty Face Powder . . . your mirror will flash back an improved effect that you will like immensely. The large box with puff is but $1.00 . . . and there is a handy glass tube for the purse . . . two weeks' supply . . . for only 25 cents.

Most every woman knows that a clean pore never distends, but is the very beginning of smooth skin beauty. Boyer's Skin and Pore Cleanser is an amazing cleanser . . . its beneficial, light oils penetrate to the depth of the pores, floating out waste and neutralizing skin-ageing acids. It is a tissue-tonic as well as a pore cleanser and ten days use of this new cream will show you why women who can pay any price are loyal to the 75-cent jar of Boyer's Skin and Pore Cleanser.

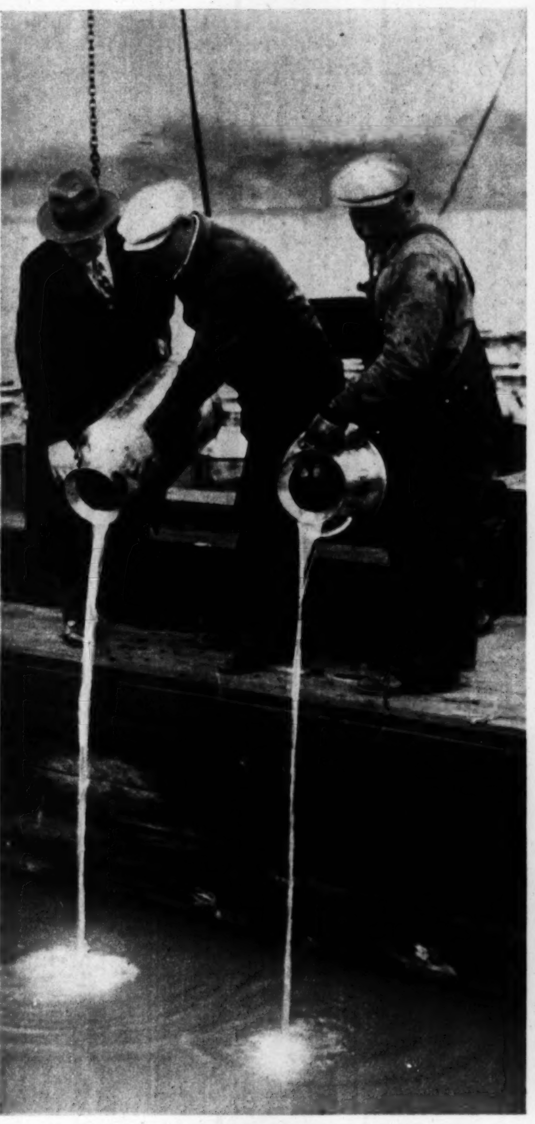
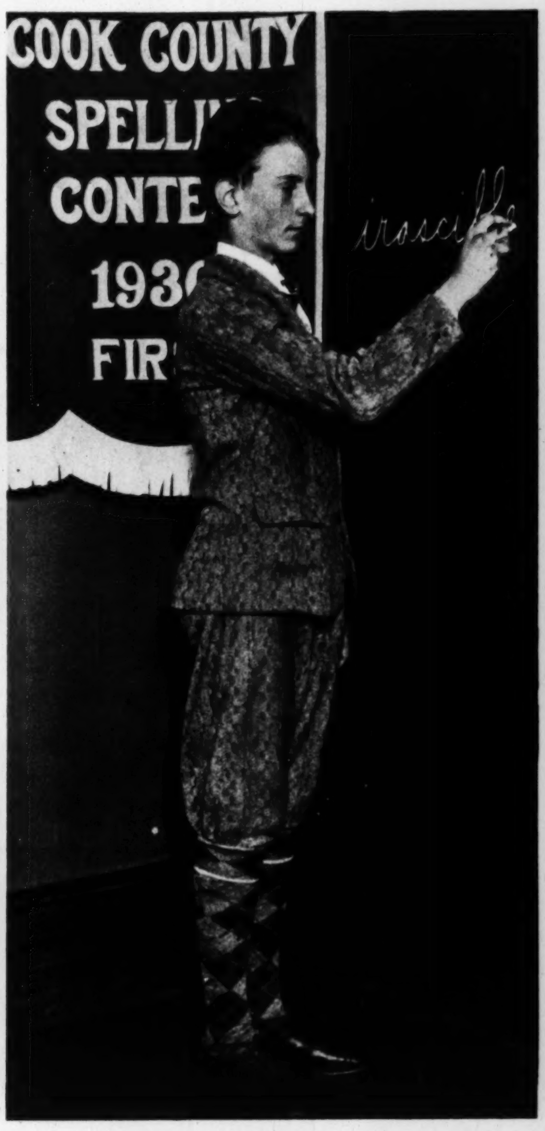
BREAKING THE WAVES—In the wake of one speedboat off Navy pier a second flashing craft gives its occupants one of boating's most delicious thrills. (Photo by Edward McGill of The Tribune staff.)



ANOTHER FISH STORY, but this time about little ones: Lincoln park officials dump 1,500,000 young lake trout into Lake Michigan, there to swell the finny population and make the world a brighter and happier place for fishermen. (Tribune photo.)



THE WORD HE MISSED—William C. Cray Jr., 14, of Brown school, Northfield township, took first place over eighty-three other entrants and won a gold medal and banner for his school in the annual Cook county spelling bee. (Tribune photo.)

VISUALIZING INTERESTING LETTERS—Homeward bound, Commander Richard E. Byrd first touched at Dunedin, New Zealand, after flying over the south pole. Today's winner in The Tribune Interesting Letters' contest was mailed at Dunedin by G. H. Brown, master of Byrd's ship. The picture shows city and bay.

"DAMN THE TORPEDOES! GO AHEAD!" Admiral Farragut's immortal order, which was instrumental in snatching victory from defeat at the battle of Mobile bay, takes memory back to a day when the embattled nation found sea power vital to self-preservation. In the career of fearless Farragut there is quickening thrill; and in his love of country, which he valued above life itself, there is thought for our day.

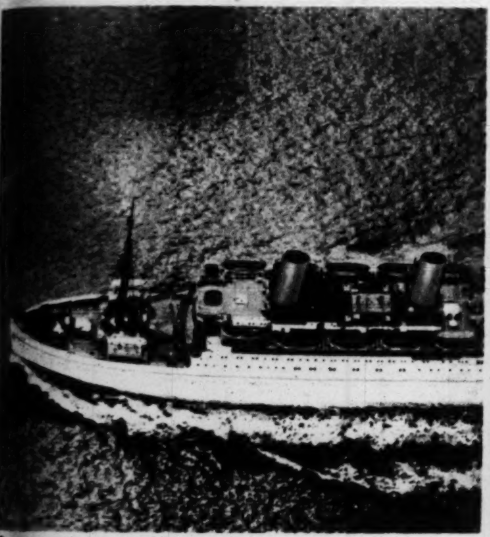
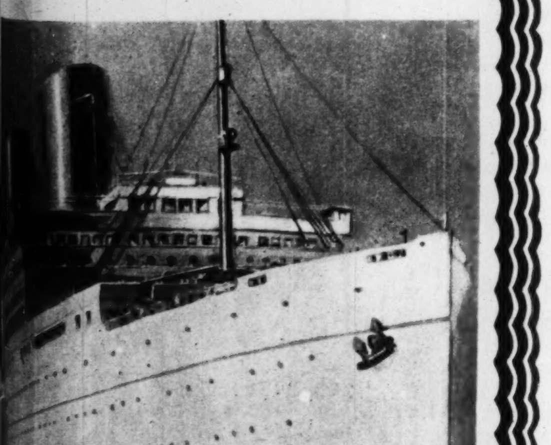
2 WORLD SEAPORTS . . .
18 OCEAN GIANTESSES . . .
born of this 1000-MILE Seaway



GAY in their gleaming holiday attire, the luxurious Empress and Duchess liners head for Europe between two magic coastlines. Norman-French Canada bids them a lovely 48-hour bon voyage . . . on either deck-rail, habitant villages and farms, fields, forests and mountains. Two days of this picture-book seaway . . . then, after only 4 days open seas, Cherbourg and Southampton, or Havre, Antwerp, Hamburg, Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast, London.

© ASSOCIATED SCREEN NEWS, LTD., MONTREAL

St. Fabien and Laurentian mountains from 1500 feet in the air



HAVE you heard about this latest giantess of the Atlantic? Another mighty Empress nears completion in Scotland. She'll be the Empress of Britain, 40,000 gross tons! She'll make her maiden voyage in 1931, with every new luxury of ocean travel within her great white hull. She'll steam from the heart of America to Europe in 5 days!

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED THIS DIRECT "TAKE-OFF" TO EUROPE?

DID you know there are 2 famous ocean harbors . . . Québec and Montreal . . . which are a 2-day voyage from the sea? Did you realize that Montreal is America's second largest seaport . . . and yet, 1000 miles from the Atlantic? Would you believe that the mammoth docks of these seaports . . . some of them 1000 feet long . . . receive and send forth each month a high-seas cargo of 1,600,000 tons?

All this world-shipping activity is born of the St. Lawrence . . . not a "river," but a huge seaway . . . an actual salt arm of the Atlantic! Ages ago, the Atlantic thrust this irresistible wedge into the verdant heart of North America. It started 90 miles wide . . . 20, 15, 10 miles . . . then narrowed to two miles across . . . a majestic, balmy-surfaced ocean offspring reaching 1000 miles from the ocean. No wonder the early French explorers thought it their long-sought passage to China!

Today, 220 "ocean bottoms" a month ply up and down the St. Lawrence seaway . . . merchant ships to and from the earth's largest ports. They include Canadian Pacific's fleet of giantess passenger liners, led by the renowned white Empresses and Duchesses. Full speed ahead, their prows part the St. Lawrence seaway . . . a shorter and most direct route to and from Europe.

Every year adds thousands to the stream of travelers who have "discovered" the Empresses and Duchesses and the St. Lawrence seaway. Ask these people about this unique route to Europe. They all say it's a wonderful, delightful way to go.

WHITE EMPRESSES AND DUCHESSES WITH EVERY TYPE ACCOMMODATION

Canadian Pacific's huge passenger liners offer you any type of accommodations. You wish the utmost in first-class luxuries? Board a shining white Empress. The latest advances in cabin class? Take a regal Duchess, one of 4 new sister ships. The fleet also offers the popular tourist-third facilities, as well as third class. Whatever the accommodations, they include Canadian Pacific service and cuisine, famous on the earth's every horizon. Remember, 3 to 5 sailings a week.

CITY FOLKS WITHOUT CARS SHOULD BE PITIED — ESPECIALLY SO WHEN YOU CONSIDER THAT ONE OF THE USED CAR BARGAINS ADVERTISED IN THE "AUTOS FOR SALE" COLUMNS IN THIS SECTION WOULD PERMIT THEM TO GET OUT AND ENJOY THE WIDE OPEN SPACES, TOO.
SALESMANSHIP IS FASCINATING, AND THERE IS BIG MONEY IN IT, TOO, PROVIDED YOU FIND THE TYPE OF SELLING JOB THAT FITS YOUR PERSONALITY AND ABILITY. YOU CAN FIND THAT POSITION BY STUDYING THE "SALESMEN WANTED" ADS LISTED IN THIS SECTION.
WHY NOT PROTECT SUCH VALUABLES AS YOU MAY HAVE ABOUT YOUR OFFICES? YOU CAN DO SO BY PURCHASING ONE OF THE BARGAINS IN USED SAFES ADVERTISED IN THE "OFFICE FURNITURE, FILES & SAFES" COLUMN OF THE TRIBUNE.

What We Mean By the Natural Way to Learn Languages

For a half century the Berlitz Method of Language instruction has been known as the NATURAL Method. Natural, because by this Method you learn to speak and understand ANY language as you learned English when a child—simply by hearing the language spoken and then talking it yourself. That's all there is to this Method. Yet yearly more than one hundred and fifty thousand men and women learn another language the Berlitz way. You can, too, because it's so utterly different from what you've been accustomed to at school. Little book work; no laborious concentration; no troublesome, memory-taxing rules of grammar. Just fascinating round-table discussions that make progress automatic and enjoyable. Come up for a free demonstration lesson in French, Spanish, German or Italian. The telephone is Harrison 0392. Phone for an appointment.

High Caliber Closers
Who Like the Thrill of BIG MONEY and Have Made
$10,000-$25,000 per Year

Here is a real big money making deal actually going over. Sound financial setup. A1 people back of it. Deliveries made promptly. Men paid in full; big commissions when sales are made. Customers followed up at Company's expense. Salesmen receive full commission on all repeat business. This feature alone offers unlimited earning possibilities. Customer W. H. I. recently bought deal on which salesman's commissions were $105.00. Within three weeks he placed a reorder on which salesman's commission was $520.00.

We have a patented specialty of vast economic value which we sell to distributors. It is highly salable by the distributor and shows the distributor a tremendous profit. We have a definite proven selling plan for the distributor. We back our merchandise with an iron clad guarantee which proves a saving of several hundred per cent a year of each sale. However, there are other attractive features which have far greater sales value than the economy effected.

This specialty retails for less than $10.00. The profit to distributor is $5.00. One of our salesmen, J. H. D., recently made eighty-five sales in one week to prove to a distributor the profits which could be made. Thus the proven profit possibilities to a distributor properly working single handed for one week would be $425.00.

Salesman J. H. D. made $280.00 the week before this was written. He recently made $360.00 a week. His earnings are seldom ever less than $180.00 a week. He was not a big money maker before taking this proposition. D. W. was a salesman for a distributor, he made fourteen sales in one day—a profit of $70.00 for the distributor, then he came to our office to get a job selling distributors. M. J. H. also recently joined our organization. He recently made and received $630.00 in one week. He has not previously been a big money maker, but expects to hit the $1,000 a week mark before long.

This deal has been tested from every angle. We started active sales operation in August. October's business greatly exceeded all previous records. In November, our shipments increased 500% over October; December increased 900% over October; January increased 1387½% over October; February increased 2100% over October, and March increased 3000% over October. We are now growing by leaps and bounds, although our business is still in its infancy. Prospects are readily located by the distributor, there are literally millions of them. We have just gotten our production to the point where we are ready to put on an organization to cover the United States. More than 98% of all territory is virgin. We are not going to employ a large number of men. Each man will have all the territory exclusive he can handle to an advantage.

We will only employ men of the highest caliber. They must have gilt edged references as to both ability and integrity. They must be real producers, not "would bes" or "has beens," but "izzers." Men who are to date doing business as it is done in 1930. We do not expect to employ a salesman who has not made $10,000 per year or more over a period of time.

We are old salesmen ourselves and have put our own money in this deal. We have tried it out for a year. We have sold it ourselves both to the consumer and to the distributor. It is the biggest and best money maker we have ever seen for a specialty salesman. We believe it will make any man, qualified to handle it, all the money he will ever need. If you are looking for that kind of a deal and can meet the necessary qualifications, call, wire or write.

Kankakee Steamer Co.
310 S. Michigan-av., Chicago.

MR. SALESMAN

ANALYZE the sort of selling job that you want—the job that will pay you the greatest return for the time invested. Your analysis will probably include and stress the following points:

1. An item or product that has already created a wide demand in diversified fields.
2. That appeals to all kinds of business activity—manufacturers, jobbers, distributors, banks, insurance companies, public utilities, etc.
3. That repeats several times a year.
4. That has little or no active competition.
5. That will interest a man who has earned $8,000 to $10,000 per year or more.
6. That can be sold in units to suit the individual customer.
7. For which leads and inquiries are constantly being received and furnished to the salesmen in their respective territories.
8. Because of the fact that the item or product is known and universally used the sales presentation can be brief and thereby make possible a maximum number of calls per day.

WE have such a product and are prepared to show you how closely what we have to sell conforms to the above eight points.

THE product is new, is one for which there is a tremendous demand, and—it is a virgin deal.

IT is a service used by sales organizations to stimulate and increase sales. It has already proven its result-getting value through actual use by nationally known organizations. Nevertheless, it is a brand new idea and therefore offers a virgin opportunity to the salesman.

MEN who have a record of success in the field of intangible selling—who are accustomed to an income of $7,500 per year or more, and who appreciate an opportunity to form a commission connection with a company rated AAA1, which has a record of achievement covering more than a quarter of a century, may telephone Randolph 4745 and ask for Mr. Dalton F. Burns. If you can answer our questions satisfactorily over the phone you will be given a personal interview.

100 GALLONS OF GASOLINE FREE!

WITH ANY USED CAR PURCHASED

Here is an opportunity to buy a good used car at a rock bottom price and get 100 gallons of gasoline free in addition.

We need extra room for more trade-ins, and that is the reason for this sensational offer. You obtain a 100 gallon gasoline book, good at any Standard Oil station in town, no matter what car you buy.

NASH CABRIOLET. 1929 series 400 conv. Coupe with rumble seat. This is one of the snappiest sport cars in Chicago. Has low slung lines, and an attractive paint job. The motor runs smoothly and quietly, and the equipment includes 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. At our price of $545 it will not remain 24 hours.

ESSEX COACH. 1928, lacquered a beautiful navy blue. It received very little mileage, so it's in new car condition today. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, shutter front, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Will not remain long at $285.

STUDEBAKER BROUGHAM. Spec. 6 equipped with heater, trunk, spare tire, snubbers, two spotlights, etc. Has nice mohair upholstery. $95.

DODGE ROADSTER. 1929, only driven a few thousand miles. Has beautiful orange wire wheels, side mounts, trunk rack, shock absorbers, bumpers, windshield wings, etc. Has khaki top and rumble seat. This is one of the sportiest looking Roadsters in Chicago today, and it's brand new in every respect. $785.

FORD COACH. Late model A that's in topnotch condition throughout. The finish has not a mar on it and the tires are in good shape. 4 whl. brakes, wire wheels, Houdaille shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $395.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER. 1928, five pass. Sedan finished an attractive bottle green. The Big Six motor is smooth and powerful. The upholstery and carpets are in dandy condition. Has 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Special for $450.

GRAHAM-PAIGE SEDAN. 1929 with 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. The owner of this car drove it exactly 11 mos. and then decided what he wanted was a Victoria. So he sacrificed this car at a low figure. His loss is your gain, so you now have an opportunity to get a practically brand new Graham-Paige at only $695.

CHEVROLET COUPE. Here is an ideal car for the business man. Has exceptionally good tires and many extras. Motor was carefully checked over. A pickup at $125.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. Std. 6 with expensive mohair upholstery and many extras, including spotlight, shutter front, spare tire, bumpers, etc. The finish is bright and shiny. Has excellent tires. Will be sold immediately at our price of $250.

CHRYSLER BROUGHAM. Model 70 that will please the most exacting buyer. Has a sweet running motor and the equipment includes 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. This attractive car is a real value at $250.

BUICK SEDAN. Mast. 6 seven pass. with 4 whl. brakes, heater, spare tire, bumpers, etc. It was oiled and greased every 500 miles by the original owner, so it's in topnotch condition today. Has exceptionally good rubber. Only $445.

REO SEDAN. This is the car noted for its long life. The finish, upholstery and tires are in dandy condition. $145.

STUDEBAKER DICTATOR. A late 5 pass. Sedan that we recommend as one of our very best buys. The finish, upholstery and tires are all in wonderful condition and the motor is very efficient. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Reduced to $385.

BUICK SEDAN. 1829 Mast. 6 that's the last word for sparkling performance and attractive appearance. Equipped with shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. The finish actually glistens. Has a sweet running motor. Will be sold at once for $785.

CHRYSLER ROYAL SEDAN. 1929 model 75 that sold for over $1,800 a few months ago. Due to sickness in the family this car was practically not used at all. Upon getting well, the owner decided on a Roadster, so he traded in this Chrysler at a very favorable figure. Lacquered an attractive tan and equipped with shock absorbers, wire wheels, shutter front, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Will be sold immediately at our price of $1,085.

CADILLAC SEDAN. An expensive car at an inexpensive price. It's in clean condition throughout and runs O. K. $195.

ESSEX COUPE. Late model with rumble seat. This car was in storage for 8 mos. Today it's in exceptionally fine condition. Has 4 whl. brakes, shutter front, shock absorbers, spare tire, driving light, etc. $445.

PONTIAC COUPE. This late model must actually be seen to be appreciated. Finish has not a scratch on it and the upholstery is in the original new condition. Has good tires and many extras. $350.

OLDSMOBILE COACH. We recommend this as one of our best buys. The motor runs smoothly and quietly and the appearance is attractive. Has trunk, five good tires, bumpers, etc. $275.

AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE.

PIERCE-ARROW

SAVINGS OF $150 TO $350 NO MATTER WHAT YOU BUY!

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN

1927 five pass. model 80 that was owned by a wealthy family in conjunction with two other Pierce-Arrows. Result is it was given very little mileage. It still has the original finish which glistens like a new dollar, and the expensive upholstery has not a worn spot on it. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, Houdaille shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Our special price now is $700.

LOCOMOBILE COACH.

1928 eight, that's absolutely in brand new condition today. Equipped with new tires, shock absorbers, driving light, etc. Will not remain 24 hours at our price of $685.

CADILLAC SEDANS.

We have two Cadillacs in stock that are very attractive buys and we offer them at remarkable savings. One of them is a 1929 model 341 five pass. Sedan. It's equipped with shock absorbers, spare tire and other extras. Every feature is in the original new condition. In fact, this Cadillac was driven so little that we defy anybody to distinguish it from a brand new model. The other is a 1928 model 341 five pass. Sedan, with hundreds' of dollars worth of extra equipment. Has very low mileage. The finish sparkles like a new dollar and the upholstery appears unworn. Motor is very smooth. Both of these Cadillacs are priced unusually low.

PACKARD VICTORIA

1928 str. 8 that positively cannot be distinguished from a brand new Packard today. It's a 4 pass. Coupe with wire wheels, side mounts, Houdaille shock absorbers, driving light and other valuable equipment. The finish is a handsome two-tone tan. This is one of the finest cars we have ever had in our stock and it sold for $4,500 a short time ago. It's 100% today, but we priced it at $1,550 for quick sale.

PIERCE-ARROW SPORT PHAETON

Model. 80 with 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, windshield wings, trunk, bumpers, etc. The upholstery and tires are in the original new condition. Motor has been carefully checked over, and now it's topnotch in every respect. Finished a beautiful maroon and tan. Special, $550.

LINCOLN SPORT SEDAN.

Special LeBaron body. This car was in storage for 14 mos. so it will give new car satisfaction today. Equipped with Houdaille shock absorbers, trunk, shutter front, spare tire, foot rests, bumpers, etc. Originally cost $6,000, now $1,050.

NASH SEDAN

1927 DICTATORS
REDUCED TO $445

We have 4 used 1927 Dictators that are so good in appearance and performance that they can sell themselves to you. Under the terms of the famous Studebaker Pledge, we offer you 5 days' driving trial. If the Dictator you select does not please you and your family in every way, return it and receive full credit on any car in our stock—new or used. $445 is our sale price on the luxurious Dictator Sedans—less than you would pay for the cheapest and most unsatisfactory small six. Think of the comfort and the satisfaction of driving one of these champion cars.

They are all fitted with expensive mohair upholstery and are lacquered attractive colors. They come equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, front and rear, spare tire, and other valuable extras.

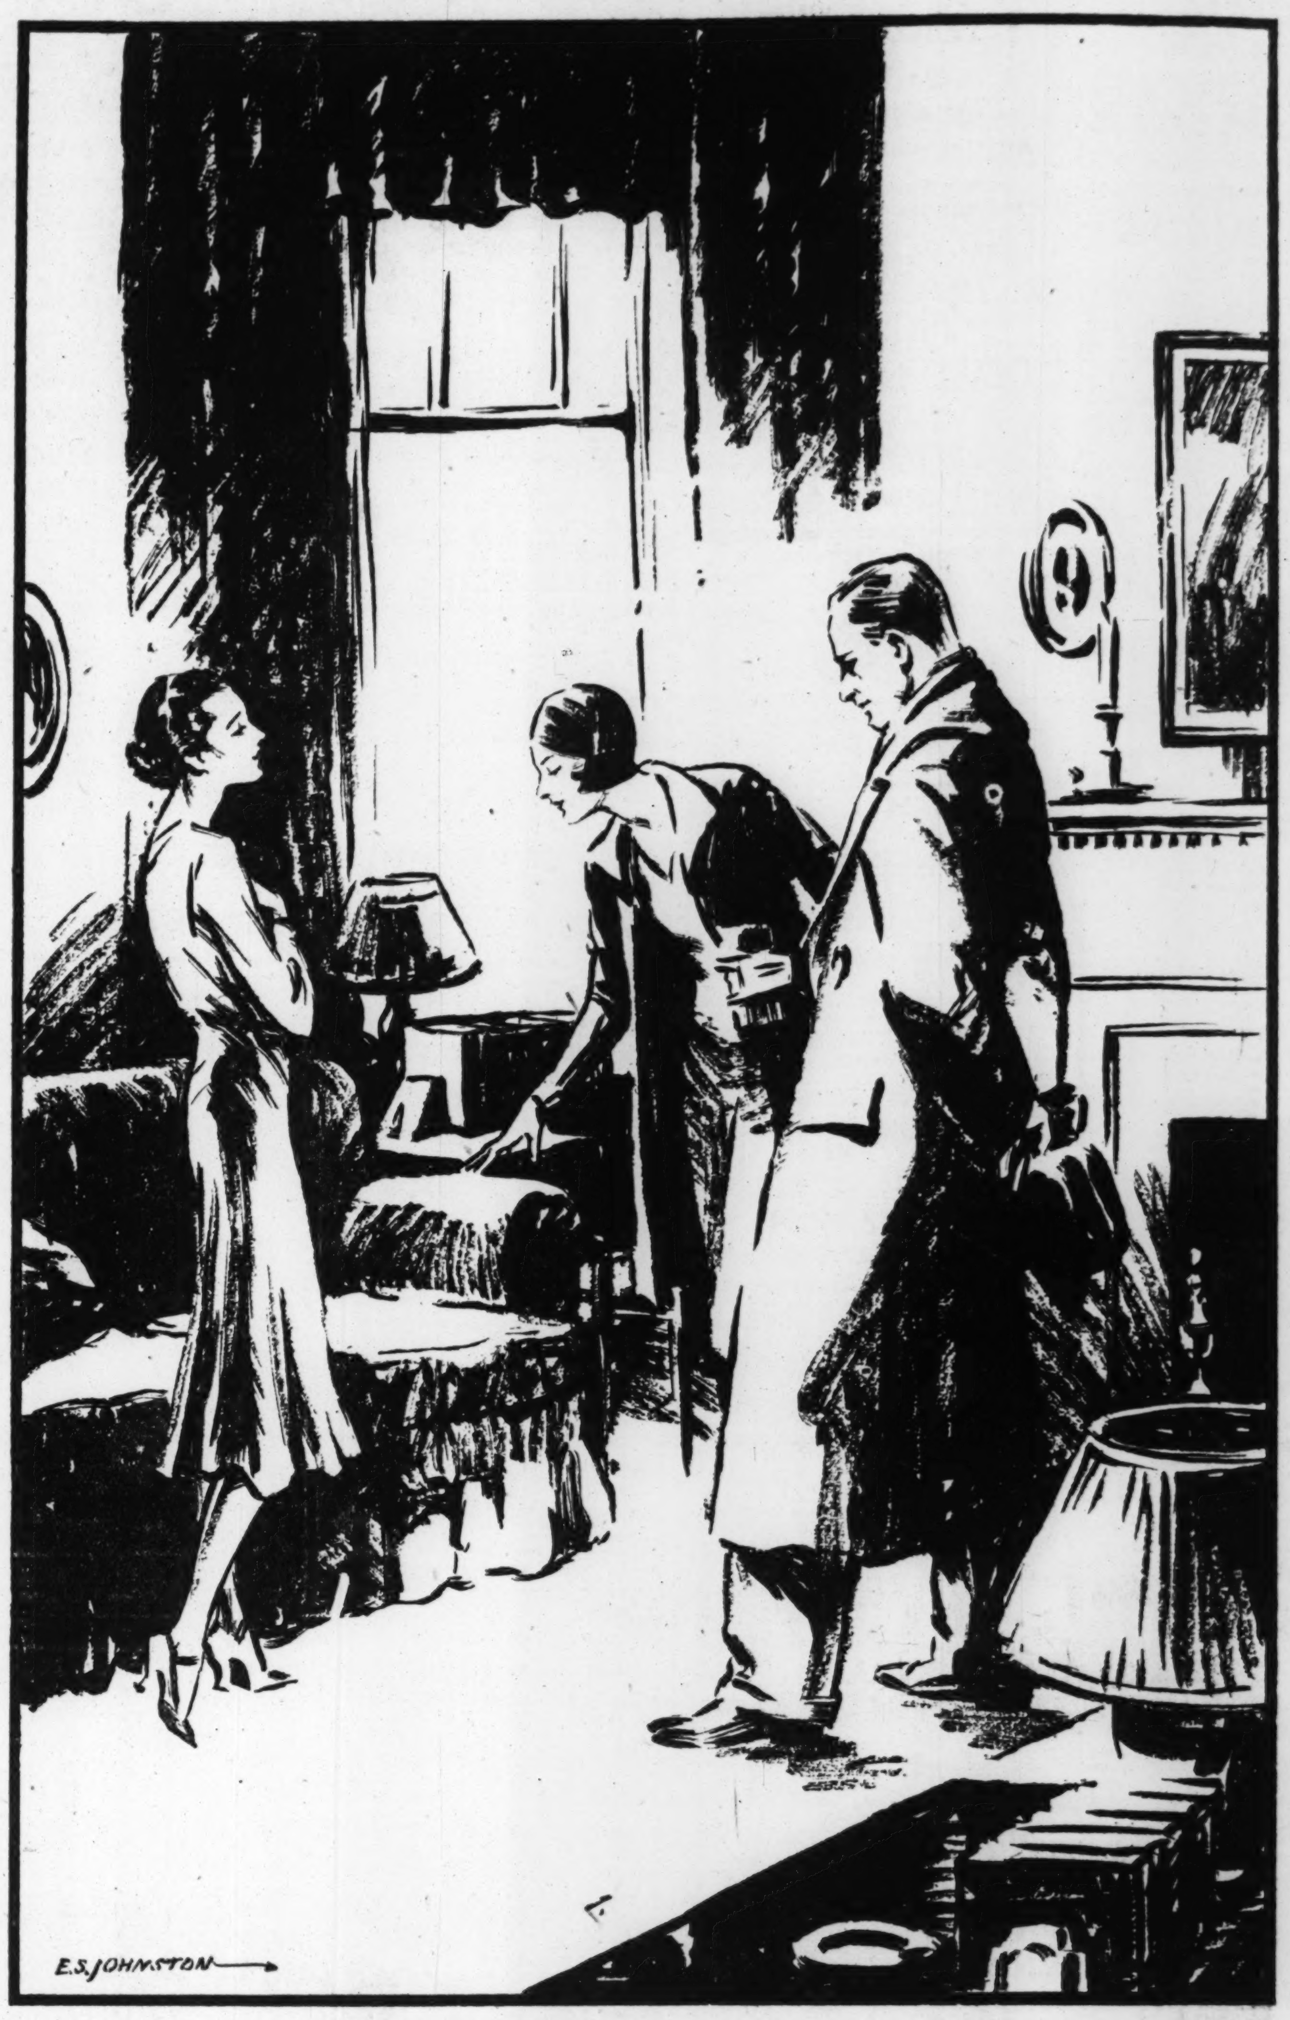
"How can we save money on furniture?"

New in the city, they had to keep the budget low. Yet they wanted to buy handsome, comfortable chairs, an attractive bedroom suite, good rugs for a small apartment. And they had to do it quickly. Hotel bills were mounting.

A native Chicagoan suggested a look into Tribune Want Ads. Surprised, they found more than a column full of Household Goods for sale at prices easily within their reach. One couple, moving out of town, offered complete furnishings, and a lease for a four-room apartment. They took both, saved more than two hundred dollars, days of shopping and moving. Now, for whatever they need, their first thought is Tribune Want Ads.



Whatever you want . . . seek it first in TRIBUNE Want Ads

THEY did what you can easily do with your Tribune any morning. Turning back to the Want Ads, Household Goods column, you have bargains in rugs, furniture, complete suites at your call. There's no trouble about it. It's simply part of your Tribune reading.

And Household Goods is only one department of Tribune Want Ads. Another may list the apartment in which you want to live. Another suggests courses of instruction you could use advantageously in your work or social life. The Want Ad Section lists hundreds of such services, all ready to help you—services as different as a carton of fresh eggs, direct from the country, and a trip to California in a car driven by one who wants company and some one to share expenses.

Use the services here offered! Whatever you want at the present moment, seek it first in the Want Ads for convenience, saving, satisfaction.

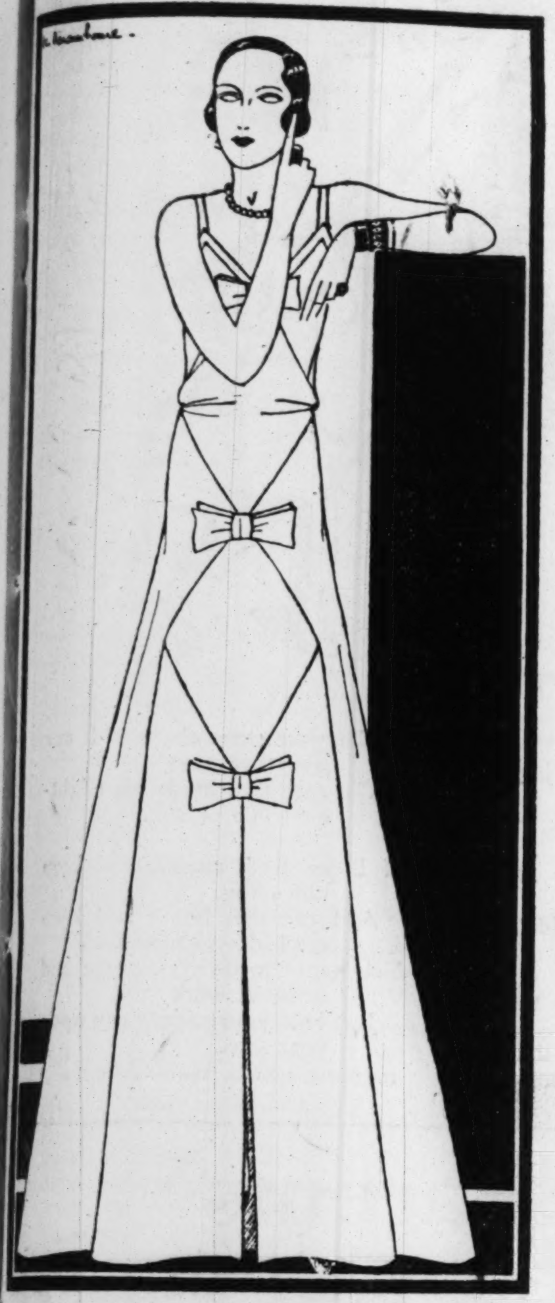
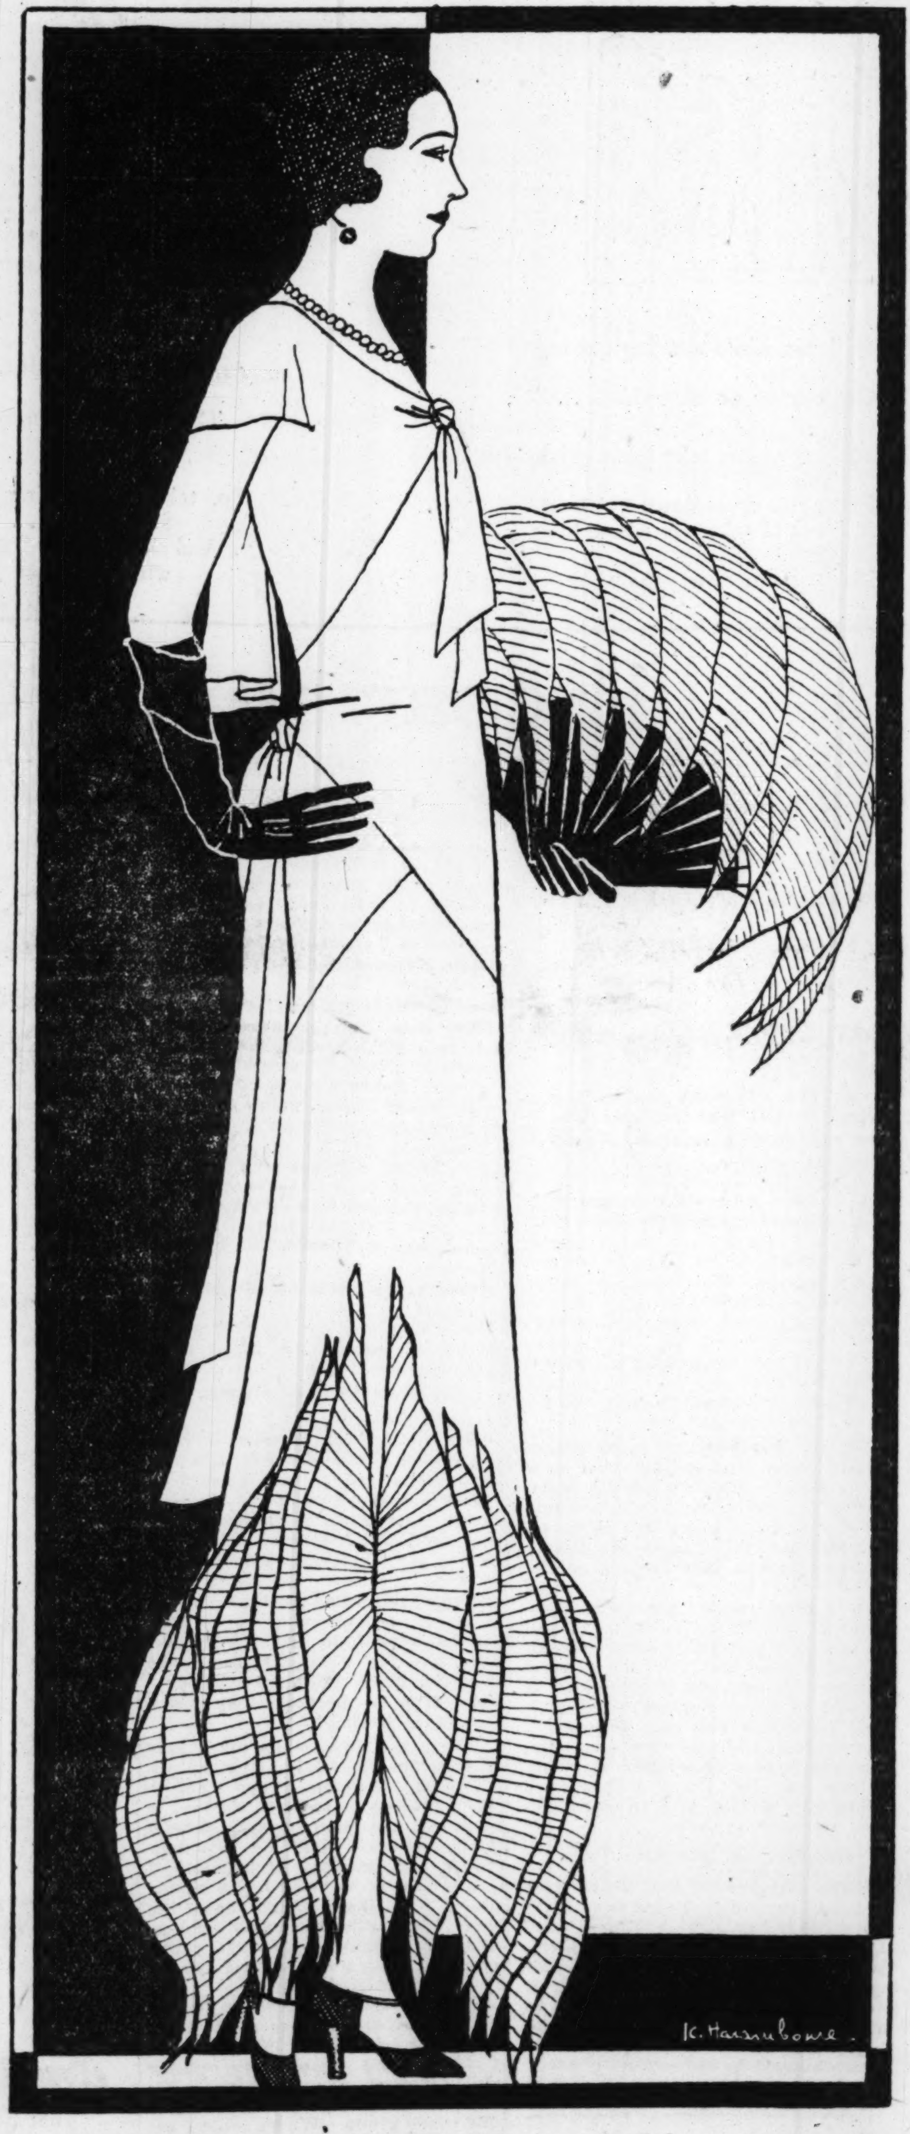
INTERNATIONAL CHIC -- SUMMER MODEL

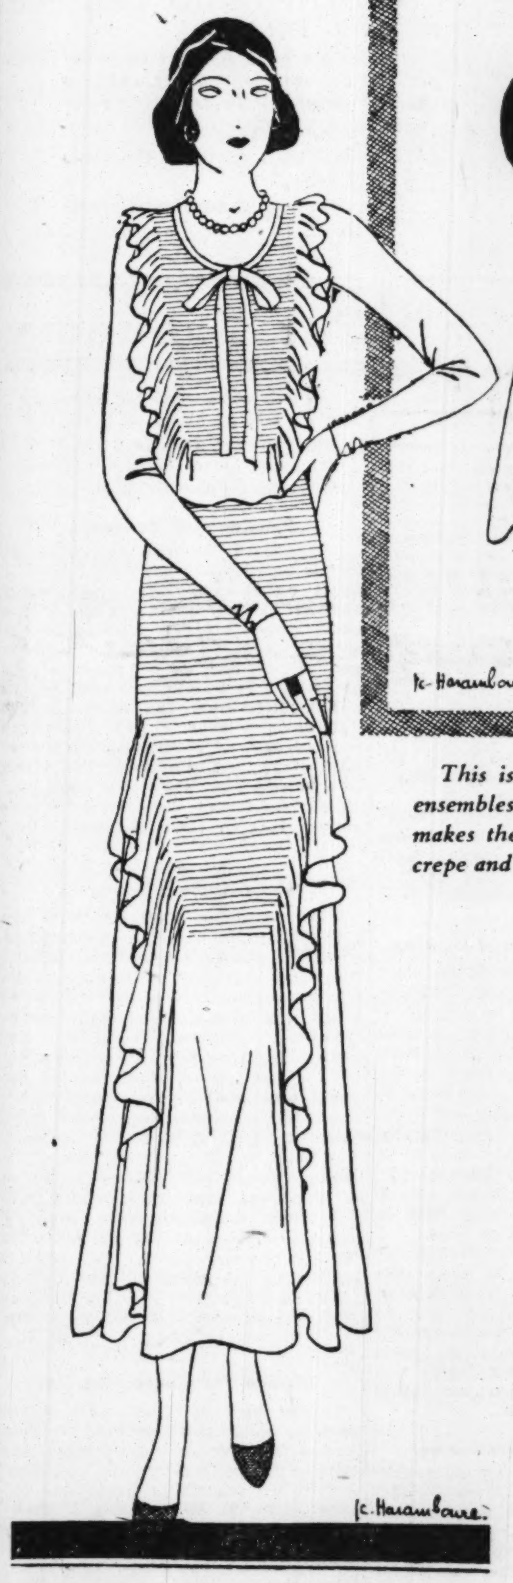
If You Dress in Harmony with Your Type and Your Environment and if You're Modern, You'll Achieve a Rare Degree of Smartness.



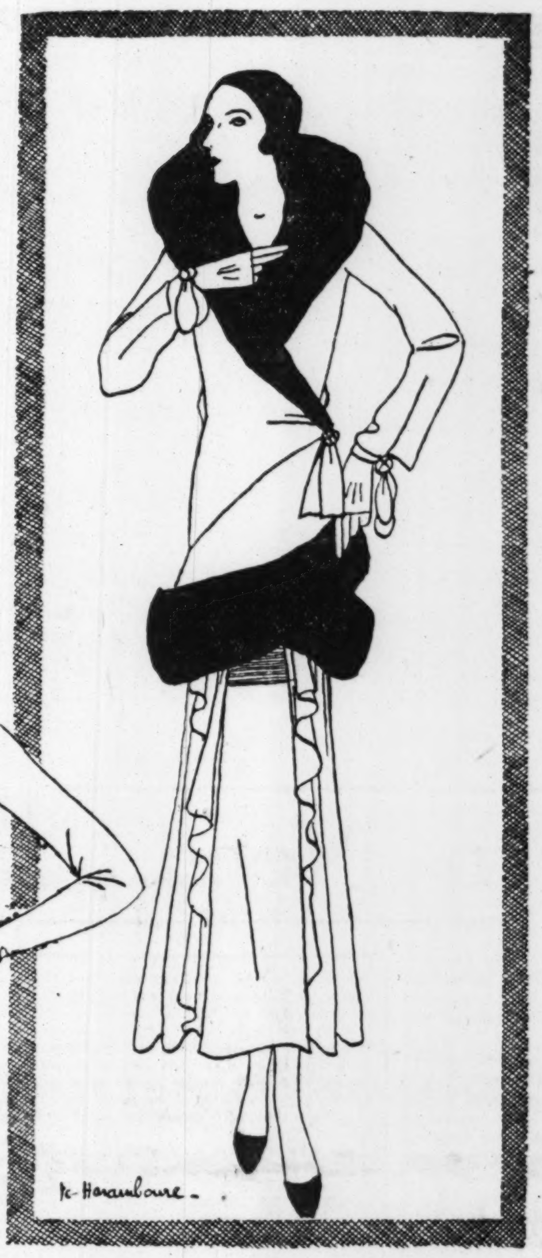
Lelong makes this smart and simple evening frock of stiff satin in his new bright, light green.



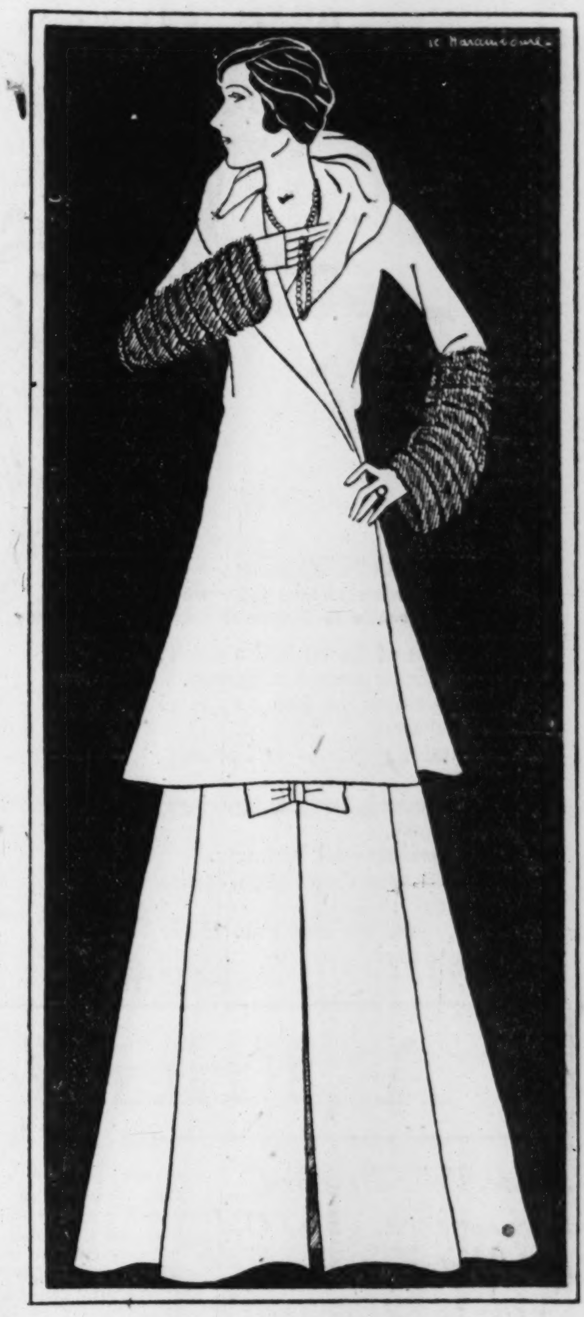
Fan-like ruffles of accordion plaited chiffon give this Lelong princess evening frock of white chiffon an unusual line. The fan is also of plaited chiffon.



The frock of the ensemble is slate-blue georgette and is lavishly tucked by hand.



This is one of the smartest afternoon ensembles to be found in Paris. Lelong makes the short coat of slate-blue wool crepe and trims it with black lynx.



This short flaring coat is made of Lelong green satin and is trimmed with mink.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—(Special.)—What is chic? And how to grasp it? These two questions are something to which every woman should know the answer, these days.

One thing is certain, chic is no longer a national affair. It isn't French, nor is it American, for that matter. It is as international as happiness, and quite as individual. Chic has a lot in common with happiness, in fact. Both are conditions arising from being perfectly at one with your time and yourself.

Chic, and happiness no less, consist largely in being a joy to the beholder as well as to yourself. The worst drawback to either is conscious effort. When conscious effort gets into your clothes then the bluebird of chic flies far, far away.

A witty Frenchman recently said to me: "The worst enemy of chic differs according to the nationality of the woman. The Frenchwoman's deadliest foe is her mirror. She goes to it entirely too often. The American woman, on the other hand, looks at too many pictures, and not sufficiently at herself." I think he pretty accurately hit the nail of Failure-to-be-Chic on the head.

To be chic, according to the latest 1930 model, is to dress so that the severest critic cannot find the slightest discord between you and your clothes, nor between you, your costume and your environment.

Environments differ, but they have one quality in common, anywhere in the western world. They are all modern. This is just as true of the women who follow fashions, except for an occasional lone lady born out of her time, and these few we shall not consider in this analysis.

To be chic today, then, your clothes must be modern. No period stuff. They must fit their frame, and that means no theater or cinema stuff, either. In short, shun copying pictures whether they be living, painted or moving. Be your own heroine. Let your chic play up to you.

Fashion, this summer, does not give us a factory-made style. We are offered a pattern, and we are supposed to adapt the pattern to our own, natural selves. Paris shows heaps of variations of the summer style pattern, but there will always be necessary modifications to make, in the cause of personality and place. You have both a physical and spiritual personality and chic can be adapted to the two. The "grand chic" is nothing but a complete accord between these personalities, plus conformity to the large ideal of fashion, which is the pattern before mentioned.

Questions of skirt length, placing the waistline, fitting, color and fabric are to be settled by your physical personality. Skirts should be worn longer or shorter, even or uneven, according to your Nature-endowed figure. Fashion makes no undeviating rule about them. Paris says "higher waistlines," but she doesn't say "One waistline for all women." You have to find your own, and place it to correct natural defects, or emphasize natural beauty.

Coats and dresses may be fitted, if Nature has been kind to your curves. If not, they lose all chic by too much fitting. They should flow, not fit. In no case should any garment fit so snugly as to impede movement, for modern life is movement, and all chic depends on this fact.

The rules for colors and materials are always secondary to personal appearance and environment. Pretentious fabrics and ostentatious colors are a duo to be avoided by most women. Muddy, dead colors are active enemies to both chic and charm. If you wear beige or gray, for example, wear the pure, clear tones of these shades. If your coloring is neutral, and you don't wear rouge, steer clear of them altogether.

Neutral colored women are more effective in positive colors, and if they will use rouge artistically they will often be downright beautiful. High-coloring of skin, hair and eyes demands the opposite treatment. They should be dressed down and not up, or the effect will be posterish. If your coloring is warm, but not brilliant, wear warm colors that are not too bright. If your coloring is brilliant, temper it with cool fresh color.

Watch the surfaces of the materials that make your clothes, and their effect on your skin. This applies equally to furs. Delicately built and featured women look enchanting in lace. Heavier women appear better in chiffon or georgette. You must consider your build and your complexion if you are to arrive at that fine harmony that is real chic.

Niether colors nor materials will do you justice if they call attention to themselves apart from you. This is particularly true for daytime dress. One is allowed more leeway under electric light.

A woman with neutral-complexion would be stunning in the Lucien Lelong ensemble shown in two sketches today. This ensemble has a frock of bright, light green, stiff satin, made with a rare beauty and lack of pretentiousness. Its sole trimming consists of three flat bows of satin in front, and the lines are not fitted except at the hips, so that they are adaptable to almost any figure. The toe-tip length of the skirt gives a gracious height, that is helped out by the slight flare of the lower skirt.

The coat of this ensemble is made of the same green satin as the dress, and has a slightly flaring line from the normal waistline. The draped collar of self-material is flattering—more so than fur. The deep cuffs of mink add a touch of luxury, and supply a charming color contrast to the green of the fabric.

In another picture is another Lelong model for evening wear. Lelong makes this dress of white chiffon, and gives it a princess silhouette so that it is adapted perfectly to the large woman, who isn't really fat. The little capelet sleeves that merge into a waist-deep cape at the back of the waist, are an excellent camouflage for arms that are too heavy at the top where they join the shoulder.

This frock is flared on the lower skirt by accordion plaited ruffles of chiffon set on vertically at right angles to the skirt itself, and the fan is made of the same accordion plaited chiffon. It is mounted on black enamel sticks, and the black gloves and slippers repeat this contrasting color.

Shown elsewhere is a Lelong afternoon dress made of slate blue georgette. This frock illustrates the finest kind of chic for afternoon, with its simplicity and lack of pretention. Every one of the fine tucks on skirt and blouse are stitched by hand, and merge into ruffles at the sides. The sleeves are long and closely fitted.

With this dress Lelong places the coat shown in a smaller sketch. This short coat is made of slate blue wool crepe, having a basket weave, and it is draped and tied on the left side at the waistline. The collar and band at the bottom are made of black lynx, a fur which is as flattering as fox and more suitable for the woman with a heavy figure.

The cool, slate blue color of this ensemble is a far better choice this season than any of the duller neutral shades, and far more becoming to most women.

Paris Snapshots

Worth reports that his smartest clients are passing all other pastel shades by and choosing blue for sports clothes this spring.

Deep berthas of real lace slipped on over the head are veiling the decollete of many smart evening gowns seen around Paris. They are detached from the dress and can be removed if you want to be more formal.

Plaid chiffon, or georgette having a white ground, is used to make many of the most fashionable blouses worn about the style capitol. Chanel launched them first, and now everybody is making them.

Fashionable women have completely abandoned trailing frocks for evenings in the public eye. A good many are wearing skirts that do not reach to the ankles.

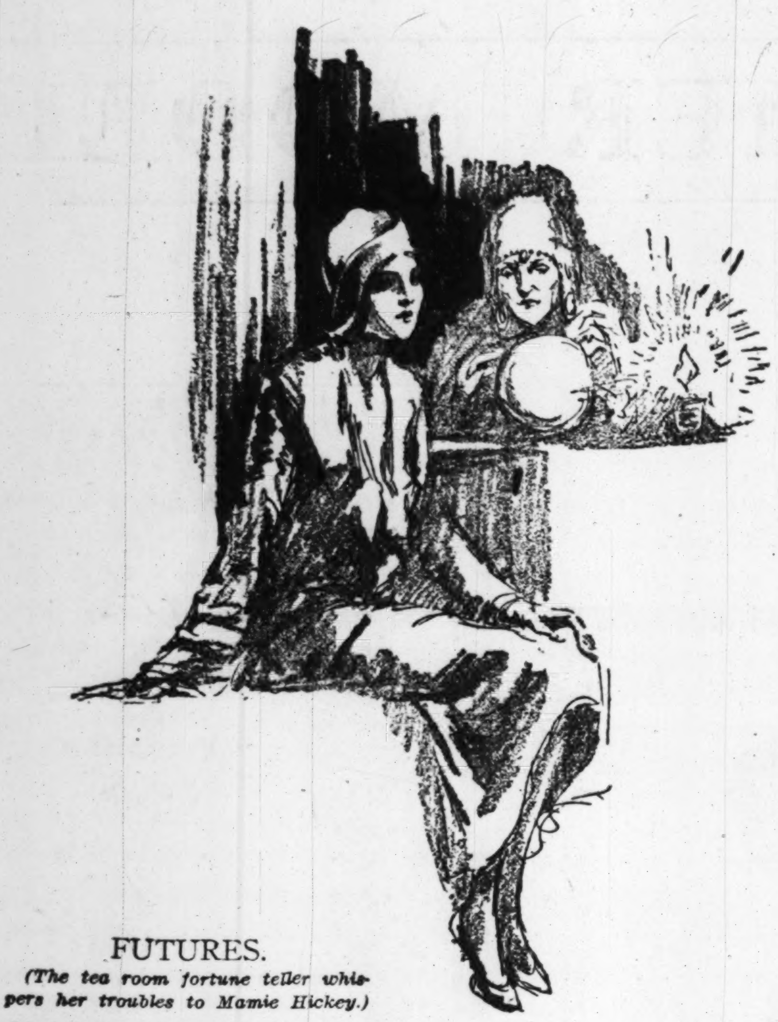
Marouf is showing slippers and bags made of tweed to match your street suit. They are bound with leather.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS . . .

By Sara Moore

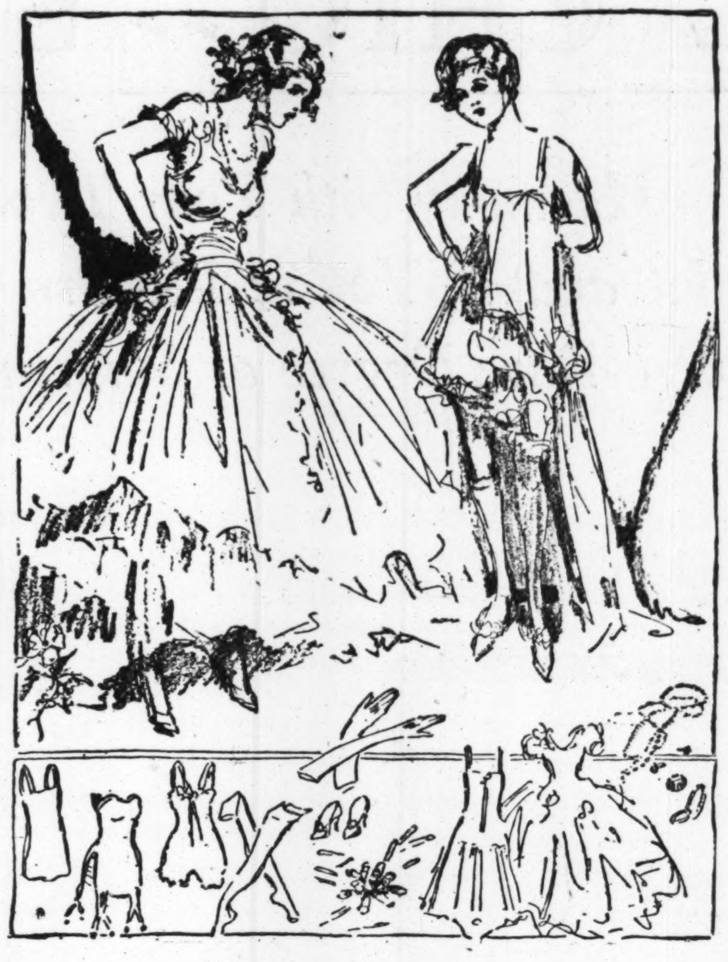


FUTURES.

(The tea room fortune teller whispers her troubles to Mamie Hickey.)

Ole Witch of Endor had a cinch;
Her clients were not greedy.
Clear pictures in her crystal showed
A wedding grand—and speedy.

She promised love, a marriage, home,
To maidens—all and any.
But who sees clear when lassies sigh:
"O, yes, of course. How many?"

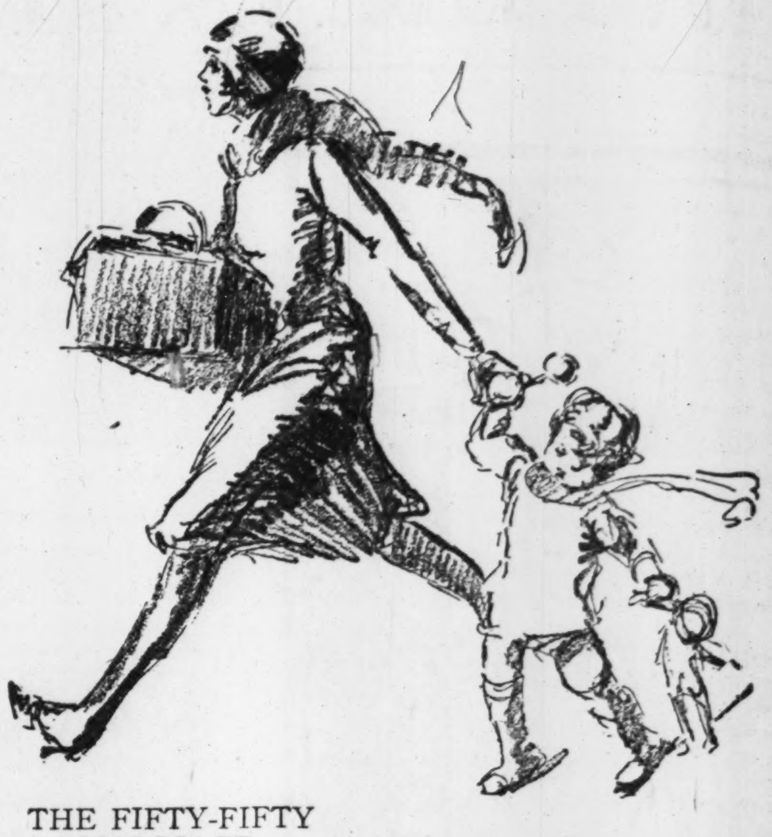


CLOTHES AND THE DRAMA.

(A comedy on a Chicago stage includes a disrobing act. It requires three gestures. Dress, one piece underwear, stockings.)

"The bedroom farce is doomed, I fear,"
The playwright said, and trembled.
"No dame, while wearing coming styles,
Can e'er be dis-assembled. . ."

Disrobing scenes take three quick moves
From full dress down to barrel,
But it would take one whole long act
To strip the new apparel.



THE FIFTY-FIFTY MARRIAGE.

(The Married Flapper Turns.)

If I can save my soul, improve my mind,
Keep up my looks, cook, sweep, and bake or sew,
And have young Junior all the day content,
This is no fifty-fifty deal, you know.

So, take our darling to the office, John . . .
And keep him half the day while on your job.
Or let your steno share with our stray cooks
The care that heeds his slightest smile or sob.

If I can feed, amuse, and keep him clean,
And run this house and keep my hostess charm,
You ought to do your share and while at work
Just hold your wiggly son upon your arm.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

Alone, Friendless and Disheartened, These Old People Appeal to You for the Little Comforts That Lighten the Burdens of Their Days.

SYNONYMOUS with old age are the legendary lavender and old lace, snowy locks and the happy resignation that follows a well spent and perhaps eventful life. With the utmost consideration and tenderness we provide those of our own families who are nearing the conclusion of their days with everything that may contribute to their comfort and happiness. We like to know that they are enjoying the ease and serenity due them, to feel that they are perfectly happy and contented in their surroundings.

And so it sometimes comes as a shock to us who are young and healthy and vigorous to know there are many aged men and women who have spent a lifetime in the service of others, rearing families, toiling until the finely etched veins in their tired hands have become more and more prominent, until shoulders and backs that have borne their burdens decade after decade have bent under the strain. Alone, friendless, and disheartened and many times hungry, they have no one to turn to. The friends they knew in their more prosperous days are gone, they have outlived the families they struggled and worked for, and they can only wait now for the day when they will become public charges

Many of them feel this is a bitter end and a poor reward for a life that perhaps has known only hardship. To others, after a long period of suffering, it is a haven. Not the one they dreamed of as young men and women, but it means food, shelter, and a place to rest.

I know many of them who have reached this stage and once you know about them, too, I am sure you will do everything within your power to help them. The smallest effort on your part may provide the greatest comfort or, at least, may help to alleviate some of the suffering for one of these old men or women whose needs are simple, but whose means are frugal.

I received a letter from one of them this week and I am going to let you read a part of it so you can see how one woman, who has known the greatest misfortune, is spending her late years:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: This is from Mrs. C. S., to whom you have been so wonderfully kind. I have been ill and have not been able to leave the house except to go to the dispensary. It has been impossible for me to pay all my expenses out of my pension, so I am coming to you for help again. When my light bill and my rent are paid each month, almost nothing is left for food and soap. I am really starving for food. The doctor said I should have beef to eat, but I cannot buy it.

"You know my right eye is blind and my left is becoming so blurred I can hardly see to write you, and my old trouble is becoming worse all the time. I should have a new abdominal supporter, the old is going to pieces, but I must forget about it unless you can help me. . . ."

Mrs. C. S. is a dear old lady who lives alone in her tiny basement flat. Past 70 and in poor health, it is quite remarkable that she is able to care for herself the way she does, and she appeals to me only when it is absolutely necessary. I am sure many of you could lend her a helping hand.

Then there is an elderly man who writes for a new suit and a pair of shoes; and a woman who, because of a hideous ailment, may not lie down at night. She asks for a bed rest so that she may know a little comfort.

These constitute only a small group of the needy aged who have come to my attention, but I shall be glad to tell you about the others if you will write to me.

For a Successful Party.

"In the near future I am having a party, and a friend is willing to loan me her victrola. However, I have no records, and I wonder if you could get some late dance music for me through your columns. Perhaps some one would send me some games and their rules, too. I have invited boys and girls between the ages of 17 and 22 years. As this is the first party I have ever given I would appreciate any help you can give me. L. S."

Can you contribute anything which will help to make this party a rollicking one? Games which have proven successful at your parties or any late dance records you no longer want would be extremely helpful.

Pastime for An Invalid.

"I am an old man, 68 years of age, and for three reasons incapacitated—rheumatism, double hernia, catarrh. Would you ask your readers for used postage and revenue stamps and a case of water colors, with a few brushes? I would appreciate your efforts to make life more pleasant for an invalid. C. D."

Stamp collectors with duplicates for which they have no use could help a great deal to make this elderly man's days a little brighter, and I am sure some one will have the water colors to give him.

Request for Piano Exercises.

"I have come to you so often with requests that I am really ashamed to write you again, but I am in a home, unable to work, and have no income. Time hangs heavy on my hands, and as I used to play the piano I should like to begin practicing again. Could some reader of your column furnish me with a book of 'Piano Fingering'? T. S."

More advanced students of the piano will be ready to discard their early exercises, I know. Won't you give them to this elderly gentleman, who could put them to such good use and who would get so much pleasure out of them?

Offers Mechanical Drawing Set.

"I have a mechanical drawing set for which we no longer have any use, and I should like to give it to some one who wants it. Can you place it through your column? Mrs. M. B."

Here is a gift for the student who finds that his many school expenses are more than he is able to meet. If you have use for one of these sets and cannot afford to buy it, I shall be glad to have you write for it; please do not telephone.

Aid for Tubercular Patient.

"I am leaving the city soon and am going to a sanitarium in Denver to take the 'cure.' I am badly in need of clothing and wonder if you can get me some before I go. Underwear and a suit, size 40, shirts, 15½, and shoes, size 9½, are what I need. I shall be most grateful for anything you can do for me. A. J."

Will you help to give this man the proper start on the road to health? The clothing you are planning to discard will at least put him in readiness for his journey.

Aid for Music Student.

"I am 12 years old and have just obtained a band instrument through our school. I wonder if one of your readers has a music stand and a music roll which I could have. My mother is a widow and cannot afford to buy these things for me. M. R."

> I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.
> When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This embryonic musician would find a stand and music roll a great convenience. If you have these articles and no longer find use for them, may she not have them?

Request for Ladders and Brushes.

"I have been out of work for some time with an injured foot. With a wife and three children to support it is hard for us to get along. A man in the neighborhood will give me some housecleaning and decorating to do, but I have no ladders or brushes to work with. Do you think you could get me some? I hate to give up this chance to earn a little money—it would help so much. I need a suit, size 40, and a pair of shoes, size 9, and my wife needs clothing, size 34 or 36, and shoes, size 4 or 4½-C. "P. R."

This family has had so much misfortune—unemployment and illness, especially—that I hope we can do something to dispel it. The equipment he needs would give him an opportunity to take this work which has been offered him and perhaps others would result from it, too.

Clothes for Old Gentleman.

"I had a letter from an old gentleman, 80 years of age, asking me if I could get him some clothes. He said, 'I wear a No. 7 hat, 37 suit, shoes size 6, and shirts size 16. I have had a pretty hard time for the last fifteen years, but I never give up. A friend has been kind to me and has given me a shack about four blocks from his place, and I have my garden and chickens and live alone.' If any of your readers can help him, I should be most grateful. I myself shall send him the tobacco which he asks for. "Mrs. F. G."

Living out in the country as he does, this old man's needs are few, but if we can help to supply them I am sure he will be quite comfortable. His garden and his chickens occupy enough of his time to keep him contented and his existence is a happy, though lonely, one.

Offers Radio Parts.

"I have a collection of radio parts for which I have no use and I am sure there must be some boy who would like to have them. I shall be glad to give them to any one you suggest. "Mrs. C. B."

The radio minded boy could make use of these parts in his experimental work or they might be used to put some defective set in working condition again. Write me, if you'd like to have them; please do not telephone.

Pet Economy

Tell us about your pet economy or an odd economy of some one you know and we'll pay you $1 if we print your letter. Address Economy, Sunday Tribune.

Powder Puff Economy.

Although I haven't the time to bother and fuss about little things, I insist on applying the "soft water method" to my powder puffs a few times before relegating them to the rubbish heap. Of course, I was given the "merry razzberry" when the secret was first let out, but now I have a few girls from the office playing "stomp the leader," and they have cut the cost of powder puffs to over half. They, too, discovered puffs ran into quite a sum when they were purchased weekly or monthly, and have chosen this as their pet economy. J. P.

Fashionable Glassware.

The new black glass for table use greatly attracts me. However, when I priced goblets I found the ones I liked cost sixty-five cents each. They had clear glass tops with black glass bases and stems. I bought some colorless stemmed sherbets and glasses for five cents each and with a tiny ten cent paint brush painted the stems and bases of my glasses with shiny black enamel and placed them to dry for forty-eight hours where the wet paint would catch no dust. The result was stunning glasses for a cost of about six cents each which compare most favorably with the expensive ones—a saving of fifty-nine cents a glass. Clear glass plates painted on the under side are fashionable and pretty, too. The enamel does not come off after it is thoroughly dry. W. S.

Method for Conserving Ice.

Before the days of automatic refrigeration, an eccentric woman of some means in our town revealed her scheme for conserving ice. A friend who called one chilly September day found Mrs. T. W. wearing a shawl, while the front and back doors stood ajar.

"Why don't you close the doors?" suggested her friend. It's the draft that makes you uncomfortable."

"I can't bear to see the ice melt so fast. It's too early to stop taking it, so I'm keeping the house cool for the refrigerator." C. R. T.

Prevents Rugs Slipping.

Slipping of rugs on polished floors can be prevented by sewing rubber fruit jar rings to the underside of the rug, near the corners.

For a small rug, one ring at each corner is sufficient, but for a larger rug several rings should be spaced at equal intervals along the edges. The rings, being thin, will not cause uneven wearing of the rug. J. W.

Provides Nourishing Soup.

I save the liquid from all boiled or stewed vegetables and meat which would otherwise be thrown away. With the addition of a few leftover vegetables, a bouillon cube, either meat or vegetable, or a can of prepared soup, I can have an excellently flavored and nourishing soup at any time. M. H.

Eliminates Match Bill.

I save all the small packets of safety matches my husband receives gratis with each package of cigarets he purchases. In this way I always have a supply of matches on hand and never find it necessary to purchase any. E. B.

No Greeting Card Expense.

I take greeting cards that the family has received and simply by cutting off the name and shaping the card in proportion use them again. When the cards have attractive pictures on them I cut these out and use them in gift boxes, writing my greeting on reverse side. C. Mack.

Preparing to Be Parents

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

The College Education of the Future Will Devote More Courses to Home Making and Fewer to Dead Languages.

A "Sex Education Booklet" by Mrs. Bevans will be sent free on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AT times I have a suspicion that some of the best literature that is being written today comes straight to me. Yes, in the letters I receive. Clear, graphic, forceful, because strong feeling or conviction inspires them—they are fine reading. Also they are most surely a cross section of life in American homes—whether those homes are of poverty or wealth, of education and culture or relative ignorance.

Clipped together are three letters which should be seen by other eyes than mine. Without certain cuts, which I usually make for personal reasons but which are not made today, as they would lessen the feeling of these writers, here are the letters:

"My dear Mrs. Bevans: For some time I have awaited the correct moment of inspiration to write to you of my keen interest in your column. I read it daily and with a wonderful increase in my own knowledge. A mother of three children—aged 5, 3, and 2 years—I feel that I need encouragement and guidance constantly, and you have supplied both of these. I also read Dr. Frank Richardson's books and was so glad to learn you also recommend them.

Old Plea of Ignorance Fails.

"You said recently that the old plea of ignorance can no longer be made. I know the things to do, but many times I fail in the accomplishment of them. However, it is a great step to be able to acknowledge our mistakes, is it not? I often feel that the fault is in me rather than in my method of training, which (to go still farther back) is attributable to my own early training. All of which makes a vicious circle. Yet I believe each generation is getting a bit nearer the perfect arc.

"It seems such a pity that we all start out on this greatest job of our lives so poorly equipped—that education must come as the problems arise. I am learning to prepare ahead of time—and so I am asking for your sex pamphlet and also the pamphlet, 'Play for Pre-School Children.'

"I am afraid we are teaching our children poor table manners, but we do have a pleasant custom you will appreciate. Every evening at the conclusion of dinner we sing all the old songs, college songs, patriotic songs, and even hymns. The children, young as they are, join us wholeheartedly and it brings a happy and intimate feeling to all of us. Later, perhaps, we may substitute a discussion in which each contributes something of interest, but at present this is satisfactory.

"Thank you again for all your inspiration."

Could any one describe more eloquently or exactly the plight of a highly intelligent and ardent mother?

No Training from Schools.

Next is this one:

"My dear Mrs. Bevans: I have been receiving your paper for the past few months and I look forward to your article every morning. Being a mother is certainly a problem, since there is no specific training for the position given in any of our schools.

"When I consider the hours spent studying French and algebra, it makes me angry, because they are a total loss as applied to my needs now. When will the school directors wake up to this fact? Why don't they educate us to be parents—that which most of us become?

"There are times when my 2 year old daughter absolutely 'stumps' me, and I feel so helpless. Then I am inclined, because of lack of training, to resort to the well meant, though wrong, methods used by my dear mother and mothers in general. I have read ever so many books on the subject, but these cannot take the place of an outlined course. My husband feels I should be thoroughly competent 'in a big way' because I really try to make a study of it.

"Your column has been so helpful and has been discussed at all the meetings of our bridge club. The exchange of ideas during one of these sessions would interest you, I'm sure. We have often thought of organizing a child study group. Where could I get information and literature on such a project? We are all 'just kids,' since the youngest in the club is 17 and the oldest 22. We should all be in college, but instead we are keeping house and trying to get somewhere with our babies. There are twelve girls and all have babies.

"I should appreciate your list of appropriate toys for babies, also a list of any other helpful articles you have."

Indeed, I would like to listen in on those discussions. All between 17 and 22—all mothers—all eager to be the best kind of mothers—all feeling unprepared. And it would be a revelation and an eye opener for those who plan a high school curriculum, or are responsible for the college and university training of potential fathers and mothers.

Unprepared for Motherhood.

Here is the third and last of this group:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans—Please send me your 'Sex Education Booklet.' Your articles are instructive. As mother of two boys, I feel quite ignorant and need help in the above subject. How unprepared for motherhood are some of us young mothers! I wonder if others feel as I do, and yet hate to lay the blame on any one. I hope my boys will be more prepared for parenthood."

This a hope for all to hold—that our children shall be, with our help and that of the schools, better prepared than we are for the great adventure of being fathers and mothers.

Striking things have been happening in education in the last decade or so. Still more striking things are going to be happening.

Some of these big changes have simply got to come in the colleges and universities, if our education is going to do the only thing for which any education is good—to fit people to live the lives that logically lie ahead of them, on this earth, in this age. Old academic standards, classical ideals, a complete lack of relating subject matter to living, loss of contact with reality and the world have all got to go by the board in college and university training—and high school, too.

Parenthood is a challenging thrilling profession. And like all others, the more you bring to it, the more you make of it. Let all higher education take care of some aspects of it.

In the meantime, let those students who are in the colleges where outstanding work is being done take advantage of those courses offered which relate to children and homemaking. And wherever possible—and I cannot emphasize this too much—come in touch with children and babies. Much lies between the covers of books—but experience, first hand, with the spontaneous, unpredictable, living, loving, growing, changing child is the most valuable of all.

Everything in Her Favor.

get down to brass tacks, "Dis d," the appointee of her com- ng fraternity, offers her case as le example.

e is presentable, well educated, dressed and groomed. People say has a charming personality. She take her place in any society, for- or informal; can sing, play and ; is a good listener and can be d talker, too, when occasion de- s; understands fully the female of restricting the latter occa- holds an executive position and ains a nice little home of her a desirably exclusive neighbor- is an excellent cook, and her s never turn down an invitation ve dinner with her. She has of friends—but, she ruefully in- do the men want to take unto lves a wife? She answers at They do not.

"The reason," to let Disgusted present her own case, "is just what I mentioned above. Men will not give up their freedom. And the following incident will prove the point:

Freedom Wins First Place.

"A couple of years ago I met a young man through business dealings. He became much interested and kept up an ardent correspondence for some time—about four months. Suddenly it ceased. After making one or two inquiries and receiving no reply, naturally I let the matter drop. Much to my surprise, after the lapse of a year I found a telephone message from him upon my arrival home one day. He called again and I had dinner with him. He explained his failure to continue our correspondence with the alibi that it looked as if he would never get to my city again. But when he found that he was coming, his first thought was to get in touch with me.

"During the conversation and visit it was plain his old interest in me was fully revived. He was frank enough about expressing his admiration and all that, but hinted at the same time that he couldn't bear the idea of settling down—with one woman. We saw more of each other. It doesn't take either great brains or egotism on a girl's part to know when a man honestly does care for her. He did for me. But out he dropped almost as suddenly as he appeared and this right after a particularly hectic evening of telling me how crazy he was about me and how I almost made him willing to give up his freedom. In short, he decided it was good business to turn and run as fast as he could before he lost his head and proposed.

Good Husband Material.

"He wasn't at all wild or undesirable. In fact he is what is referred to as a fine chap. He was in his thirties, therefore no infant. He has an excellent position and could well afford a wife, but nothing is plainer than that his freedom means more to him than a wife and home.

"Fortunately a sense of humor saved me from a broken heart, although there was a darned bad ache there just the same.

"But other girls report the same thing, the men in a number of cases freely admitting that they want their freedom most of all."

So Disgusted is anxious now to know just what the reaction the exposition of her charge in print will be from the warm hearted young [or old] males who are perfectly capable of supporting a wife but manage to elude the serious in their courting.

The clean minded, wholesome girls —girls who would make ideal wives for decent chaps—are not looking for untold riches any more than their grandmothers did, Disgusted wants it made known.

Willing to Help.

"What we want," she describes, "is a decent, dependable chap as a husband, one who with us will bring to marriage love and forbearance and a willingness to share in its responsibilities. Yes, and we would be willing to help earn the wherewithal, if necessary.

"However," she adds disconsolately, "it would appear that the men of today want their freedom so that they can call on a dozen Janes, Sallies, Betties, and what not, and after the evening is over they return to their little abodes and wonder upon whom to shed the delight of their company and countenances the next night."

That the matter under discussion is one of national interest, Disgusted feels sure. Girls' conversations about men bear her out. And a recent peppery argument following a brief reference to the current situation in a mixed assemblage assures our young speaker that hers is no isolated verdict on the genus homo of the present generation, but a fairly generally accepted version. Anyway, she challenges:

"Now let us see what the much vaunted red blooded genus homo of current circulation has to say in his own defense."

A f dozen or a dozen would make a nderful gift for a bride who would preciate your handiwork, and one two would surely be appreciated for bridge prize, to say nothing of making some for your own use.

Then, many of the white handker- s have a full first name done one corner, just as it would naturally be written. For these names the smallest possible stitches in an over and over or outline stitch are used, and these names are usually in some delicate color.

Chiffon handkerchiefs—the large ones—are simply finished with a rolled hem, and some have lace medallions set across a corner.

Hemstitching is nice pick-up work, and is pleasanter to do this way than trying to work steadily at it. Measure the width of your hem when finished, and then draw four or five threads all around the handkerchief. When the first turning of the hem is made and you are ready to lay the hem, cut out the corners on the part that makes the corners bulky, leaving an eighth inch margin. Then baste the hem carefully and proceed with the hemstitching.

Start at the right hand corner of one side of the handkerchief, fasten the thread at the top of the drawn space, then take up several threads on the needle, running the needle under them from right to left. Pull the needle through and take up these same threads again; but in bringing the needle through, run it through the hem to the left of the stitches just taken up. This finishes one stitch. In double hemstitching the same thing is done along the opposite edge of the drawn threads.

*What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there's anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

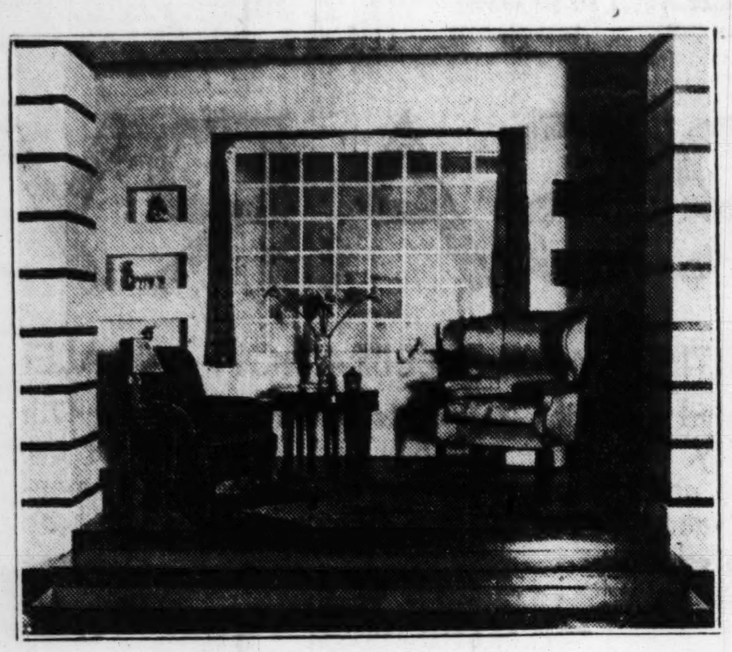
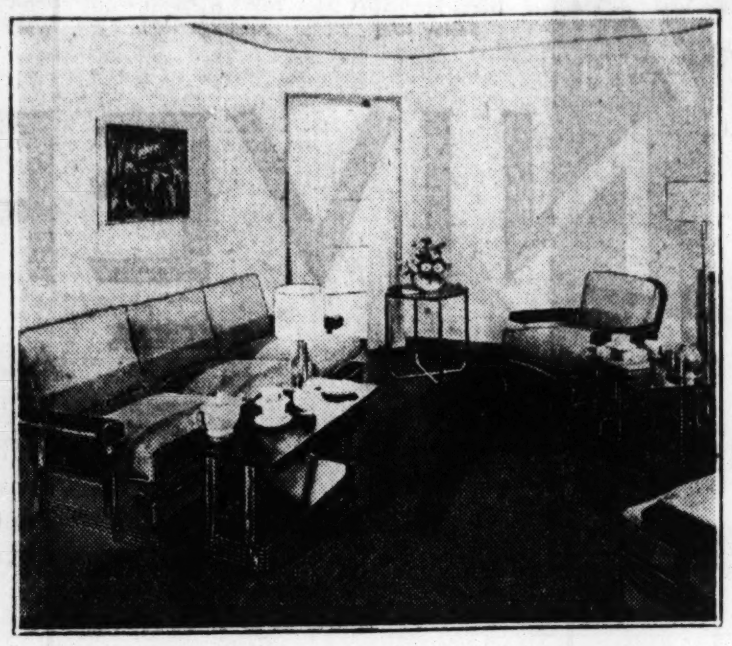
Furniture in the Modern Manner

By Edith Weigle

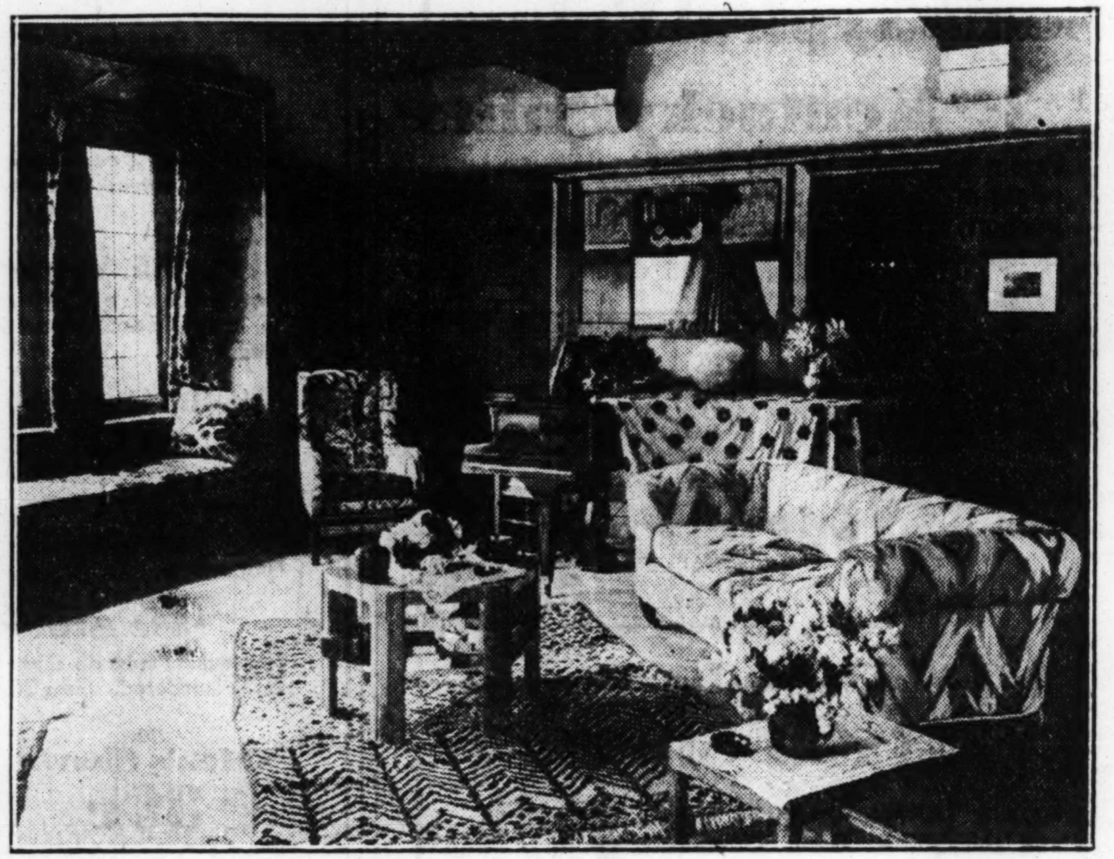


A corner of a model apartment in a Chicago store.



Steel furniture for the sunroom or living room.

Here to Stay, at Least for a While, Are the Straight Lines, Flat, Undecorated Surfaces and Stunning Fabrics of the New Movement.



This charming interior is in a house on the outskirts of Paris.

[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

MODERN furniture and decoration is here to stay—at least, for a while. Many people are still violently opposed to it and use the most vitriolic adjectives in describing their feelings about it. Some manufacturers state with pride that no modern designs will ever be made in their establishments, that everything since the 18th century has been a mistake, decoratively speaking.

On the other hand, there are those who demand furniture in keeping with 1930 living. They say it is as ridiculous for us to surround ourselves with 17th and 18th century styles as it would be to go back to periwigs, satin knee breeches and flowing lace cuffs on masculine jackets. We of another age need furniture adapted to our requirements.

In response to this urge of modern furniture for modern people the new movement is growing, mistakes are being corrected and most interesting ideas are being carried out. We predict when less expensive woods and materials are used in construction it will advance in popularity by leaps and bounds. At present, the average price per article is so high as to be almost prohibitive for most of us.

If one is willing to get unfinished pieces, however, and paint them oneself, much can be done for little. And if one is fortunate enough to have an amateur cabinet maker in the family there is no limit to what can be accomplished — no limit except the maker's endurance.

The pictures today show modern interiors in this country and abroad, where they have become an everyday matter long since devoid of excited comment. The largest photograph was taken in a home in the suburbs of Paris and proves quite definitely, I think, that much artistic merit is bound up in the new decoration.

The fabrics, here, are really more modern than the furniture. The wing chair in the window is perfectly conventional except for its modern upholstery, which harmonizes with the window draperies and the large cushion. Even the lines of the extremely comfortable couch are fairly conventional, but again the stunning contemporary fabric with which it is covered strikes the new note. The low table in the center of the room is distinctly of the new movement, as are the rug, and lamp on the piano.

Another picture shows one end of a room in a model apartment in a large Chicago store. Shallow steps lead up from the room proper and serve to focus the attention on this charming little group composed of two modern chairs and accompanying tables. The chair at the left is covered in rust colored rep welted with black leather; the other in an unusual cotton fabric in several shades of green.

A hand tufted modern rug is on the floor and the walls, with their interesting niches, are painted the color of butter. The window treatment, in its extreme simplicity, is another characteristically modern touch.

The other illustration is given to show the increasing vogue of metal furniture for sun room or living room use. Long straight lines and square or rectangular surfaces mark it as distinctly modern. In fact, it is much more startling in every way than the furniture in the other two pictures. Designed by Donald Deskey, the arms and bases of the rattan and steel couch and tables are covered in a black water resistant fabric. The pillow seats are in three shades of brown and henna rayon and the window draperies are of orange rayon taffeta.

Even the walls are designed especially for this room and are covered in a fabric of orange and green on a beige ground, which harmonizes with the general color scheme.

This side of the sun room shows the black daybed.

PLANNING the redecoration of city apartments assumes added interest at this time of year when nature herself seems to be reconditioning the whole countryside. Whether it is to be a complete refurbishing or merely a new rug here, a different set of curtains there, or an added lamp or chair, the introduction of new notes gives an added interest and zest to any and every room.

Replete with suggestions for freshening wearied interiors is a model apartment which has just been completed. Every room, whether taken in its entirety or in individual points, offers original and practical ideas for solving problems of spring decoration.

Although the living room is actually rather small, it assumes a sense of spaciousness by means of careful selection of materials and design, as well as by logical furniture placement. The walls are done in a modified modern paper, with a pleasing design in jade green, dull orange, and sand color on an ivory ground. A group of three windows across the front of the room is curtained in mauve theatrical gauze, and there are jade green draperies at each end, hanging straight to the floor.

Blocked linen makes a slip cover for a commodious sofa, which is placed at right angles close to the windows against one wall space, and for a comfortable lounging chair in the opposite corner. Reading lamps and end tables are conveniently placed to hold smoking accessories and magazines. There is a set of open bookshelves against the wall adjacent to the lounging chair.

Between two doorways leading, respectively, to the entrance hall and the sun room, stands a console phonograph, flanked by two armchairs, one upholstered in black mohair with a fine gold colored diamond pattern and the other in deep green wool rep. A lamp with an accordion plaited gold paper shade and a Castilian topaz vase filled with flowers stand on top of the console. On the wall above hangs a piece of interesting old brocade which pleasantly blends its colors with the modern wall paper. A soft beige rug with deep border is used on the floor.

Entering the sun room is a happy experience. Three sides of the room are almost completely taken up by windows, and the remaining wall space is finished in rough sand colored plaster. At the windows are curtains made of natural colored muslin which cost in the neighborhood of fifteen cents a yard! These are edged with a narrow upholsterer's fringe in crimson and black, and are finished at the top with rings so that they may be easily drawn together at will.

Furniture is painted black with the exception of two wicker armchairs which have been left in their natural finish. They are fitted with cushions matching the living room slip covers. Beneath the windows in the longest wall, as shown in the accompanying illustration, stands a three-quarter width daybed with a boxed cover of crimson and sand colored armure. Extra cushions are covered in plain materials of different tones.

Below the windows at the far end of the room is a flat topped writing desk with crimson leather appointments. A black pottery lamp with decorative shade is used on the desk. Open bookshelves have been built into the nearby corner. Reading lamps and tables and wrought iron stands for plants complete the room's furnishing. The black floor is enlivened by colorful Numdah rugs.

Across the hall from the living room is a delightfully cheerful dining room. A paneled dado of wood stained walnut comes to chair rail height and the wall space above is covered with a plain beige paper spattered with gold. At the windows are mauve theatrical gauze glass curtains, making a kinship between this room and the living room. Draperies are of chintz with a flowered design on a soft green background.

On the walnut dining table is an Italian linen runner in a soft beige tone. In the center is placed a ruby colored Venetian glass bowl, broad and shallow. In this, such flowers as deep purple pansies are massed, or for a change, white water lilies float there in tranquil splendor. Four low ruby Venetian glass candlesticks hold ivory colored candles.

Other interesting pieces of glassware and china in an open cabinet at one side of the room, and a fascinating Chinese tea set on a side table add distinctly to the decorative quality of the ensemble. Walnut chairs with rush bottom seats are used with the dining table. A small figured rug with a deep green ground almost completely covers the floor.

The kitchen invariably evokes expressions of pleased surprise. Woodwork is painted peacock blue, with a hairline of scarlet in the door panels. Walls are deep cream. At the windows are gayly flowered percale curtains on a deep cream ground, finished with a narrow scarlet binding. Stove and sink are enameled in cream color, and there is an enamel top work table to match. Gayly painted canisters and accessories repeat the colors found in the percale curtains. Deep blue and cream checked linoleum is used to cover the floor.

Between the dining room and kitchen is a breakfast nook, with built-in cupboard, benches, and table decorated to match the kitchen.

Next week two charming bedrooms will be described, as well as the linen closet and bathroom which complete this delightful apartment.

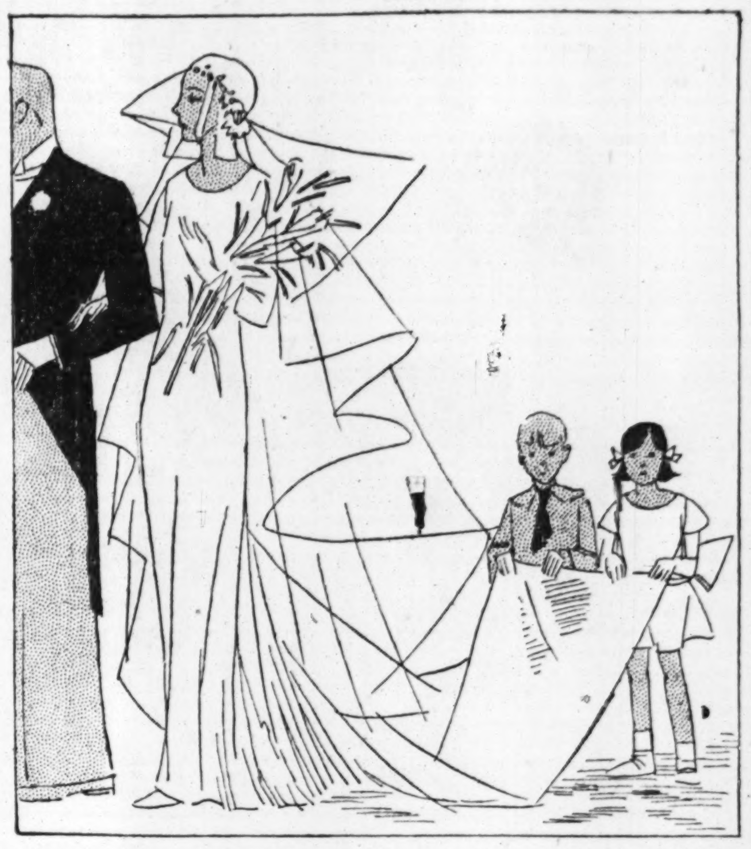
Correct Wedding Dress

By Helen Bartlett

The Bride May Plan for a Simple or Elaborate Affair but Definite Rules Govern the Selection of Costumes.

It is the aim of this department to serve as a practical guide in problems of everyday etiquette. Self-addressed, stamped envelope must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.



EVEN though she does not provide their costumes the bride has the privilege of decreeing every detail of her attendants' dress. She decides on the color scheme, the cut of the frocks, and such flowers as they may carry.

The range of colors for a bridal party is wide indeed. Personal preference, the coloring of the individuals, and the harmony of the ensemble should be the principal factors in selecting one of the hundreds of combinations. We have seen a beautiful wedding in which the six bridesmaids wore white with green satin slippers matching the green stems of the calla lilies they carried, but this choice was unique. More usually we see soemthing of a rainbow assortment in pastel colors, although for fall weddings autumn shades ranging from Napoleon beige to a deep brown can present a stunning picture.

May Vary in Color.

The attendants' frocks and hats (if they are worn) are exactly alike in design, but they may vary in color. For instance, if the bridesmaids wear pink trimmed in blue, the frock of the maid of honor can be blue with touches of pink.

About dress for both men and women in the party, we must say this: Suit it to the time of day. If the formal wedding takes place at church in the morning or afternoon, the bride's gown must have sleeves; the gowns of the attendants should have sleeves—if not, they wear long gloves—and the men must wear formal daytime clothes.

Formal evening weddings are not fashionable, but when they do take place the men must wear full evening dress (not "tuxedos") and the women's gowns should be formal in cut. Bare arms at church are in bad taste, however, so long gloves or sleeves are necessary.

Outdoor Weddings.

At spring and summer informal weddings, provided they take place out of doors or at a country club or small country church, the men may wear dark sack coats and light flannel trousers, but in this event the bride must not wear a veil. Instead she wears a simple summer frock, a garden hat and carries a colorful bouquet of flowers. Her attendants would be garbed in somewhat the same manner. Men in a weding party would not wear flannels if the bride wore white and a veil.

At a semi-formal daytime wedding the bride could wear an afternoon frock with sleeves and matching hat. The groom, his best man, and the bride's father could then wear the "compromise costume" consisting of dark sack coat, gray striped trousers, wing collar, and black and white, black and gray striped, or a figured tie.

No matter what the necessary costume may be, all men of the wedding party are dressed exactly alike with but one small exception: The boutonniere worn by the groom is slightly larger than that gracing the left lapel of the others. If theirs is composed of one gardenia, say, the groom has two, or a larger one.

The following dress chart will be helpful in selecting clothes:

The Formal Wedding.

For formal morning, noon, or afternoon church weddings:

The bride: Wedding dress, veil, satin slippers.

Bridegroom, best man, bride's father, and ushers: Cutaway coat, gray striped trousers, four in hand tie of black and white, black and gray striped, or figured silk or a bow tie of gray or gray and white, boutonniere, black silk socks, patent leather shoes, and gray gloves. (The bridegroom and best man do not wear gloves at the altar, but the ushers do.) Spats are optional, but are usually seen at winter weddings.

Bride's attendants: Frocks specified for the occasion, hats, slippers, and hose to match or harmonize, bouquets.

Bride's mother: Afternoon dress, with sleeves; hat; handsome jewelry and accessories, and corsage or shoulder bouquet.

Informal Wedding.

For an informal wedding with only a few guests present:

Bride: Traveling dress, hat and accessories to match. Small arm bouquet or corsage or shoulder bouquet.

Bridegroom and best man: Sack suit for traveling.

Bride's father: Either sack suit like groom's and best man's or afternoon costume.

Bride's attendant: Afternoon dress or tailored costume. Small bouquet or corsage.

Bride's mother: Afternoon dress or tailored suit.

Semi-formal Home Wedding.

Semi-formal home wedding:

Bride: Smart and becoming gown in any chosen color, no hat. Flowers.

Groom, best man, and bride's father: Afternoon costume or full evening dress if after 7 o'clock.

Bride's mother: Afternoon gown, no hat, small shoulder bouquet.

Bride's attendant: Afternonon gown or evening gown (if wedding takes place after 7) and flowers.

Evening Wedding.

Evening wedding at church or in home:

Bride: Wedding dress, veil.

Bridegroom, best man, and ushers: Full evening dress, boutonnieres, white kid gloves.

Bride's father: Full evening dress.

Bride's attendants: Dresses as planned for the occasion, flowers.

Bride's mother: Simple evening dress.

Widows and Divorcées.

Widows and divorcées do not wear white wedding gowns or veils; their weddings are always quite small and unostentatious, with no attendants or not more than one each.

In the Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches women must keep their heads covered. Hats, bandeaux, or scarfs are demanded of the women, no matter what the time of day.

Low necked or sleeveless frocks are not worn in any church at any hour of the day.

"Tuxedos" or dinner jackets are never correct for wear in a wedding party. At a formal evening wedding full dress is worn. For weddings at any other hour the correct costume is specified.

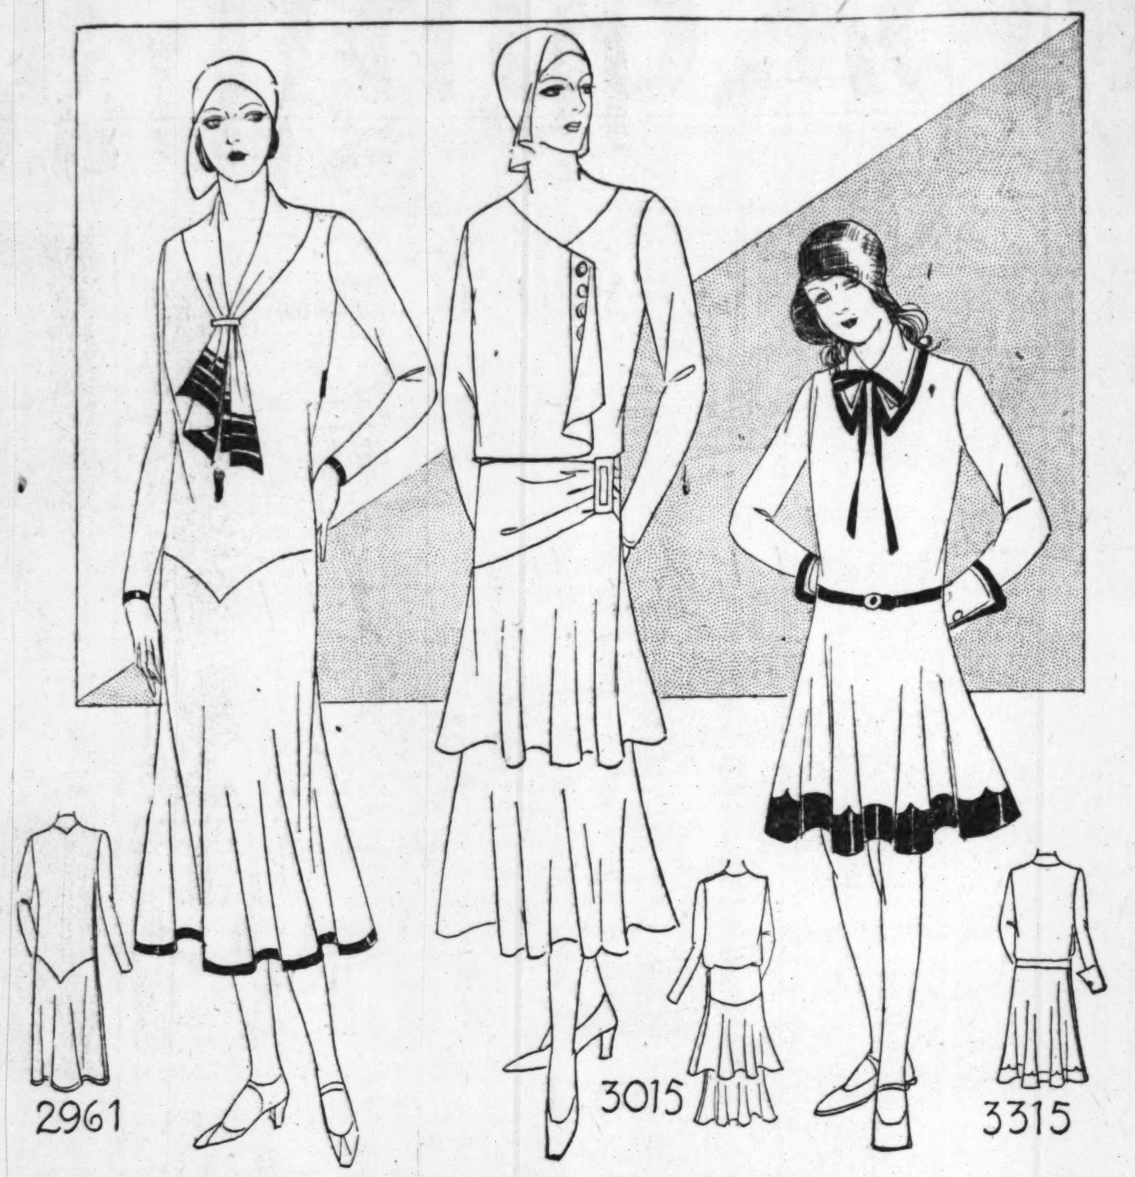
Patterns and How to Use Them

—By Clotilde

Inexpensive Patterns Easily Followed Encourage the Woman Who Sews to Dress Smartly.



2961—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material, ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting and ½ yard of 35 inch bias binding for the collar trimming.

3015—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material.

3315—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material, ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting, and 2¾ yards of ¾ inch wide ribbon.

IF you want a smart looking dress for general daytime occasions you make a wise choice by using pattern No. 2961. It could hardly be easier to cut and make and should go quickly.

One of the novelty printed silk crêpes showing brown and beige tones would be a good choice. Make the dress of the printed silk and the scarf collar of the beige. One chic detail of this scarf collar is shown in the insets of plain brown silk crêpe—this brown crêpe being used also to finish the edges of the sleeves and binding the dress at the bottom.

Of course, before laying the pattern pieces on the material, you will make sure that the dress will be the right length, and four to six inches below the knees seems to be the accepted rule for daytime dresses.

The bodice is cut in two parts, showing a pointed outline at the bottom, both in the front and back. A dart at each underarm on the front throws necessary fullness across the bust. A deep V-front at the neck is becoming to every one, and the soft, pretty collar makes a charming finish. The sleeves are dart fitted below the elbow, and if the dart and the full length seams are put together so that when the sleeve is held up in the hand the outside fold shows a smooth line from the top to the bottom, you will have a sleeve that sets properly.

The skirt is cut in two sections, both circular, and needing light and careful handling, so as not to stretch at the bottom. For size 36 the bottom of the skirt measures about three yards. After the seams of the bodice and skirt have been finished, and the skirt attached to the bodice, it is a good plan to let the dress hang for several days to give it an opportunity to stretch. Then even it at the bottom before binding.

Black crêpe satin with the collar of white or eggshell crêpe will be chic, while wool jersey, flat silk crêpe, Canton crêpe, and featherweight tweed are smart and appropriate.

It is always a good idea to have at least one dress that has some warmth to it, such as one of the lovely light weight woolen materials has, to slip into on a cool or damp day during the warmer months.

Pattern No. 3315 is for a strikingly smart dress for young girls, particularly if a contrasting color is used for the scalloped band at the bottom of the skirt, and for the binding of the collar and cuffs. The pretty skirt is circular and correspondingly graceful when in motion, while the straight, tight fitting bodice suggests the basque. The bodice is slashed down from the neck, the edges bound and finished for closing; the collar and flaring cuffs are bound or piped with the contrasting color. This same color shows again in the narrow belt worn at the normal waistline as well as in the bow that finishes the dress at the neck.

This sort of a dress will be just the thing to wear between now and the closing of school and, when warm enough, it will make a smart dress to wear on the street without a coat. Navy blue wool crêpe, with a vivid red as the contrast will be smart, while featherweight tweed in a beige and brown check with the contrast made by cutting the material on the bias, sportsweight linen, printed and plain rayon crêpe, flat silk crêpe and challis are pleasing suggestions.

The irregular closing of the collarless neckline of the dress made by pattern No. 3015 is unusually becoming; and a buttoned, applied trimming band holding the jabot frill that starts from the end of the neckline denotes new smartness. The close fitting sleeves are untrimmed, and should be left open for a couple of inches at the wrists so as to be made closer fitting. The upper seam edge is turned back as a hem, and the opposite edge is slashed at the end of the opening, the edge bound, and used as an extension hem. Backstitch invisibly to the hemmed part just above where the slash is. Use the smallest snaps to close the sleeve.

The front of the waist is decidedly long, tiny plaits being laid at the left side, and these are button trimmed. The back of the waist comes to the normal waistline and is set into a perfect fitting hip band. Then the applied front is set in place over the right half of the waist front and basted at the shoulder, armhole and under arm seam. It should first be faced or bound around the lower edge and up the front and on the neckline. It is then stitched to the front from the shoulder to the top of the applied band.

The circular tiers are each cut in two pieces. These seams, of course, come at the under arms and are on a line with the waist seams. The lower tier is stitched to the edge of the waist, and the upper one along perforations marked on the waist.

This may have sounded rather complicated, but really is as simple to manage as can be; and the picture chart that comes with this pattern is a great help. It is one of the newest designs as the swathed hips finished with a buckle, emphasizing the higher waistline, shows. Canton crêpe in vintage red, army blue crêpe de chine, and crêpe Elizabeth in a dahlia purple will be lovely for afternoons or informal evening wear.

Treatment Cures Acne

—By Antoinette Donnelly

But Beauty Specialists Stress the Value of That Ounce of Prevention in Dealing with Skin Troubles

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was always a heartache for a young girl in her 'teens to see a spotted face reflection in the mirror. But with the pursuit of facial beauty as it is practiced today by the youngest of the sex, the embarrassment of an acne condition of complexion is terribly depressing.

I detect in my mail the influence on the young unfortunate of the current keen pursuit of complexion perfection. The most despondent notes I get come from the youngsters whose faces are not clear from blemishes.

Fortunately for a good many of them it is only a passing period in their young lives. However, this is no reason why nothing should be done to relieve a young girl or boy's unhappiness, for a boy's reaction is just as keenly unhappy as is a girl's.

I think it would be wise for more parents to adopt the suggestion of our better skin authorities to lead the youngsters to medical offices for treatment. The specialists claim that acne is a condition calling for medical treatment rather than cosmetic advice. Certainly a severe case of acne should be submitted to the best possible medical supervision.

There are more underlying principles of care and prevention, and even of corrective nature, than may be broadcast by the nonmedic.

Early Recognition.

What I wish to plead for especially is that parents of young boys and girls learn to appreciate the importance of early recognition and treatment of acne. If they only would, they could save a terrific amount of misery. Although the time of puberty is often spoken of as the beginning of the acne stage, its symptoms may be observed in children of 9 and 10.

A famous skin specialist, pleading for parental coöperation, says inspection of signs of acne should be made from the time the child begins school. Routine washing with soap and water during school hours, he believes, would be an advanced step. Dust and dirt and perspiration are wiped into and occlude the sebaceous orifices. In any event, children should be forced to wash at home immediately upon dismissal from school. Especially at the age of puberty, when the blackhead formation is apt to become active, it is desirable to have the young person wash the face five and six times a day, this specialist advises. Other habits for parental observation are that proper diet be supplied; that constipation be avoided; that outdoor life, proper rest and sleep be observed by their young.

For those in the more or less advanced stages where the removal of blackheads is difficult, the use of a local application becomes necessary. There is a well known lotion recommended by reputable skin authorities and known as "lotio alba" which is often very effective in early cases. In having the lotion prepared you are instructed to note in your order that the ingredients be dissolved separately before mixing them. The formula for the lotion is a dram each of potassium sulphuret and zinc sulphate to four ounces of distilled water. This is the ordinary strength to be used. In obstinate cases rather than a stronger preparation it is better to make more frequent applications to avoid irritating the skin. Enough of the lotion is applied, preferably before retiring, that a film of powder visibly remains on the skin.

Along with the treatment it is recommended that the use of all oily cosmetics be discontinued. If the skin shows signs of temporary harshness, the application of cold cream is permissible, with the proviso that soap and water cleansing follows within a reasonable period. All makeup applications also should be removed with a good soap and water cleansing. The older person must also observe the rules of hygiene recommended for the younger. Proper diet, exercise, outdoor life all help in counteracting the condition. Eat plentifully of fruits and vegetables. Drink quantities of water. Take bran, agar, spinach, figs, dates, oranges and onions to sweep the intestines clean and, automatically, help to clear the complexion. There is nothing that will so quickly give rise to pimply eruptions as a sluggish intestinal tract.

The great point to remember in connection with this facial blemish is that every case of blackheads is a potential case of acne. Therefore, the cleaner you keep your face the less possibility of acne development.

Soap and Water Effective.

The vigor with which you pursue soap and water battling with acne is determined by the condition of the skin. If the skin is thin and relatively dry, care must be exercised not to make the skin more dry by too frequent washing. But if the skin is greasy, thick, and has many blackheads there is little danger of scrubbing the face too often or too thoroughly. The frequent washings remove micro-organisms and prevent further infection from the already infected spots.

Deep seated acne abscesses should not be trifled with by the layman. That work should be submitted to the best skin specialist that can possibly be afforded. For scars that are almost ineradicable have resulted time and again from inexperienced handling of these abscesses. If a yellow point develops and appears only occasionally on the face, it may be pricked open with a needle. But first wipe the surface with alcohol or a peroxide solution and after opening the pimple take up the content with a bit of absorbent cotton that has been dipped in the antiseptic. Then wipe the entire face with the antiseptic to prevent the spread of infection.

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

As It Looked to Him.

While out to lunch the other day I bought a package of paper dolls for my little niece and later in the afternoon when there was no one in the office I got out the package to look over the contents. I soon had them all spread over my desk and became engrossed in trying the various hats and dresses on the dolls. I was startled by hearing a gruff voice from over the counter say, "Well, I've been waiting five minutes now; as soon as kindergarten is adjourned I would like to make a payment." A. M. R.

Made a Hasty Return.

While shopping one day recently I stopped to look over a collection of miscellaneous jewelry spread out on the counter of a department store. After satisfying myself that there was nothing there I cared for I walked leisurely over to where some house dresses were on display, a few aisles away. Lifting one of the dresses up to examine it, I was horrified to see a string of beads dangling from a button on my coat sleeve. As well as being embarrassed, I was also thoroughly frightened, because I thought I would be apprehended by a detective before I could return the beads. M. P.

Caused Disturbance.

One morning while on my way to church, I noticed that my big black dog was following me. I tried to turn corners and dodge out of sight but he always turned up again. Finally, I arrived at the church and sat thinking how fortunate I was in evading the dog.

The minister entered and the services were started. Suddenly I heard screams from the back of the church and I saw that my dog had entered and was jumping and snapping at some people who were trying to put him out.

Imagine my embarrassment when I had to walk out dragging the dog with me and the people all turning and staring at me. H. W.

Protested Overmuch.

My most embarrassing moment occurred at work when I was being transferred from one department to another. My employer, with pen poised above a check, said, "Miss S., I would like to give you a little tip for your new job."

I thanked him most cordially, but informed him I could not accept it, that it wasn't proper, etc. With a puzzled look he filled out the check, which was merely my wage for the week, and said, "I'm afraid you misunderstood me. I meant to give you a tip on the new system of filing in that department."

To this day I blush furiously whenever I see the former boss. V. M. S.

Plain Speaking.

It happened during my sophomore year at college. We were talking in casual fashion, and I was subconsciously thinking what an interesting person my caller was, even though not handsome. He had an expressive way of lifting one eyebrow, and his too wide mouth had a humorous twist. I mentally voted him more worthwhile than the usual run of good looking males.

He had just remarked something about the girl friend I had introduced him to the previous day.

"Yes," said I, absent mindedly, "she goes with a homely man, too!" E. W.

Flippancy Unappreciated.

One of the agents of our firm has the habit of calling up the office, disguising his voice and stringing me along before finally letting me know who he is. I usually recognize him at once, and let him know immediately that I do.

The other morning I heard a man's voice over the phone, saying in an extremely feminine tone, "O, how do you do! Is this the B—— N—— company?" I, thinking it was the agent, trying to be funny, replied at once, "Sure, what did you think it was, the insane asylum?"

Imagine my distress, then, when the voice said coldly, "This is Mr. S——, the superintendent of the division. Kindly be good enough to allow me to talk with the manager." A. M. R.

The Irish Beauties

By E. Barrington

The Story in Resume:

IN the streets of Dublin, in 1750, Mrs. Gunning and her two young daughters, Maria and Elizabeth, are accosted by old Mother Corrigan, who tells their fortune. The hag predicts that the girls will inflame the world with their beauty; that Elizabeth will marry one of the first men in England and later the highest man in Scotland and will be addressed as a duchess, and that Maria will marry well, but not to as high a rank as that of her sister. She says the Gunning fortune will begin with the Golden Vanity and come through a woman bearing a man's name. Later the two girls are saved from the attentions of a bully by a young gentleman who introduces himself to them as Harry Lepel. Overcome by their beauty, he suggests to their mother that they attend the Birthnight ball at the lord lieutenant's palace. He asks Elizabeth to marry him, and she consents. His regiment is recalled to London. George Anne Bellamy, an actress, upon learning of their poverty offers the girls jobs in the cast of the Golden Vanity. The Gunnings are a sensation at the ball. They move to better quarters and become the toast of Dublin. Embarrassed by the gossip caused by Mrs. Gunning and Maria, Elizabeth begs her mother to move to London.

INSTALLMENT V.

In the Swim.

ELIZABETH interposed to mention that Mr. Horace Walpole said to be an amateur of beauty and certainly an arbiter of fashion was known to be an intimate of my Lord Harrington's and that an entry to his famous Gothic house, Strawberry Hill, was known to equal presentations at court and anything that the wildest hopes of distinction could soar to. Not to mention the fact that the handsome Lady Caroline Petersham, the very leader of the mode in London and daughter-in-law to my Lord Harrington, was a close friend of Mr. Walpole's and had been known to Mrs. Gunning (though younger) when as Miss Bridget Burke and a budding beauty she had made her appearance in Dublin and met my Lady Caroline, then a pretty schoolgirl on a visit to an aunt in the city. Here was the open door necessary to all such adventures.

Lady Caroline weighed heavy in their favor. Mrs. Gunning recalled the fashionable impudence and audacity then dawning in the young girl who was now staggering London—never too easily shocked—with her escapades. She felt a sympathetic vibration in her very name and as to Mr. Walpole's—it was of course world famous. Ever optimistic, she saw raying out before her glories that Dublin could never offer and it was evident that the girls having undergone the happy dispatch of marriage in that great city and Kitty and Lucy quartered on them to ripen for the same sacrifice it would be in her own power to return to the easy comfort of Dublin with greatly augmented means. She wavered, and, though still pretending resistance was doomed.

"Well, girls, if you know better than your mother—though for my part I think we do very well here—and where's the money to come from?—Lord! what troubles a mother must bear and no thanks to sweeten it. For my part, if it were not the course of nature 'tis a miracle to me why people have children to rend their bosoms when they begin to assert themselves. And I warn you, Maria, that you'll not find a match like my Lord Marlowe on every bush. The words are choking in his throat——"

"To that extent that he'll never utter them!" retorts Elizabeth in spite of an angry look from Maria. "And sure I have heard yourself say that retreat often secures advance. So far Maria has certainly not retreated. If he is in earnest what's to prevent him following her to London. And if not—best leave him here."

All this and much more was indisputable and there remained only the debts and Mrs. Gunning's easy indolence to overcome. The debts were the easiest. The whole sum was but a flea bite to my Lord Harrington. He liked Mrs. Gunning with all the fondness of sentimental memory and the beauty of the girls had wound itself about—let me not say his heart—but his interest and sentiment, while a grain of pity must not be forgotten as a seasoning of the mixture of feelings which drew his horses' noses to Mount street so often when he took an airing and desired to forget the pangs in his gouty toe. 'Tis certain at least that he placed a bill of four hundred pounds in Mrs. Gunning's hand when cautiously informed of the circumstances and begged her to take her own time and means to repay the loan. It was indeed partly repaid in the gush of Mrs. Gunning's gratitude and the warmth with which Maria threw her lovely arms about his neck and showered his florid cheek and even the celebrated bottle nose with gentle kisses softer than rose petals. Why not? He was her grandpapa's friend and old enough to be her grandpa. Such a tribute could not be misunderstood and was not. He repaid them with a hearty smack on her cherry lips and the prophecy that she would set the Thames afire as she had done the Liffey—if Englishmen were still Englishmen.

"And where is my pretty Miss Elizabeth?" he asked, willing perhaps to exact a tribute there also. He had ever considered her the more beautiful of the two and believed that though a charming rogue like Maria would go further with the men, Elizabeth would inspire the more lasting passion. Over Elizabeth's fair brows he always beheld the halo of marriage. With Maria he quoted the famous lines

Haste thee, nymph, and bring with thee
Jest and youthful jollity,
Quips and cranks and wanton wiles,
Nods and becks and wreathed smiles.

Perhaps it may be put more tersely in saying that he preferred Maria when rude health was his luck, Elizabeth when the gout infixed its talons in his toe.

In reply to his question Mrs. Gunning replied smiling that she was retired to her room with a headache but would never forgive it or herself when she heard of this missed opportunity to show her gratitude to the ever honored benefactor. A few extra kisses showered by the frolicsome Maria filled the gap. She might better have said Elizabeth was retired with a peculiarly poignant attack of shame and self-contempt, for she knew well the cajoling proceeding in the next room and loathed the necessity. There are few ailments more difficult to bear with composure.

A FORTNIGHT later, with crowding beaux and bouquets, with verses breathing of hearts and darts and stings and wings, the family of adventurers boarded the boat at the quay. Lucy, Kitty, and John added their roars to the tumult, for the boat alarmed them and their unknown voyage into the bosom of the deep. Elizabeth and Maria swam in incense, but not one had bethought them that dolls and lollipops are grateful to children, and Mrs. Gunning, though she had reserved a large part of his excellency's gift under the consideration that debts could wait but London expenses could not, found herself heartily wishing that the piles of flowers and elegant offerings such as fans and knick-knacks could be translated into pounds, shillings, and pence as much more important to the welfare of those they complimented. Even buns for the children would have been acceptable.

Not Columbus himself felt more anxiety than devoured Elizabeth's heart when she, as admiral of the expedition and its inspirer, saw the waving handkerchiefs melt into a white cloud and the warmth of sentiment expire in the chill ocean breezes which swelled the sails. The unknown confronted them, though even that terror waned in the immediate pangs of collective seasickness, during which her very name was execrated by one and all. Half fainting on her feet, she dragged herself from one sufferer to the other and did her best with failing heart and hopes, as sick with fright as with the ocean that she had dragged them to possible ruin.

LONDON must be owned a disappointment so far as brilliance was concerned when they arrived by slow coach stages from Holyhead. Never would any one of the family forget that horrible experience. Even when John became an extremely handsome young officer, courted for reasons to be described in this story, he could not recall it without a dim horror. As to Maria and Elizabeth, they buried it in shuddering silence. Economy was obliged to be the first consideration, and economy seldom wears an unlovelier face than when concerned with the transport of a young family on a long journey. Let a veil be drawn over the proceedings in that stage coach and raised only on the arrival at apartments in a street in Bloomsbury, bespoke from a person in my Lord Harrington's service in London. There a gleam of hope broke upon the unfortunate Elizabeth, who had been exposed to the maledictions of her mother and Maria at every joggle of the coach, every howl of the children, and had borne them with the courage of desperation.

The street was not a fashionable one—that could not be hoped—but it opened into a fashionable square with a reminiscence of a garden in the midst, where under a few soot-laden trees interest might be made for the children to play. The house was kept by a former footman and kitchen maid in the employment of my lord, a Mr. and Mrs. Skinner, and though it is impossible to speak certainly without knowledge, a suspicion may be allowable that they accepted less rent from Mrs. Gunning than they might from another. Be that as it might, they were civil and obliging, and the cooking was excellent. The rooms consisted of a small dining room and more important parlor upstairs, and there were three bedrooms. All were furnished with more refinement than their Dublin rooms could boast, and the girls were quick to see that with the expenditure of a very little money and a good deal of thought their surroundings would be not wholly despicable for professed beauties. Elizabeth was already converted to the belief that no profession in this world could me more arduous and less rewarding and might have been inclined to leave the rooms to their fate, but Maria, though older, was much the more hopeful, and the fact that Lady Caroline Petersham's stately mansion adorned the square was a reason for exerting every effort to make the parlor comformable to her notions of a beauty's bower before their presence was announced. Their wardrobes, too, required a little furbishing, some articles having been delayed in purchase because of the supposed splendor of the London shops.

This done, a letter in which Mrs. Gunning presented her compliments to the Lady Caroline Petersham and inclosed a formal introduction from my Lady Harrington, setting forth her rank and consequence, was conveyed in style by the retired footman and delivered with a rat-tat-tat which set the wild echoes flying through the square.

Now, it so chanced that a small but notable company was collected in the fine drawing room of my Lady Caroline at the moment, and if the highest society in London, and therefore in the world, deserves respect, let it now be paraded.

There was the hostess, tall, dark haired, sparkling eyed, and as handsome a woman in a haughty blackbrowed way as a man could wish to see in a day's march. A lady who, though she took many liberties with others, would suffer none to be taken with herself unless by her intimates, and they, forming a ring fence about her, might within it say and do as they pleased. However they might and did astonish the world, they could never astonish each other, for their antics had long since reached the unsurpassable point. My Lady Caroline led the fashions, and even the matrons who dreaded her audacity would have performed any humiliation to gain the entry to her intimacy for themselves and their daughters.

Gay little Miss Ashe, known from her height or lack of it as the Pollard Ashe, balanced on the curl of her ladyship's sofa and was tossing sugar biscuits to the duke of Hamilton, seated a good way off. Her aim was good and his catch better, so that he received several in his mouth like a well trained poodle. The failures he tossed back to the little witch who teased him—all curls and blue eyes and a little piquant turn-up nose which carried her upper lip with it and made her laugh fascinating.

The duke—a man of thirty—had an air of gravity under his laughter which asserted itself very readily. He was more manly than handsome, though the world was ready to concede the best good looks to a man in his position. For of all the matches in the three kingdoms James Hamilton was the greatest available. Duke of Brandon in England, of Châtelherault in France, of Hamilton in Scotland (not to mention lesser titles), he was a kind of triple divinity before whom no incense was too much to burn, no maiden sacrifice too pure and delicate to be offered. Of vast possessions, suitable age, and gallant presence, no princess need have disdained his hand. A great prince, indeed, and knowing it possibly too well, it was he to dazzle a girl's eye and carry her heart by storm. But speaking of hearts—it was never supposed his grace possessed one; at least he wore it not on his sleeve but was ever cold and haughty, though it was known he liked a pretty woman as well as any—short of the wedding ring.

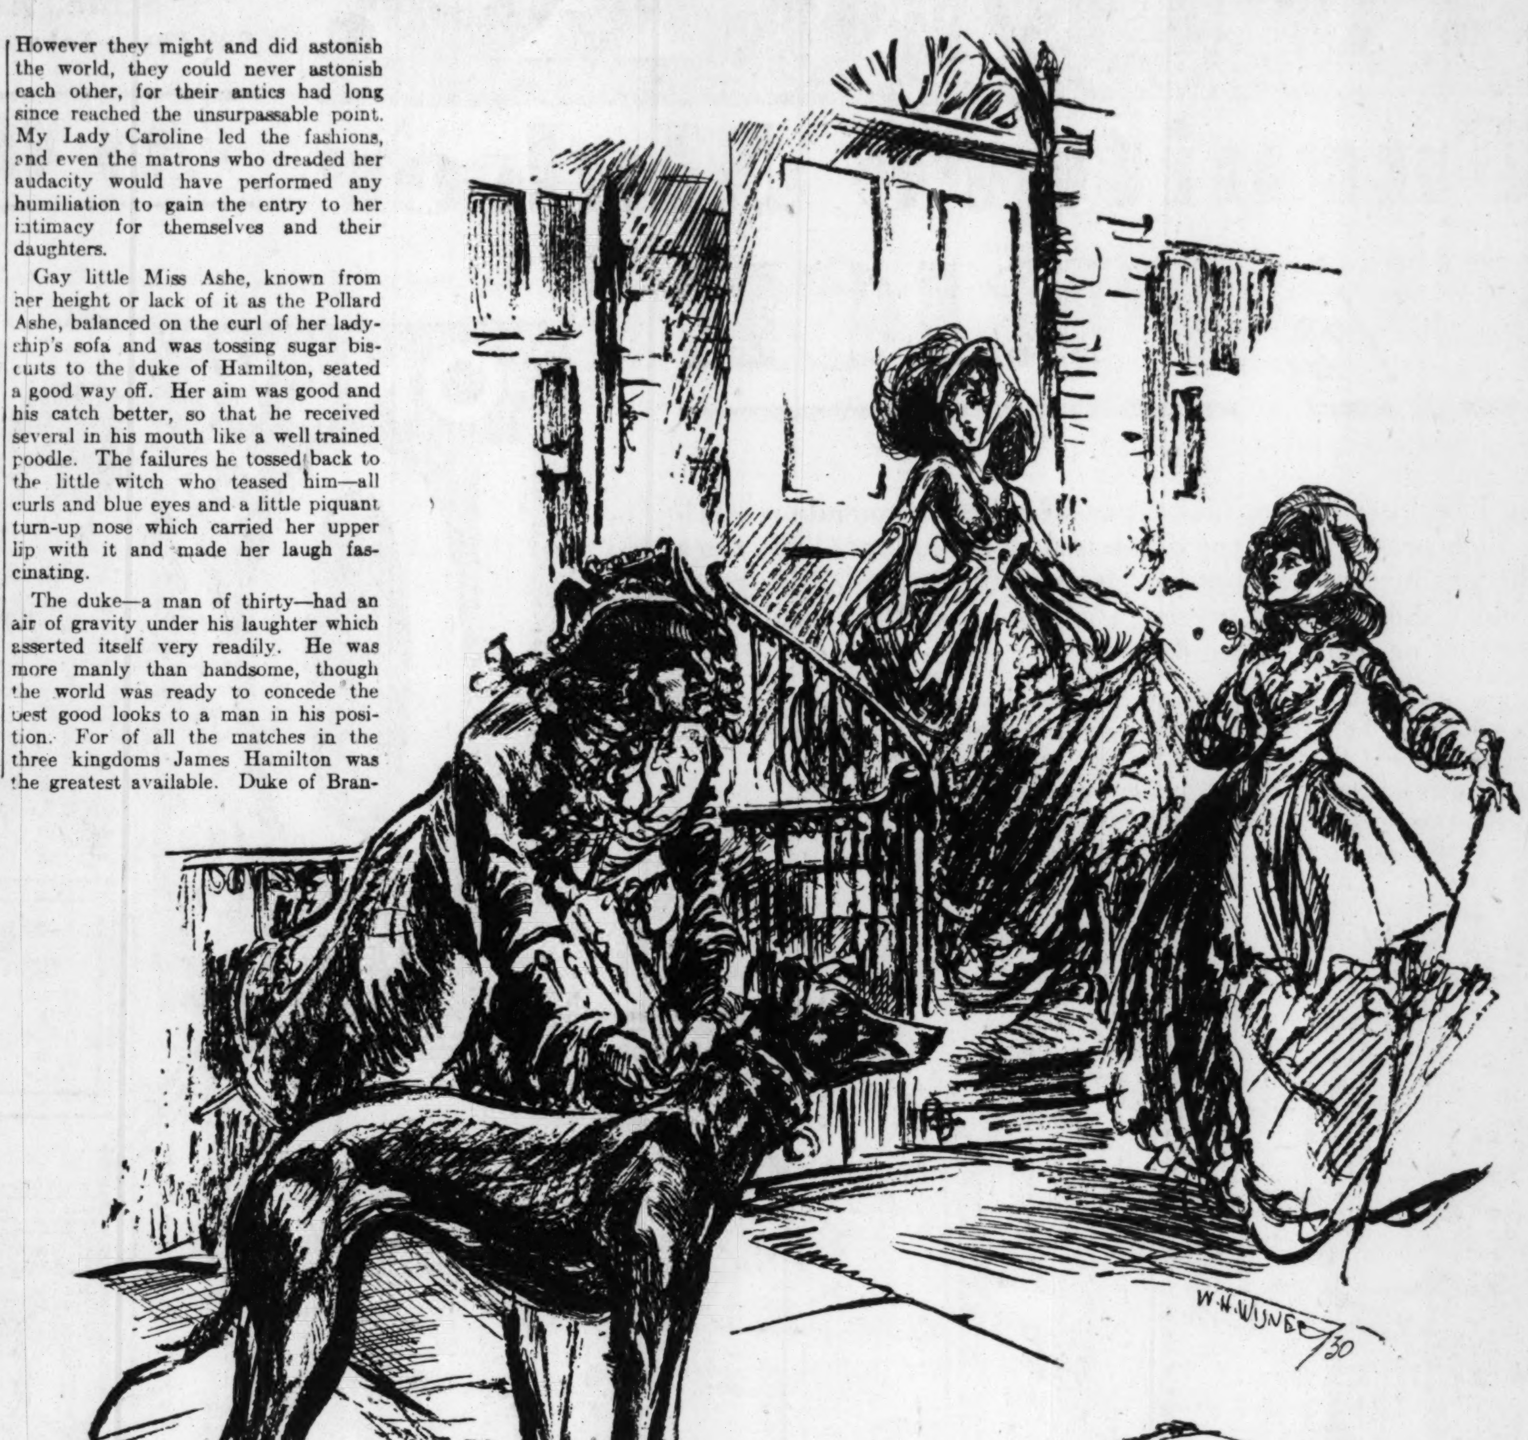

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WISNER.

The duke, unable to hear, saw very well that he and Bran were the center of interest.

THERE was only one other gentleman present and that was the attenuated elegance known as Mr. Horace Walpole—the future earl of Oxford, if his nephew, as appeared very probable, should die without issue. His wit and taste are known to all from his famous "Letters," and if I dare add a highly developed taste for gossip and satire to his other virtues, the "Letters" cannot contradict me. It certainly rivaled his knowledge in literature, art, coins, porcelain, and all the other distinguished trifles which may form a fine gentleman's amusement. He sat in his coat of brocaded silk laced with silver and watched with much amusement the antics of the pretty little Pollard Ashe and her admirer.

It will be seen that, though I present only four persons, they were the very quintessence of the mode, and Mrs. Gunning's letter and inclosure could not hit the mark straighter. On their reception of them would depend the future of the London adventure.

My Lady Caroline opened the letter and laughed immoderately, tossing it with the inclosure to Miss Ashe, who ceased her pretty sport with the biscuits to devour the paper otherwise. Her china blue eyes opened and stared as wide as the china shepherdess' on the mantelpiece.

"The Gunnings!" she cried. "Lord!—what does my Lady Harrington say? Listen, gentlemen! 'My dear Lady Caroline: I desire to present to your notice the Honorable Mrs. Gunning, daughter to the sixth Lord Mayo and sister to the present, and her two charming daughters, the Misses Maria and Elizabeth. They have added much to the pleasure of our little society in this exile, and my lord and I assure you they will not be wanting to themselves or to you in the larger sphere of London. It is possible you might hear of the beauty of the Misses Gunning, for I believe it has spread beyond the bounds of barbarous Ireland. 'Tis only to be equaled by their own and their mamma's amiable qualities. With confidence, therefore, I place their introduction in your agreeable hands and add only my lord's and my own sincerest good wishes for your health and happiness and that of all those in whom you are so amiably interested.

"Your obedient humble servant,
"M. A. Harrington."

Mrs. Gunning's conveyed simply compliments.

"But, lord!" exclaimed my Lady Caroline, "these are the beauties! Yes—I did hear! Ashe, you recall it! When Lord Egremont returned from Dublin he said there were never such Venuses since Helen of Troy—and she was only one and these a pair! Down we all step from our pedestals if these show in the park! What says your grace—what says Mr. Walpole? Shall we shut the door in their faces or flourish it open and say, 'Walk in and welcome'?"

It is not too much to say the fate of the Gunnings trembled in the balance at that moment. Had these four refused them they might have achieved some fifth rate success in city circles, but in the ton never!

Duke Hamilton lifted a lazy eyelash.

"Beauties are beauties and none too common!" said he. "Venus must have her court and they may prove worthy to be a part of your ladyship's attendants. I have heard my Lord Egremont express himself——"

He halted there, not thinking it judicious to reveal how warmly. Even the meekest tempered lady may balk at such eclipse as my Lord Egremont's descriptions portended. And others, too, had heard of them from officers returning from Dublin, contemptuous of all London pretensions to the golden apple; and from ladies whose tossed heads and locked lips bespoke furies burning within. Certainly his grace was determined to see the beauties. He picked up Mrs. Gunning's letter from where it lay by Miss Ashe's foot and silently mastered the address. He had heard something also of my Lord Marlowe's experiences with Maria and they tickled him.

MR. WALPOLE was alive on the instant with curiosity. All novelties, ranging from an execution on Tower Hill to a fête at Vauxhall or a drawing room held by the sulky old widower king, were fish to his net and food for a paragraph or more in his famous "Letters" and the most carefully planned impromptus that have ever delighted the world.

"Have 'em out, have 'em out, by all means!" he fluted in his high reedy voice. "I hear on good authority that mamma is all scheming and underbreeding and the girls the same, but such pretty little tricksters that so long as a man knows the dangers he can enjoy their company without pledging himself to more than a few hours' amusement. I foresee the exact position. They will be like the statues in the Pantheon—the admiration of all but the matrimonial possession of none, and forgot in a few weeks when the newness goes off."

Mr. Walpole loving a reputation for unerring discernment in matters of the sort should not have been so precise in his prophecy. It is certain he did not forgive two of the ladies for many years for his error, but nothing is fiercer than our indignation with others for our slips in judging them. His verdict naturally was received with respect by my Lady Caroline and little Ashe. My lady was contemptuous indeed.

"If their drapery is as slender and their publicity as great as that of the Pantheon statues I refuse to be responsible for the consequences. But 'tis difficult to refuse my Lady Harrington and if the three are what Mr. Walpole foretells their own weight will soon sink them. Vulgarity when it ceases to be amusing is as dull as ditchwater and its efforts to lumber along at the speed of persons like ourselves is amusing enough for a playhouse. Let us therefore amuse ourselves with the Gunnings and when we are tired, drop them—so!"

She released her fan and it fell with a plop on the carpet, whence it was retrieved by his grace.

"What signifies hesitating!" says he. "The girls can't bite us and they can amuse us, and I know no person who can drop either a fan or an acquaintance with such ease and grace as my Lady Caroline. Let our united wits compose her reply for it grows late and a friend of mine was robbed t'other night under the very noses of the lamps and the patrol in Hyde Park. Are you for Twick'nam tonight, Mr. Walpole?"

"By no means, your grace. I have an engagement to play cards with the Princess Amelia, who is in town from Gunnersbury. Last time I had the luck to win at faro a hundred guineas from her royal highness and would not willingly break the luck in its stream. She had a story of Mrs. Horton, her modest old neighbor at Gunnersbury, which her royal highness passed on to me and I to you. Ladies, I require that you put up your fans immediately."

Both did so, laughing immoderately. Two gay pairs of eyes fixed the elegant skeleton over the sticks.

"Says Mr. Meynell to her royal highness, 'O, madam, I was late for dinner with good old Mrs. Horton t'other night and being obliged to come in breeches and spattered boots was profuse in my apologies' Says she with a curtsey of the reign of George the First, 'Apologize not, sir, for that is a pleasure. I can see the gentleman through a pair of buckskin breeches as well as through silk or satin.'"

Even the duke exploded. The ladies shrieked with laughter until even the macaw in his cage joined his voice in the mirth. All knew Mrs. Horton's stainless propriety of speech. Wiping her eyes, my lady rang for her faithful lacquey, Richard, a character in his way, to fetch her quill and a sheet of paper prefumed with sandal, that being her latest fashion and therefore the only one in truly fashionable circles. With three heads bending above her to watch the progress of her hand she wrote:

> Madam, I have the distinguished honor to acknowledge your obliging compliments and the inclosure from my Lady Harrington. She has conferred a pleasure upon me in her introduction of yourself and the two charming Miss Gunnings and I shall allow myself the favor to wait upon you the day after tomorrow—and request the honor of your company and that of the Miss Gunnings at a rout at my house on the following evening.
> With profuse compliments, I remain your obedient humble servant,
> CAROLINE PETERSHAM.

"Won't she see the sneer implied in overdoing the civility?" queried Mr. Walpole, stroking the silk which covered the thinnest leg in London capable of supporting its owner. "Don't frighten your butt before you have her within range of shot!"

"Lord, she'll never see it!" cries the Pollard Ashe. "Here, seal it with the purple wax and your coat of arms. 'Twill impress them as much as the wax."

The duke rose.

"And now to my eternal sorrow, mesdames, I must rend myself from your fair bosoms. Mr. Walpole, I see your coach in waiting or I would give myself the pleasure to offer you a conveyance. Ladies, your profoundly obedient. Hold!—do we meet at Vauxhall tomorrow night."

"But certainly!" answered my lady—her dark eyes flashing with mirth. "Remember 'tis a masquerade Miss Chudleigh is to be there as Iphigenia, and if I'm not mistook her drapery will be no miser of her charms. Adieu, monseigneur!"

That very cosmopolitan group spoke French as much as English. They were all proficients and all, excepting little Ashe, as much at home in the brilliant society of Paris as in London.

THE duke descended the stairs slowly, meditating. At the door he gave his orders to his servants that the coach should precede him at a slow pace down the neighboring street and halt before reaching Oxford road. He followed it, walking slowly. Curiosity to savor a new flavor in beauty tickled him as it would to taste a new dish from Paris commended at the table of the royal Louis. He would certainly not trouble to present himself at my lady's rout unless he was sure 'twas worth his while. He knew all the faces there as well as he knew his alphabet and relished them as little. Not a glance, not a tone but he could predict it and sickened at it beforehand. Owing to his vast estates he was a man of much and grave business but he was also a man of pleasure, careless, taking it as his right and reckless of the consequences to himself and others. But though the business did not pall the pleasure did, and he was never certain that he was not happier in Hamilton palace in Scotland than in the circle to which his rank and fashion condemned him in London. There he had his gun, his rod—and, besides these, a great and unusual love for his dogs and horses which made them a thousand times better comrades than his giddy friends among men and women. A great Scotch deerhound walked at his heels now with eyes fixed on his master. The noble beauty of the animal's body, his long lean lines built for magnificent speed and strength, set off very well the strong slight figure of the duke, clothed in russet brown that matched his hair and eyes. But the dog's thoughts were worthier than the man's as they went together. The dog's were all love and passionate fidelity—the man's a new whim for a pretty worthless face to be ardently possessed and then cast away into the limbo of forgetfulness.

He was fortunate. As he drew near the number imprinted on his mind a girl came out and leaving the door open stood waiting for some one to follow her. She carried a red rose in her hand and another was pinned in the lace fichu which crossed the bosom of her blue dress. She wore a drooping hat trimmed with blue ribbons in the mode of the day and had a narrow black velvet ribbon knotted about a lovely throat.

The duke stooped to adjust Bran's collar with an eye that ravaged under the hat and was rewarded. Elizabeth saw a stranger with a magnificent dog, and it was the dog which caught her eye, for if the best of any species is worth regard so certainly was he. But she was impatient of Maria's delay, because fruit must be bought for supper and Mrs. Skinner was engaged in ironing her mamma's ruffles.

What the duke saw is known already to the reader—loveliness beyond all compare and softened with a chaste sweetness that was tranquil as moonlight on a lulled ocean. Yet, coming hot from the gossip of my Lady Caroline and her intimates, he took this as a pretty pose so often used for trickery as to wear nature's own color and gave it as much belief as he would have accorded to a nymph of Drury lane had his appetites brought him so low.

Still, Bran's collar required much adjustment, for in all his experienced thirty years he had never seen perfection, and in her face and figure and the sweetness of her mouth and eyes he saw nothing but flawless beauty. Her manner might spoil it, her speech might spoil it. Beauty trembles on a hair's balance to a sensitive mind, but as she stood now, tranquilly silent and waiting, he owned her matchless. Could it be possible the other would excel this? Bran looked up in full trust as his master fumbled blindly at his collar, wagging his tail gently, and Elizabeth watched him with serene pleasure. She had no eyes for the man.

A light rush in the hall and a girl ran out, dressed much the same, but her robe was green. She had a pretty basket on her arm.

"I had to wait," she cried. "Kitty struggled to come, too, and mamma was resting."

"Look, Maria, at that dog. Did you ever see such a beauty. I wish he were mine. A noble guard!"

But Maria's eyes were on his owner. "That's the third good looking man I've seen today," she said. "I don't call him handsome, but by no means despicable. Let us throw one of Kitty's biscuits to the dog! I have one in my muff."

THE duke, unable to hear, saw very well that he and Bran were the center of interest. He allowed less for Bran's attractions than he should, saw the gesture with the biscuit, and took it for the invitation he was prepared to accept. He was within an ace of releasing Bran and preparing to march up to the point of attack when Elizabeth pulled Maria away in the opposite direction.

"Not on your life!" says she. "All that is left behind in Dublin. Come along, Maria."

Again the duke heard nothing, but they swiftly turned the corner and vanished before he had made up his mind to question the retreat. He went down the street after them, lost in thought. For Maria had completed the wonderment Elizabeth produced. It was ever thus. And which of the two was the more beautiful he could not convince himself.

Maria's radiant bloom, her ocean blue eyes, her hair bright as sunshine on the waves, coupled with the fact that she was clearly more forthcoming than the other, set her first for the moment and after considered reflection. But, good heavens, what a pair! What signified my Lady Caroline's and Miss Ashe's contempt and Mr. Horace Walpole's perfumed sneers? Why, the town had but to see these girls and it would be at their little feet, craving for orders. Such lips may command in the full assurance of obedience. He could almost pity the two silly women sitting in Bloomsbury square and ignorantly jeering at their own eclipse.

Certainly he never thought of any worth behind all that blare of beauty. The two things were in his opinion unrelated—and the former of no consequence. But he delayed a while, then hastened his steps to follow the Gunnings, reflecting with pleasure as he went that, crowd as men might and would, the duke of Hamilton must easily distance other men with girls of whom the best that could be said was that they were adventuresses. What more could be added he certainly could ascertain if it was in any man's power to do so, and that he could not doubt. One thing was clear. Her head turned often to look at him.

He followed them slowly to the fruiterer's stall, keeping the other side of the road and his eyes apparently on the ground. But, lord! how he watched!

Elizabeth was cheapening cherries with the man and evidently trembled at London prices. She bought two pounds and a few early apples, and words would with difficulty express the duke's desire to shoot across the road and load the basket with every delicacy displayed. He forced himself onward, but not so soon but what the shrewd Maria observed to Elizabeth:

"I wager that good looking man's watching us, sister. I would like to know who he is. Nothing to catch the eye in his dress, but he has a way with him."

Elizabeth, half turning to see the object of this commendation, spilled her little change and her cherries over the road. Knowing that if he did not resist the impulse to retrieve them he was lost, James Hamilton made his escape round the nearest corner, while the sisters ruefully gathered up their property and went slowly home.

But to a rapture! Mrs. Gunning was almost dancing and absolutely brandishing my lady's letter in her hand.

"Your fortune's made, girls. I declare I thought she'd be too high to answer it. And a rout! Isn't it old Mother Corrigan's luck that you have you silver tissues to wear? Mrs. Skinner tells me patches are all the craze at the moment, and my notion is that Maria shall wear her patch in the left dimple and you, Elizabeth, in the right. And for myself the purple paduasoy with the Honiton ruffles my Lady Harrington gave me, and Lord knows I hoped it would have been one of her Mechlin sets, of which she has dozens, but she was too cunning for me there, and——"

And it was impossible to interpose while Mrs. Gunning flowed on in a river of congenial subjects.

ELIZABETH sat silently rejoicing. It was grateful to her feelings to know they would appear in the best London society, and the pompous periods of my Lady Caroline's letter, in which her inexperience saw no ridicule, produced in her mind the impression of a great lady too high to be anything but sincere and courteous, who might now be won to be friendly enough for some interest in their difficulties and narrow means; not that she expected money—Lord forbid! But if a lady of birth could understand their difficulties of another order it would be a help beyond gratitude. True, her mamma and Maria had had a lesson in Dublin, but their exuberance was as quick to forget its impressions as Kitty and Lucy to lose the memory of a slap by way of correction. Maria's gesture with the biscuit was alarming. She was but too ready to cheapen herself, and exquisite beauty is a fatal ally in such circumstances. No one knew that better than Elizabeth. Experiences of her own had enlightened her as to the advances almost penniless loveliness may expect, and the really serious danger Maria had escaped with my Lord Marlowe had left a shadow on all their reputations, for Elizabeth herself must sink or swim with her family. They needed money in London — no one of her thoughts gainsaid that need; but more, far more, in her opinion, did they need some friend whose experience would impose commonsense if no more on her mamma and Maria. In that moment it was not silver tissue was filling her mind while the other two were eagerly discussing its merits, but rather whether their frail bark would be sunk before it was well launched by some foolish and vulgar scandal.

What were Elizabeth's hopes for herself at this time? Hopes and dreams a young girl must have and the other sex must form a part of them. She is to be judged by their quality.

Maria's were summed up in two words. Money and compliance in a husband. It must be owned she was not greedy, for she asked neither intellect, morals, nor fidelity. She could even excuse rank if the income handsomely atoned for its absence, and as to manners, they never crossed her thoughts. Marriage and a husband from whom to ask and have—surely it is not too much to ask from a face which turned men's heads like strong drink and to whom her very silliness was an added charm?

Elizabeth, too, was not greedy, but in another direction. Marriage for her was necessary—so she thought at this time, for no other way offered. Granting that, all she asked was a gentleman (yet that may be much to ask), with sufficient means to insure peace, and good manners enough to promise decent treatment for herself and her family. But her mamma and Maria! It seemed to her that their giddiness would forever bar such men from the house. And again her thoughts reverted to my Lady Caroline Petersham as one whose dignity probably drew worthy people about her—the woman of kind, settled gravity to whom a girl might look up with confidence.

It must be repeated that Elizabeth was very young. This is a fault time inevitably mends. That is all that can be said in its favor when views on marriage are considered.

Her next duty, while they turned over furbelows and feathers, was, at her mamma's order, to write a notice to the daily paper importing that the Honorable Mrs. Gunning, daughter to, etc., sister to, etc., had, with her two daughters, the Misses Maria and Elizabeth Gunning, arrived in Elmer street to take part in the gayeties of London. The junior members of the family were a disadvantage, to be ignored in public though suffered in private. This notice appeared immediately.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.

LONELY WOMEN

by STRUTHERS BURT

Mrs. Bickitt.

Mrs. Charlton.

Content with the Company of Their Own Sex, Mrs. Charlton, Mrs. Bickitt and Miss Speare Lived a Flat and Peaceful Existence in a Little French Town Until Along Came an Attractive Young Man from the States.

MRS. CHARLTON, Mrs. Bickitt and Miss Speare lived in a small town in southern France called Le Lavandou. At least, they lived there during the winter. Le Lavandou, so named from the lavender that covers the slopes around it, is a fishing village, very picturesque, about twelve miles east of the fairly large town of Hyeres and about twenty-five miles east of Toulon. It is at the beginning of the Riviera, but far from the fashion of it, and on the Corniche road.

Out at sea, like the dim backs of huge whales, heather colored, are the Iles d'Hyeres, Porquerolles, Port-Cros and Levant, and Le Lavandou lies in a crescent cup of the hills, and back from the one main street of the town, scattered through these hills, are a few villas hidden in umbrella pines and mimosa and covered with bougainvillea.

Mrs. Charlton lived in the finest villa of all, high up above the town on a separate rounded little mountain of its own, and the villa was so fine and the garden about it, bright with roses, so spacious that Mrs. Charlton had all the sense of superior isolation necessary to her well being and the production of her art. In the summer Mrs. Charlton went up to Brittany where she had a real château. Mrs. Charlton was a novelist. A brilliant novelist and a famous one.

Mrs. Bickitt and Miss Speare, comparatively newcomers—they had been in Le Lavandou only three years—lived in a small and inexpensive villa at the foot of Mrs. Charlton's hill, just as you left the town to take the lane, golden dusty, that wandered up between walls and overhanging olive trees. Twice a year, in the winter and summer, Mrs. Bickitt, having saved in the intervals, went to Biarritz or Deauville, whence she returned with tales of the delightful Frenchmen, Italians, or Spaniards who had pursued her, but without success.

Miss Speare stayed on at Le Lavandou and kept the villa open. Miss Speare wanted to be a writer, too, like Mrs. Charlton, but a writer as unlike Mrs. Charlton as possible. She kept this desire entirely to herself, except for Mrs. Bickitt, who was sworn to secrecy. Violet Speare was exceedingly pretty; approaching twenty-eight, the height of woman's beauty, with crisp bronze hair, blue eyes and a warm skin overlaid with the tan of swimming and walking. She walked for miles by herself and swam for hours by herself. A figure that otherwise might have been too full was thus kept lithe and strong.

Mrs. Bickitt had picked her up in Paris during Mrs. Bickitt's first year in Europe when she had spent six months on the east bank of the Seine, a pseudo artistic adventure that did not at all suit Mrs. Bickitt's idea of "the great life" in pursuit of which she was. She did not altogether understand or approve of Violet's apparent utter lack of interest in men, but she was content with it because otherwise Violet might get married and that would disarrange Mrs. Bickitt's pleasant and carefully arranged existence. In fact, the three ladies—the elderly one, the mature one, and the young one—each in her own way, seemed, at least on the surface, as contented as human beings can be; as if, in this snug harbor, they had found some solution of life. Mrs. Charlton with her grandeur and isolation and her work, broken into by occasional distinguished visitors; Mrs. Bickitt with her semi-annual forays into the fashionable world—or was it?—of Deauville and Biarritz; and Miss Speare with her windswept remoteness and her secret plans.

Mrs. Charlton was easily explained. She was famous and that was all there was to it. She merely had to sit still and things came to her. Mrs. Bickitt, was to all intents and purposes, separated from her husband. Four years earlier, after a couple of years of growing discontent, she had left Kanesville, Ind., and her husband, Julius, both in the unpleasant process of expansion and increasing riches, to seek the shining world she had so often heard about; a world, of course, which can be found only in Europe. Miss Speare was supposed to have had an unhappy love affair—which was correct.

On this May afternoon—early May—Mrs. Bickitt and Violet Speare had walked up to Mrs. Charlton's and, finding her in, were having tea with her on her terrace which overlooked olive dotted slopes, the town and the Mediterranean. It was very still. Every now and then a motor sounded its horn on the Corniche, and far below, some one working in a field whistled sweetly and shrilly. The hills were powered with gold and the sea was spreading into the purple pools of evening. Mrs. Bickitt had just returned from Biarritz and Mrs. Charlton was anxious to hear some details of the delightful Frenchmen, Italians or Spaniards who, according to their semi-annual habit, had pursued Mrs. Bickitt, but without success.

For some reason, however, Mrs. Bickitt was not as expansive as usual. She laughed deprecatingly, flushed, turned away from Mrs. Charlton's cold, searching, amused gray eyes.

"It can't be, my dear," suggested Mrs. Charlton, "that you are losing your taste for innocent philandering? If you do, another of my American ideals will be shattered, although I must say that nowadays, from what I hear, the American woman is becoming less of an innocent international philanderer than she used to be. She is either less innocent or else she refrains."

She delighted in Mrs. Bickitt's ingenuous recitals of her conquests, but did not believe a single word of them. She imagined that if Mrs. Bickitt rode more than two flights in an elevator with a man—Mrs. Charlton having lived fifteen years continuously in Europe, called it "a lift"—that man was put down as a suitor. There were many women like that. All people had their mild insanities, and this quaint little Bickitt woman's were a belief in her own instantaneous irresistibility and a passion for counts and marquises. Since on her comparatively modest income, modest compared to the expenditures of those she wished to run about with, Mrs. Bickitt managed, outside of Le Lavandou, to create an impression of comfortable wealth, Mrs. Charlton had no doubt that she met all the counts and marquises of a certain kind she wanted, but that these gentlemen perpetually annoyed Mrs. Bickitt except with dinner checks or when the poorest of them occasionally made honorable proposals to her to divorce her husband and marry them for her money, was not credible.

MRS. BICKITT was not devastating and she was patently respectable. Respectable in an obvious way that is at present difficult—such is fashion—for any woman under forty, no matter what her character, to achieve. It would take a bold or insensate count or marquis to assail this respectability of Mrs. Bickitt's. Mrs. Charlton did not know, none the less, that this was exactly what had happened to Mrs. Bickitt on her latest trip to Biarritz, only it was not a count or marquis but an Englishman. Englishmen are frequently both bold and insensate, and this Englishman had told Mrs. Bickitt certain bald facts that had left her disturbed in a way she had never been before. Also, he had used certain terms that Mrs. Bickitt would not repeat even to herself. In short, he had asked Mrs. Bickitt just what she thought she was doing and what sort of creatures she thought men were.

A long distance from the security of America, where men, except the younger ones, permitted women to do just about what they wanted, and if they had impolite thoughts seldom mentioned them!

Mrs. Bickitt was small, dark, rounded and pleasing, about forty years old but looked younger, and she had a delightful and quick smiling way with her fine, shy eyes. She was not, however, as Mrs. Charlton rightly decided, devastating.

"Personally," continued Mrs. Charlton in the disinterested but oracular manner that frequently overtook her, "I have never understood, my dear Emma, your attitude toward life. Of course, if you have no money of your own and are entirely dependent on what your husband sends you, that makes a difference, but otherwise, I should think you would divorce him and marry one of these charming creatures."

Mrs. Bickitt looked out to sea and said nothing. She tried to smile, but unsuccessfully, and she felt that at all costs she must prevent the tears from coming to her eyes. Mrs. Charlton was a wonderful woman and she meant a great deal in Mrs. Bickitt's life. She meant that apex where the best of literature crossed the orbit of the best of the great world. To Mrs. Charlton, counts, marquises, and even emperors, meant nothing unless they were distinguished counts, marquises, and emperors. Mrs. Bickitt often felt very proud that an American could be that way.

But there were moments when Mrs. Charlton was hard and unsympathetic. She had lived so long abroad that she had lost touch with the aspirations of American womanhood. Difficult aspirations to define; Mrs. Bickitt found them exceedingly misty herself, but that they were urgent she knew. Mrs. Charlton had never had to live in Kanesville, Ind., to discover, at the age of thirty-eight, that youth and good looks were slipping away from her with nothing to show in return.

Mrs. Bickitt did not want to divorce Julius. What would she do without the thought of Julius in the background? In the beginning she had not had the faintest idea of staying away from Julius as long as she had. It was his fault, anyhow. He could have come over to see her. And as for her going back to Kanesville now—she had lost touch with Kanesville; her ideas of life were different.

THESE things were very intricate; you could not sum them up in a sentence or two, even if you were as wise as Mrs. Charlton. There was much to be said on either side. Julius had been unfair in other ways beyond his not coming over to see her. He had been very unfair when the final decision had been made. He had said practically nothing; had behaved as if he didn't care whether she went or not. She had not noticed the spasm of weariness that had disturbed his already fairly wearied face. But he had taken off his glasses, and that, whether he knew it or not, was bitterly unfair. It made you feel, somehow, contemptible when you knew you were perfectly right.

Julius was bald and short and inclined to rotundity, but he had beautiful eyes, pathetic with the groping softness of the nearsighted. They had not changed since his youth. Few people ever saw them except Mrs. Bickitt. There was something terribly intimate about the taking off of his glasses.

"Very well," he had said, "you'll never get it out of your system by staying here. You run away and enjoy yourself, and come back when you feel like it."

Easier said than done. Mrs. Bickitt had often missed Julius, but you got in the habit of drifting in Europe. It was difficult to tear up the new roots you had grown. And Julius would not come over. She had written to him once or twice asking him to do so, but he was always too busy.

What harm was she doing? What harm was there in anything until this terrible Englishman had come along? He had made everything harsh and horrible. He had told her you couldn't run around Europe without a husband and flirt with men, unless you had a good excuse for not having a husband. Flirt with men! What had she ever done except smile amiably at them and occasionally hold the hand of some lonely one and—but very seldom—permit, perhaps a fleeting good night kiss? Flirt with men!

Mrs. Charlton seemed to be reading her thoughts.

"I think you'll find," she said, "that sooner or later you'll have to make up your mind. Now, if you were like Violet here—" she smiled at Violet—"you would be all right. Violet has all the ravishing beauty's lack of interest in the other sex."

Violet looked embarrassed.

After they had gone, Mrs. Charlton sat for a long while smiling at the dusky olive groves and the dusky sea. How stupid and confused people were! They wanted always to have their cake and at the same time to eat it. Why couldn't they take a line and hold to it? She supposed, however, it was unfair to judge other people by the fairly simple rules that applied to artists, especially great ones. Mrs. Charlton prided herself upon looking at life starkly. She knew she was great. Why make any bones about it? And of course, to the great artist nothing meant anything but his or her work. The great artist used people as he or she saw fit. Just for example, as she, Harriet Charlton, used this silent, pretty girl and this quaint older one to amuse her idle hours, to motor with her, to come to tea in the simple, self-chosen isolation of Le Lavandou.

But as for allowing any one really to complicate your life! What a silly feverish proceeding. It had been years since she had done that—years. You did not notice her asking Violet Speare or Mrs. Bickitt up to Brittany, did you? Where there were always so many of her old friends and she participated in what little social life she permitted herself. No, everything in its place. That was the secret of contentment, and at last she had found it.

On the lane leading down to the town, Violet and Mrs. Bickitt walked in silence through the gathering darkness. Mrs. Bickitt was still struggling with the final, the implacable thoughts Mrs. Charlton had put into her head.

Suddenly Violet broke the silence. "You never mentioned Mrs. Walsh, did you?" she asked.

"No," said Mrs. Bickitt weakly. "I—I couldn't. I was thinking so much of other things."

"I think it's rather important," suggested Violet. "I don't believe Mrs. Walsh is going to live such a very long time."

"I wonder if it's worth while?" reflected Mrs. Bickitt. "You know what Harriet Charlton thinks about wasting her time that way? She's quite ruthless. And she does so hate stray Americans."

Violet stopped in the dusk and faced Mrs. Bickitt, her eyes wide and angry. "It's a question of ten minutes every now and then, and a little well concealed condescension," she said in the quick, breathless tones that sometimes broke through the soft, a trifle absent-minded calmness of her voice. "People have different values. To me, it would make no difference whether our literary goddess called or not, but to Mrs. Walsh, for some odd reason, it means everything."

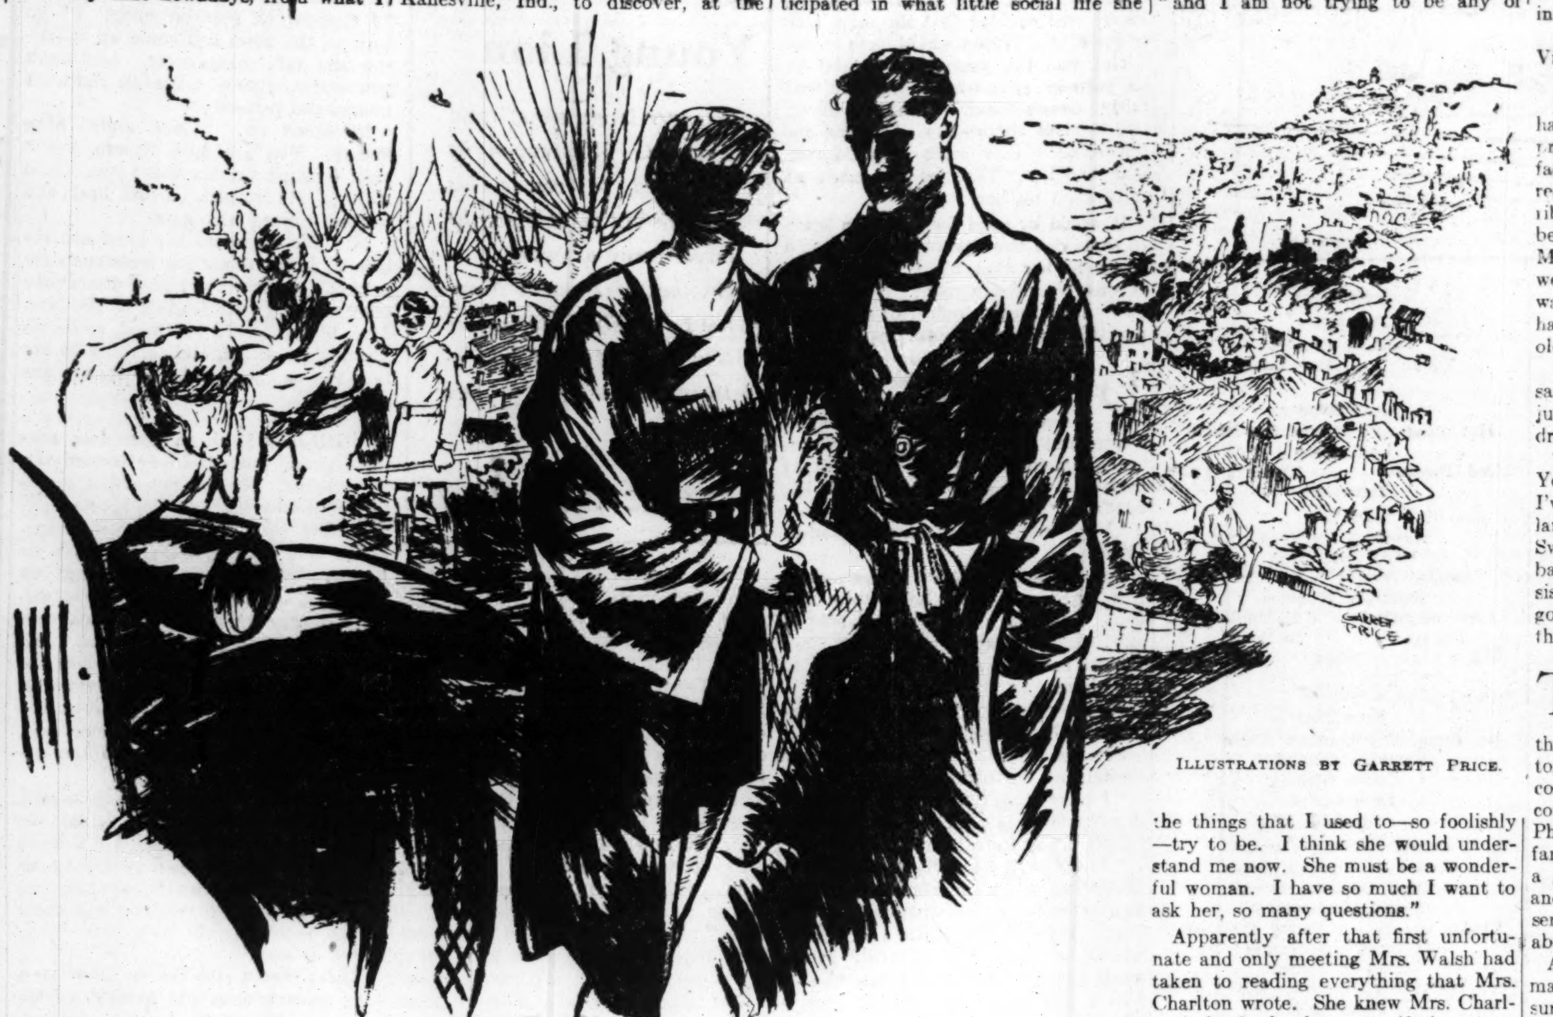
"I'll speak to Harriet Charlton the very next time I see her," said Mrs. Bickitt, but she never did. She was afraid of Mrs. Charlton's contemptuous and half angry dismissal of such a proposal. Yet she knew that Mrs. Charlton was fully aware of Mrs. Walsh's presence in Le Lavandou. Nothing went on that escaped Mrs. Charlton's pale gray eyes.

FOR two months, ever since she had mysteriously appeared and had begun to occupy an unkept villa, Mrs. Walsh had been a subject of debate between Mrs. Bickitt and Violet Speare. Mrs. Walsh was obviously what she was—a lady who had run feverishly along all the dangerous and unimportant byroads of life and had at last come, abandoned, to the crossroads of despair. She was very ill, very faded for her not too numerous years, and she lay all day long in a cane chair out in her straggling garden, the paint on her cheeks badly applied and an unread French novel open on her knees. Violet found her almost unbearably touching; Mrs. Bickitt, with a very kind heart despite her love of counts and marquises, found her touching and also a trifle frightening. There, but for the grace of God, the remains of a midwestern conscience and—but only perhaps—Julius, might some day be Mrs. Bickitt herself or any other American woman who lacked a sense of self-protection.

That was it, and Violet was right when she said that a certain amount of self-protectiveness was necessary, especially in Europe. "It is insensate generosity about yourself or your goods that ruins people," Violet had said. "If you could just take Mrs. Walsh and Mrs. Charlton and mix them together in nice proportions, you'd have something magnificent. I wonder what's become of all the people to whom Mrs. Walsh has been overly generous? They seem to be singularly lacking, now that she needs them."

Gradually, shyly, there had emerged a curious thing about Mrs. Walsh. It developed that years before, when her fortunes had been better; when, newly arrived, she believed for a little while that she was actually conquering Europe, she had met Mrs. Charlton, and Mrs. Charlton had shown her by her manner, quietly, effectively, perhaps without knowing that she was doing it, just what her pretensions amounted to. Mrs. Walsh had never forgiven her, but now that soreness had turned into a fever, almost an obsession, to meet Mrs. Charlton, or rather, since she was much too timid, fortunately, to call upon Mrs. Charlton, to have Mrs. Charlton call upon her.

"I am very ill now," said Mrs. Walsh, "and I am not trying to be any of the things that I used to—so foolishly—try to be. I think she would understand me now. She must be a wonderful woman. I have so much I want to ask her, so many questions."



He and she swam every afternoon together.

Apparently after that first unfortunate and only meeting Mrs. Walsh had taken to reading everything that Mrs. Charlton wrote. She knew Mrs. Charlton's books by heart, as if they were text books of how Americans should behave if they wished, in France, to be successful. It was clear, despite the fact that Mrs. Walsh was not markedly articulate, that Mrs. Charlton's personality and her books represented in Mrs. Walsh's mind a bland, successful American expatriation that Mrs. Walsh herself had signally failed to achieve. The characters in Mrs. Charlton's novels were just the sort of people Mrs. Walsh would have liked to resemble.

"It explains a mystery," Violet had commented wonderingly. "I never knew before what sort of person it was who actually believed in the realism of Mrs. Charlton's point of view."

Now, walking down in the dusk beside Mrs. Bickitt—a long, swinging stride beside a short, ambling one—she was reflecting how pitiful and absurd life was and yet at the same time how splendid and interesting. To be human—that was the point. Human and eager and unpretentious. She was glad that she belonged to a younger generation which, what ever its faults, had at least lost the absurd and cruel inflations of the older generations. That, to some extent, knew where it was going. That, as Mrs. Charlton so often said, chose its line and stuck to it. Which was a good deal more than Mrs. Charlton did, for all her talk. She thought she was so Olympian, so remote, and yet the slightest flattery would disarm her, the slightest criticism would annoy her. A very clay-footed goddess.

While as for Mrs. Bickitt, here, with her constant nonsense about men, her lack of decision about what she was going to do! Violet was very fond of Mrs. Bickitt, but she saw her with the stern clarity of youth. She saw everything with the stern clarity of youth. No, not real youth. Youth is confused, no matter what its facade. Violet saw everything with the stern clarity of youth becoming mature.

They had come to the gate of their villa, covered with ivy and climbing roses, and Violet had her hand on the latch when out of the dusk stepped a young man. He was a tall, thin young man in a motor coat and a cap, with very bright dark eyes and a thin, big nose and a big wide mouth. He was not exactly handsome, but he was extremely presentable and graceful and brown and pleasant looking.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but could you tell me if Miss Violet Speare lives here? I'm Rickard Morton of Philadelphia, and I have a letter of introduction to her from her cousins."

Mrs. Bickitt took the words out of Violet's mouth.

"This is Miss Speare," she said.

"O, really!" He smiled and shook hands. Mrs. Bickitt noticed the expression of surprised delight on his face. Such a nice young man, and so reassuringly American after that terrible Englishman at Biarritz. It would be pleasant to talk to him. In fact, Mrs. Bickitt always got on especially well with young men, anyhow. There was something about her. Young men hadn't changed much. They still liked older women.

"You must come in for dinner," she said. "It will be ready soon. No—just as you are. You needn't bother to dress."

"Thanks. That's awfully nice of you. You get lonely motoring by yourself. I've been a couple of months in Switzerland studying banking—we have a Swiss branch—and now I'm motoring back to Paris before sailing. I've a sister living near Avignon and I'm going to stay with her for awhile and then go north."

THEY had dinner out on the vine covered terrace, with the lights of the little town shining through the trees. They learned that Mr. Morton was in his father's bank, that he was conducting a branch of that bank in a country town about fifty miles from Philadelphia, that he lived in an old family house by himself, that he knew a good deal about flowers and horses and dogs, that he had a pleasant, shy sense of humor, and that he had been about the world a lot.

A rather dangerously attractive young man, thought Mrs. Bickitt. She wasn't sure whether she was glad or not that Violet, although polite as a hostess should be, did not alter her gentle absent-minded manner. Mrs. Bickitt did not want Violet to marry, as has been said before—at least not for a long while. But it was unnatural that a young woman, especially as beautiful a young woman as Violet, should be so little interested in men. Mrs. Bickitt tried to make up for this lack of interest. She was gay, almost flirtatious. But she noticed as the dinner proceeded that the young man found it harder to respond and that at moments he studied Violet with deep, speculative eyes.

Once Violet raised her own heavily lashed eyes and caught this look, and for some reason the two pair of eyes seemed for a second to be unable to extricate their glances. Then Violet's glance became veiled and she looked out to sea.

"You must have wonderful swimming here," said Morton.

"Why, yes," said Mrs. Bickitt. "Violet—Miss Speare swims almost every afternoon."

"I think I'll stay over for a few days. I was going on to Hyeres, but Hyeres, they tell me, is far from the sea, and I'd rather swim than do anything I know. Would you let me swim with you, Miss Speare?"

Violet laughed. "Certainly."

It seemed to Mrs. Bickitt an unusual companionship that ensued, as if Violet had suddenly added a man to her life without being much aware of the fact. Mrs. Bickitt wished that she could be equally calm under similar circumstances. Violet was kind, easily amused, but even more silent than usual, and she never once mentioned Morton to Mrs. Bickitt. That Morton was in love with Violet became increasingly evident. Except in the mornings, when Violet wrote, he was at the villa constantly. He and she swam every afternoon together; at night, a full moon having come up, they motored along the Corniche.

But Violet did not return from these expeditions with the flushed, exalted manner of a girl who, herself, is falling in love. She came in calmly, said good night calmly, and, as a rule, picked up a book and read. Only once did Mrs. Bickitt perceive a break in this attitude, and that was one night when Violet sat for an hour or two by herself in the garden. From her window Mrs. Bickitt could see the still, thoughtful figure.

MRS. BICKITT did not know what had happened between Morton and Violet. They had been sitting on the beach after swimming, three or four days following his arrival. They had that end of the beach all to themselves. Far down toward the town several French children and their quaintly shaped nurses waded in the quiet water. It was dusk. A steamer drew a trail of brown smoke writing along the horizon.

"I didn't think it could happen," said Morton suddenly.

"What?"

He turned quickly and leaned on his elbow. "I'm in love with you," he said. "I fell in love with you the first time I saw you. I didn't think it could happen."

The smile left Violet's face. "O, please!" she said.

"Please what?"

"O, please don't begin to spoil such a nice time. It's been so nice, motoring and swimming."

"But why wouldn't it be nice if you fell in love with me, too?"

"Because——" A grimace twisted Violet's face—"I, O, I can't explain. You wouldn't understand."

"Why wouldn't I understand? I'm pretty good at understanding things."

"Because——"

"You have been in love before?"

"Certainly—I am twenty-seven."

"Yes, anybody who looks like you—who is like you, would have been in love. It wasn't happy?"

Violet frowned and looked at the distance.

"No." She turned impulsively and laid a hand on his arm. "Please. It's taken me so long to get back to where I can enjoy things again. I don't want anything like it—ever."

"That's nonsense," he had laughed impatiently. "Do you think a person like yourself can keep away from it? Do you think even if you hide yourself away in a place like this you can avoid it? Look at my coming. You might just as well try to run away from the rain."

"Please."

"All right. I'll do anything you want. I love you so much, I'll even not make love to you. All right. It's a bargain. But I think when I leave you'll be sorry." Unexpectedly he became proud and stiff and resentful. He got to his feet. "Let's get dressed," he said shortly.

"I've hurt your feelings? I'm sorry."

"O, no. I simply made a mistake. I was foolish enough and conceited enough to think you cared a lot for me, too. Otherwise, I wouldn't have spoken."

"I do like you a lot."

"Thanks."

He kept his word. The remainder of the week he was cheery, companionable, far removed from any trace of courtship. The night before he left he came to dinner and as usual, afterwards, asked Violet to motor with him. As usual, she accepted. Mrs. Bickitt decided she was glad he was going. It was tiresome having Violet out this way every night. And now, Morton had ceased to be amusing to Mrs. Bickitt any longer, he was too distrait.

Morton and Violet sped along the twisting Corniche in the moonlight; to the east, toward St. Tropez and St. Raphael. The pines threw round shadows on the road, the open spaces were spinning discs of silver. To the right, beyond the shining cliffs, the sea drew a moving white ring around the shores. Morton and Violet were silent.

"You're going too fast," she said at length.

"I want to go fast tonight," he had answered.

Suddenly, and without knowing why, she found herself angry with him.

"Very well," she had commanded. "Go really fast then—faster. If you're going to be brave, be brave!"

"Do you really mean that?"

He stopped his car with a suddenness that threw Violet forward. They had come to a part of the road where it left the sea and entered a dark patch of woods. After the rush of soft air the night seemed magically still and fruitless.

"What are you going to do?" asked Violet.

He laughed shortly. "I'm going to be brave," he said. And then he suddenly became fierce. "I'm going to try to make you human," he said. "I love you so much that I don't care what you think of me, so long perhaps as I can stir you enough so that when the next man comes along—as he will—you'll treat him differently from the way you treated me. A person like you can't live the life you're leading."

"What's wrong with the way I've treated you? 'Not human!' How absurd!" She who prided herself on her interest in humanity; who wanted to write, in contradistinction to Mrs. Charlton, books full of the tragedy, pain, laughter, and good honest aroma of life. She who prided herself on being released and tolerant and understanding.

"You've been very kind," he said gravely, "and very inhuman. Would you like me to tell you about it?"

"Yes."

"Very well. "You nurse the sorrowful memory of a ghost, don't you? I'm not sure, but I imagine that the trouble, whatever it was, was as much your fault as his." Violet gasped. "O, yes, it wasn't that that made you inhuman—in that direction you've always been inhuman. You're a writer, aren't you? Mrs. Bickitt told me. Well, writers often substitute the emotions of their characters for their own emotions. But you mustn't. You weren't made for that."

"You know a lot for a banker," said Violet sneeringly. She was ashamed of herself. This angry break in her reserve. But she wanted to hurt him.

"Bankers are supposed to know a lot nowadays. It's just as interesting a profession as writing. There're big bankers and little bankers."

"Well, go on."

HE looked at her with grim amusement. "That's about all." He threw in his clutch. "Did you think I was going to kiss you? That would have been conventional, but slightly cheap. I only kiss women who show plainly they want to kiss me."

"It is a pity," said Violet, "you choose the last night we will see each other to be insulting and stupid."

He was silent for a long time, staring into the bronze night ahead of him. "I don't think it is the last time," he said finally. "I think you are in love with me. If I didn't think it, I wouldn't have done or said any of the things I have done or said, or that I'm going to do and say."

He was silent once more until they reached the gate of Violet's villa, then he reached into his pocket and brought out an envelope. "I'll be off early tomorrow morning," he said. "If I give you this letter will you promise not to open it until a week from today? Let me see—just at this time, say? It's about ten o'clock, and that will be Wednesday—Wednesday a week."

Violet took the note and looked down at it.

"What a strange request."

"No, it's not so strange. Will you promise?"

"Yes, but how do you know I will keep my promise?"

His eyes, shining, smiled at her in the moonlight. "Because you will. You're that sort of person."

"Thank you. That's nice of you."

"No, true. Good-by."

She stood by the gate, listening to his car creaking down the lane. Suddenly it occurred to her how empty her life would be for awhile without him. It was like that—you never realized how much you would miss a person until that person was gone. Well, she wouldn't let him go out of her life for good. They had been warm friends although they had said so little to each other. She would write him. Then she remembered that she didn't even know his sister's name, let alone her Avignon address. Never mind, she would write to his Paris bankers.

But it might be years before they would see each other again. He was going back to America to settle down to work. Inhuman! If he only knew what she had gone through! People acquired protective shells because otherwise they couldn't live.

She slipped the note into the pocket of her overcoat and went into the house. Mrs. Bickitt, reading in the drawing room, looked up with eyes that seemed to have been crying. Violet had noticed that look several times in the last week. She wondered what was the matter with Mrs. Bickitt. She had asked, but Mrs. Bickitt had said, "Nothing."

What a queer world all of a sudden! Mrs. Bickitt crying and a man, out of a clear sky, without reason, falling in love with her, Violet! Leaving a note not to be read for a week. She felt the note in her pocket and wondered what it contained. She sighed and went up to her room.

Outside in the garden a nightingale was singing—making an infernal racket.

All people had their mild insanities, and this quaint little Bickitt woman's were a belief in her own instantaneous irresistibility and a passion for counts and marquises.

The Tribune Cook Book

—By Jane Eddington—

The Versatile Sandwich, So Typically American, May Appear as a Dainty Appetizer or Make an Entire Meal.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

THE Scotch name for sandwiches, "pieces," perhaps better describes this little combination, as we think of it today, than any other word. Sometimes we call a piece of bread with a spread an open sandwich. When it is of afternoon tea size it would be more correctly called a "bouché," the French for mouthful, which in French is frequently enhanced by being called a "bonne bouché," or good mouthful. Such a little bit, if thin enough, is called a canapé by the French. The bread toasted for it, and the particular service to which it is devoted, puts it among the appetizers, or with other hors-d'œuvres.

The common everyday and perhaps the original idea for a sandwich is that it consists of two slices of bread with something called a filling between them The filling was and is now, commercially at least, usually plain meat or cheese. The multitude of so called sandwich fillings are perhaps more often used as a spread with a single slice of bread than with the two slices.

From the bread standpoint we have yet another sort of sandwich, the three decker, which may constitute a whole meal and is called a club sandwich. It consists of three slices of bread, some cold chicken, broiled bacon, lettuce, tomato and mayonnaise dressing. The three deck combination may also be ham, cheese and lettuce, but it is not what we expect when we order a club sandwich.

Ham is so universal a filling that we come to have certain associations with it, like that of the phrase, "on rye." We might speak of such sandwiches as of the rougher sort, because they are often so clumsily put together that with one bite all the meat comes out.

There is also a sandwich service consisting of more than three slices of bread, but it is really one of many single open sandwiches. To serve such an array has been the trademark of certain tea shops and the customer may almost get a meal from such a collection, beginning with an appetizer or two, then a meat, a salad and a dessert, all with the bread foundation. The bread is usually cut as thin as possible and the spread is also thin.

Always one of the sandwiches in such service has a sweet spread. There is hardly a more attractive spread of this sort than one of orange marmalade sprinkled with chopped nuts. However, over and over again this dessert type of sandwich has a cream cheese and jelly or preserve spread. The cream cheese has become so universal and so acceptable for this purpose that it hardly needs mentioning. If it were not so worth while we should say that it had been overworked.

The Hot Sandwich.

Toasted cheese, hot fried egg, hot beef with gravy, and several of the preparations served in cream sauce are popular hot sandwiches, with the bread in most cases toasted, or, at any rate, heated up in the sauce or gravy. A Welsh rabbit is in a sense a hot sandwich because the melted and hot cheese is poured over bread. And this is built upon by adding a poached egg, making the Scotch "woodcock."

Today, when a spread of fried onion may blanket a lamb chop as well as a beefsteak, and when there are so many spreads of this type used with meat, the following little hot beef and onion sandwich seems entirely in the mode. Beef of almost any cut may be used, but shoulder beef chopped for pot roast can have little chips cut from it to make this sandwich. Try out a bit of suet in a frying pan, add two tablespoons of water, put in two medium onions sliced, cover the pan so the onion will cook soft in the water and fat in five minutes, and be not the least bit dried out. Push the onions to one side and heat up the pan a little, but not enough to burn it. Put in the little chips of meat and perhaps lower the fire a little, and after one minute turn up the fire and turn the meat. Mix the onions and meat and let them blend over a gentle heat for five minutes. Use as a filling between two buttered slices of fresh bread. This is equal to half a meal.

Hot Mushroom Sandwich.

Not long ago we printed the following little recipe for a mushroom sandwich, and a sandwich with this filling may be served either hot or cold. For three closed sandwiches of sandwich loaf size, we purchased ten cents worth of mushrooms when a pound cost fifty cents, and used besides half a cup of coffee cream, one-half level tablespoon flour, one-half teaspoon salt and tried various other seasonings, but recommend that one start with no more than this list of ingredients. Dissolve the flour in a little of the cream, add the rest of it and stir over the fire until it is thickened. Let it stand where it will keep warm while the mushrooms are prepared. Peel and chop the mushrooms, heat them up in a saucepan over a tiny bit of fire until the water starts and they have changed to a watery shade. Then add them to the thickened cream and let stand for five minutes. This makes an excellent party sandwich, desirably dainty. For nice service, three sandwiches of sandwich loaf size can be cut into three or finger shape. This mixture is as dainty as creamed chicken.

Au Gratin Sandwiches.

For three good sized slices of bread, take one cup cooked celery diced fine, and from half a cup to a cup of white sauce. Combine these two, spread them on the bread which has been toasted, and sprinkle over each about two tablespoons of grated cheese, put over the broiler until the cheese is melted and serve at once. More cheese may be used to make a heartier snack of this sandwich. Another way, or to make a similar sandwich, sprinkle grated cheese on toast, put a highly seasoned sauce over it and the thin slices of cheese over this. Put under the broiler until the cheese melts to Welsh rabbit consistency. A hot cheese sandwich which a valiant woman has served on one of the islands of the Pacific was filled with cheese and Spanish pimento, toasted rapidly on both sides and served in little hissing brown squares.

A Cooked Cheese Sandwich Filling.

A sandwich filling of about the consistency of soft butter, which we may put away in a jar and keep for an emergency, is made as follows: One pound American cheese, two or three beaten eggs, one-half cup cream, salt and pepper. Cut the cheese fine, beat the eggs and mix the cream and the cheese with them. Put all in a double boiler over a gentle fire and stir constantly until the cheese melts. Add the seasonings after taking it from the fire and these may include a few grains of red pepper. With careful cooking it will not curdle, but if it does it can be strained. This will easily keep for a week. We can vary it by using a little mustard with it and sweet red pepper. In making a hot cheese sandwich by spreading slices of cheese on toast and melting it under the broiler, we may improve the whole in some cases by sprinkling a little sugar over the cheese.

The Meat and Fish Pastes or Butters.

The meat and fish pastes are easy to make. They also enable us to make a little meat like chicken or ham go a long way and they may be prepared a considerable time before they are to be used.

Calf's Liver Sandwich Filling.

Of late the liver sausage has been mixed with cream and used for dainty rolled sandwiches and the following made of fresh calf's liver can be near a foie gras. At any rate, it is excellent enough to rank as a luxury: Cook gently one cup of sliced calf's liver with one onion, a bay leaf, a blade of mace and several peppercorns and cloves. Leave the meat in the liquid and when it is cool put it in the ice box until wanted. When ready to make sandwiches drain the liver, chop it with one small onion, one tender stalk of heart of celery and two hard cooked eggs. Chop to a paste and mix with one tablespoon of butter. Season with salt and paprika. This is particularly excellent with rye bread.

Chicken Sandwich Paste.

Grind or pound to a smooth mass one cup of cold cooked chicken. Work into it about three ounces of unsalted butter and one or more tablespoons cream, according to need, and a tablespoon of grated piquant cheese, a little salt, just a grain or two of cayenne pepper, and a dot or two of dry mustard. Make as smooth as butter and spread as thin as you choose. To make it thin it may be put through a coarse strainer when it should be smooth enough to pipe. This is an economical way of making chicken sandwiches, because the chicken will go so much farther and almost paper thin slices of bread with this spread are especially appetizing.

Cured Herring Paste or Butter.

Of all the vigorous little sandwich spreads or fillings, those made of smoked fish are perhaps the most piquant and tasty, which explains perhaps the everlasting popularity of anchovy and bloater paste, which we buy in cubes, and use mostly in making canapés. These pastes, however, are frequently used for seasoning other sandwich fillings. The following is the best thing of the sort we know anything about: Scald boneless herring—these are sometimes called "blind robin"—by pouring boiling water over them, let them stand for three minutes or so, drain and heat them gently in butter, but remember that in scalding and heating this fish we may stiffen it as we should not if we wish for good results. The idea of the scalding and the heating is to give the herring a fresher taste. Crumb the fish or pound it fine and mix it with creamed butter, to which we may add a few drops of onion juice and a suspicion of cayenne pepper. With thinly cut oatmeal bread this makes an exceptional sandwich, and it is excellent as a little piquant touch with cucumber in a sandwich.

Sardine Paste.

Remove sardines from the can. Pour boiling water over them; pour it off immediately. Remove the skins, which come off more easily because of the scalding water. With a pointed knife remove any little black inner skin. If they are not boned open them, remove the backbone, then serve the fish rubbed into as smooth a paste as possible. Blend this paste with an equal quantity of butter, using a few drops of lemon juice if to taste, or the served fish may be mixed with hard cooked egg yolk. Sometimes people have used Worcestershire sauce with this paste.

Spicy Butter.

Cream four tablespoons sweet butter and work into it one half cup of confectioner's sugar, to which add two level teaspoons ground cinnamon and a scant half teaspoon of ground cloves. After these are creamed together, grate a little nutmeg over the whole and work it in. This butter may be used to make what we sometimes call a cinnamon toast, which is a hot spicy open sandwich. It may, in fact, be used for a good many things, even for icing inexpensive spice cake or coffee cake, and it is easy to pipe it. We may chill it and use it as a hard sauce with puddings. It may be made up into little balls and spread on little hot tea cakes or muffins, or on the slices of some of the other simple breads we serve hot and so make of each slice of hot bread a sort of coffee cake.

The Fancy Serving of Butters.

For the sake of variety and experience, when we have little hot breads for an afternoon tea—a few familiar and homy ones—we may have different types of the sandwich spreads or butters made up into small balls and served all together on a dish, or better served in the sectional Chinese bonbon dish of various sections so there will be no chance of mixing the flavors.

If we serve them in one of these sectional dishes, we can also have in one of the dishes some fine stiff mayonnaise, because there are some people who would rather have this for a spread or a filling than any other piquant thing in the world. If we do not use the sectional dish we may put the butters each in a little ball-like leaf of head lettuce or even of new cabbage. The dish we have been talking about is sometimes called a relish dish of many compartments and sometimes a bonbon dish. A large dish of this type is pleasant to pick up and pass around, therefore the work of serving these butters can be distributed and make the service less formal and put people more at their ease. It also gives each eater a chance to choose what he will have.

The Butter Itself for Sandwiches.

It is much easier to spread bread which is to be used for sandwiches if the butter is first creamed, and as suggested after it is creamed it may have a great many different seasonings mixed with it. Some chopped green pepper or red pepper makes excellent filling with the soft butter.

COINCIDENCES

Coincidences in geography, time, and persons are ever fruitful of stories and recollections. Whom from the home town did you meet in a far corner of the earth? Who of the same name looks just like you? Who called you up just as you were about to make the call? The Tribune wants to hear of these experiences, at $1 per. Address Coincidences, Sunday Tribune.

Same Name; Same Address.

I will give my name as Anna Huff. I came to this country from Germany in 1923, and am now an American citizen.

Last Christmas, in opening some of my Christmas cards from Germany, I could not place the name of the sender of one of them. In examining the envelope, I found it was properly addressed to me, with the exception of the apartment number, which was 405 instead of 402. I went across the hall and, much to my amazement, found that there was an Anna Huff [that's not her real name, either] employed there. She, too, had come from Germany about the same time I had, and from a town about twenty miles from my home in Germany.

It seems strange that we two, having the same name, and living so close to each other in Germany, immigrated to the United States, to Chicago, and were finally employed in the same kind of work, in the same building; in fact, just across the hall from each other. A. H.

Activities of Women

When asked as to what she attributed her long life, Mrs. Louise Wheeler, who recently celebrated her 103d birthday in Freehold, N. J., replied, "To minding my own business."

Mrs. Natalie Holt of Georgetown, Mass., has a forge mounted on a motor truck and drives around the countryside repairing farm tools and machinery.

Even in the rough work of the mines in Japan 57,000 women are employed, more than a fifth of the total of mine workers.

Bright Sayings

The family was about to sit down to dinner when some unexpected friends dropped in and were invited to stay. The result was that six people sat down to dinner while only five ears of corn had been prepared.

George, after slowly counting the number of ears on the platter and then the number of persons at the table, meditated a moment and then said, "I'll take my corn first, please." G. I.

Ronald caught his hand in a vase. Father manuevered and twisted but the chubby fist refused to budge. Father sternly said:

"Ronnie, straighten out your hand and make it small."

The lad replied, "I can't, daddy. I got a nickel in it." G. E. A.

Lonely Women

—By Struthers Burt—

How sweet and sharp and painful his notes were—like something turning inside of you.

Mrs. Bickitt had been crying; Mrs. Bickitt had been crying all that week, and she continued to cry the week that followed. She had come to the conclusion that Mrs. Charlton, as usual, was right; also that terrible Englishman at Biarritz. And often the face of Mrs. Walsh gave added point to her reflections. She couldn't go on as she had been going. She must do something definite, either divorce Julius or else go back to Kanesville.

It would have been different if Julius really loved her, but Julius had shown that he didn't by refusing to come over to see her. No doubt he had been consoling himself quite happily in other directions. Men were shallow creatures. Finally she decided that she must talk to some one. Violet would have to do. Violet was too young and brutal to be entirely sympathetic, but she was fairly clear-sighted. Violet, however, had been so abnormally silent and absent-minded ever since that Morton man had left. Then he had made an impression on her.

It would be good for Violet to listen to some one else's problems. She would speak to her that night after dinner. It was Wednesday night. Two weeks now, Mrs. Bickitt reflected, since this question had been bothering her.

DINNER on the terrace was eaten almost without a word. With the coffee Mrs. Bickitt said, "Violet, I must tell you something very important. I have come to a very important decision. Let's go out and sit on the bench in the garden."

"Very well," agreed Violet disinterestedly.

The bench was under a great plane tree; the lights of the house were hidden. Soft sand made the footsteps of any one approaching soundless. Mrs. Bickitt and Violet had their backs to the house.

"I am going to divorce Julius," announced Mrs. Bickitt.

She had expected some protest, some excitement, but none came.

"I have wondered why you haven't done it long ago," commented Violet calmly. "You can't love him."

"I did love him," retorted Mrs. Bickitt in a hollow voice. "I loved him as well as any woman ever loved a man. I loved him until a couple of weeks ago, and then suddenly everything became clear and I saw what a fool I was To waste my time on a man who doesn't even know what love is; a man whose whole mind and spirit is taken up with the most sordid kind of money grubbing. What am I to Julius? What is any woman to a man of his type?

"I tell you, my dear, you and I—any woman who knows men over here—have seen something finer and more self-sacrificing; a glimpse of what love can be. Now, I do not love Julius any longer." Mrs. Bickitt brought her small fist down on the arm of the bench. "I hate him," she hissed. "Hate him!"

"Hush!" said Violet suddenly. "There is some one standing right behind us."

"Be-hind us?" repeated Mrs. Bickitt in a quavering voice.

"Yes." Violet stood up and turned about. "Do you want to see any one?" she asked in French.

"I—I," he began in a whirlpool of confusion, but in English spoken with an American accent.

Violet scrutinized him for a moment. Finally, with a high, queer note in her voice, she said, "Sit down, Mr. Bickitt."

He collapsed into a garden chair.

Beware the Young Lion

"Danger is my wine," said Savaran. Whereupon he proceeded to rescue his enemy—but in doing so he threw away a throne. . . . Another of Douglas Newton's thrilling stories of that bold African adventurer will appear in this section

Next Sunday

"You wish to see your wife alone? I will leave you."

He waved a hand in the air. "O no, please don't go. Not until I apologize. I didn't mean to creep up on you. I—you see—well, I got things at last arranged so that I could come over, so I thought I'd take a little holiday and surprise Emmy here. It was foolish of me, but—well—I thought it would be fun. I ought to have let her know. But I didn't mean to overhear your conversation. Honestly I didn't."

He paused abruptly. "Now, you stop crying, Emmy," he said sternly. "Stop it d'y'hear! It's perfectly all right" He leaned over and patted her limp hand. "Maybe it's a good thing I did overhear you. It'll save a whole lot of unnecessary talk. I've got your point perfectly, and I don't blame you a bit. I'm no figure of romance and I've had to work so hard I hardly know what to say to a woman, but you made one mistake—I do love you and most of that work was done for you.

"And now that I've cleaned up you're going to share in it just the same. You're going to get paid for those fifteen years you put up with me. That's just business. So don't you worry. I've often wished I could be romantic, but I suppose I was made for other purposes. Maybe you thought it queer I didn't come over before? Well, I couldn't leave my business for one thing, and for another I wasn't going to come until you really wanted me. I made a mistake this time—I thought recently your letters had been a little bit homesick."

Violet drew in her breath with a hissing sound.

"Beat her, Mr. Bickitt," she begged. "Tell her to go to the devil. That's what a modern man would do, and she'd love you for it."

Julius looked at her sadly and mildly. "I wish I could," he said, "but I guess I belong to another generation. I couldn't tell Emmy to go to the devil, no matter what she did. Well——" He took off his glasses, rubbed them, and looked at his wife. His eyes were very soft and gropingly nearsighted—"I suppose I'd best be going. I'll go back to the hotel and come up tomorrow and talk things over. And don't you worry, Emmy. It's all right. I understand perfectly."

He stood up. "Good night, Miss Speare. You are Miss Speare, aren't you? Emmy's written about you. Good night." He turned on his heel and walked toward the gate.

Mrs. Bickitt raised her head and listened. Julius' departing footsteps were perfectly audible now; they diminished on the gravel path leading to the lane. Mrs. Bickitt raised her head, made an inarticulate sound, and jumping to her feet, ran as hard as she could into the darkness.

VIOLET, after an immobile moment, walked slowly toward the house. She was not elated, merely wearied by life and the spectacle it presented, and especially marriage. Julius and Mrs. Bickitt wouldn't be happy. They would patch things up somehow, but they wouldn't be happy. In the drawing room the clock said ten. She could read that note, then, that Morton had left her. But now she had lost all interest in it; almost all curiosity. She went upstairs, took the note out of her bureau drawer and, going to the window, opened the envelope.

"When you read this," the note said, "I will be back here again at the Hotel de la Mediterranee. I will leave Avignon in time to get here about nine. I will make no attempt to see you, but if you want to see me, you will come to the hotel. I will wait until dawn. Think it over."

Violet peered into the darkness for a long second, then she hurried to her closet, put on a light cloak, sped downstairs, through the garden and down the lane toward the hotel.

MRS. CHARLTON strolled out on to her terrace after luncheon. It was a warm, bright day early in June. In three weeks now she would be going to Brittany. Mrs. Charlton looked down at the town and frowned. Absurd what habit did to you. It annoyed her to find how much she missed that quaint little Bickitt woman and that Speare girl. Unfortunate creatures, to run off—one with a fat, bald, stupid little husband, the other with an unknown young man. And what a nice life they had been leading—all of them. Good gracious, what fools human beings were! Continually involving themselves unnecessarily. Never letting well enough alone.

Well, she supposed she ought really to do something, before she left, for that pitiful Walsh woman. See that she had enough to live on, anyway. She had been meaning to do something for a long while now.

She sighed and rang the bell. A footman appeared.

"Robert," she said, "I will want the motor at three, and pack up for me six of those jellies I'm so fond of, will you?"

As Mrs. Charlton came through the gate into the unkempt garden, Mrs. Walsh tried to struggle up from the long chair in which she was lying.

"No," said Mrs. Charlton, "don't move. Stay where you are. I'll take this chair. Thank you. It's quite comfortable."

Mrs. Walsh stared at her, the red in her cheeks coming up under the red of her paint. "It—it's very good of you," she murmured in a choked voice.

"No," said Mrs. Charlton graciously. "No, it isn't good. I've been meaning to call for a long while." Suddenly a queer contraction took place somewhere near her heart and her eyes blurred. She saw the truth. "It isn't good," she said breathlessly. "I came because I had to. We're the only American women left in Le Lavandou—we'll have to stick together even if we don't want to."

She had said too much? No, she hadn't said too much. It was very relieving. She was glad that as always she could perceive things so clearly. Also she felt ennobled. She wished that Jean Rogniat, the charming young Frenchman in Paris, her very good friend, who was writing her biography, could have been present. Somehow, she would have to tell him about this little scene; it was historic.

I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

N. J.: ONE OF THE GREAT faults in our diet is that we eat too much concentrated food like meat, eggs, bread, butter, and not enough of the bulky foods, fruits, greens and whole cereals. Also, we eat too much rich food—rich pastries, pies, gravies and cream sauces. Simple foods are the best.

C. A.: HABITUAL CONSTIPATION and intestinal fermentation result in unpleasant odors. One of the essentials to proper digestion, assimilation, and elimination is taking into the body enough water to dissolve the food materials and to wash away the waste. Send stamped addressed envelope for leaflet on constipation.

FANNIE S.: SOAP SHOULD BE used sparingly until the dry condition of your skin has been overcome. Use a cleansing cream for cleansing purposes. At night work cream into the skin and allow as much as possible to remain on all night. Use only the mildest soap.

V. N.: A RED NOSE MAY RESULT from poor circulation, trouble on the inside of the nose, or to some disturbance of digestion. You may improve your circulation by a brisk walk of three or four miles daily, or by the cold shower habit, followed by a brisk rub down. Eat plenty of green vegetables and fresh fruit and drink six to eight glasses of water daily.

A Little Lament

By Eleanor Jewett.

There are exciting things at night
When I must go to bed,
Great yellow eyes come up our street
And little ones of red.

The yellow eyes are very proud
And honk and drive away;
The red eyes are more friendly and
Sometimes the red eyes stay.

Then company comes in for us,
And most exciting noise—
But I must always go to bed,
For night is bad for boys.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

A Dollar for Your Dreams

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay you $1 for every dream published. Address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Accident Foretold.

Recently I started to drive to Los Angeles. I spent the first night in a small town. During the night I dreamed I collided with something while driving. So realistic was my dream that it awakened me with a start.

In the morning I gave it little thought and continued on my way.

That afternoon, in the bitter cold and with the wind swirling the snow across the road, the crash came.

My car and a fast north bound car collided, wrecking both cars, but fortunately injuring no one.

Thus I am back home again preparing for a fresh start. C. Mc.

Warning Saved Life.

My cousin lived out west when she was first married. Her husband was an engineer on the railroad. She wanted him to take her to a ball the engineers were giving, but he said he couldn't, as he had to work the night of the ball. Next day she told him she had dreamed of seeing his train going over a red bridge and the bridge giving way and the engine and coaches falling in the river. He laughed and said there was no red bridge on his line.

However, she was so affected by the dream that she finally prevailed on him to get a substitute and attend the ball with her. During the evening word was brought that his train and coaches had fallen into the river, over which was a red bridge (painted since his last run), and the man who had taken his place was killed. A. M. H.

Dream Brings Good Luck.

I had been out of employment for some time, and one night I dreamed that a woman was running after me calling me by name and trying to hand me something. I had this dream three nights in succession.

The following morning I decided to make my usual round to the various agencies. Upon entering one of the employment bureaus I noticed there was a new woman at the desk and when she looked up I saw it was the same person who appeared in my dreams. And, sure enough, I secured a position that day. S. G.

Revealed Presence of Coupon.

About 3 years ago I bought some wool from a well known concern but had no time to make it up into a quilt until last winter. One night I dreamed there was a coupon for a little teddy bear in the wool. When I opened the package the next morning I found the coupon for the teddy bear. B. B.

It Really Happened.

We formerly lived on a farm and had two boys working for us. When war was declared they enlisted. One night I had a vivid dream of seeing a ship torpedoed. I seemed to hear the sound of the explosion and saw the great mountain of water that was thrown up.

A few weeks later I received a letter from one of the boys saying that their boat had been torpedoed on its way to France. C. R. R.

Ravinia Still Is Supreme in Summer Opera

Opening Scheduled for June 21.

By Edward Moore.

T is still springtime, and so far there has been small temptation from the weather to sit out-of-doors under the trees. But all those ho have been brought up properly; t is, with memories of "The Mika- " in their minds, know how in one ssage Nanki-Poo sings a few re- rks to the effect that the flowers at bloom in the spring, tra-la, bring omise of merry sunshine. And so Mr. kstein sends a communication with veral implications, if without direct pression of tra-la, bringing promise Ravinia.

Saturday, June 21, to Monday, Labor y, Sept. 1. You might as well remem- the period and save out some tes during its course, for almost y night you care to go there you d something uncommonly seductive the way of opera presentations. ose who plan to go gadding about rope this summer will find plenty opera, and some of it interesting ra, but that any great quantity of will be better opera is to be taken th the Scotch verdict, not proved.

Under no circumstances will any of European variety be given under re persuasive physical surround- s. If there is such a thing as a com- table opera seat in Europe, it has t yet been discovered by me, and have sat in quite a number. The y thought of the Ravinia pavilion, n on three sides, with fresh air d pleasant outlook, is enough to ke one believe that opera should ver be presented under any different rcumstances.

n Illustrious Roster.

As for the artists, there is no particular need at this time to take aid m the bright lexicon of synonyms. he roster will tell its own story. You ll observe that only a few changes ke it any different than it was last r, and last year's history was a rk for any opera company to shoot This is it, avoiding invidious comparisons by alphabetical listing:

Revivals and Novelties.

As is the case with most other opera companies, Ravinia's répertoire is divided into two sections, that of novelties and revivals and that of standard works. Perhaps one reason why Ravinia is liked so well by those who know it is that its novelties have been chosen with acumen and put on with a high order of intelligence. Wherefore, there need be no great surprise in discovering that the revival list of the coming summer includes "Marouf," "La Vida Breve," "L'Heure Espagnole," "La Campana Sommersa," and "La Rondine." They have already proved themselves.

But there are some new pieces as well. Mr. Eckstein has been out on the hunt. The first of which he speaks is "Anima Allegra," by Franco Vittadini. It has never been heard in this part of the country, although it was an item of the Metropolitan a few seasons ago. Classifying as an Italian opera of the present decade, it tells a Spanish story of the nature indicated by its title, "The Joyous Soul." All this would seem to put it directly up to Miss Bori. In fact, she is already announced to sing the principal part, a character named Consuelo. The principal tenor part will add to the répertoire of Mr. Chamlee, and there is another important tenor part to be sung by Marek Windheim, a Ravinia newcomer.

"The Bartered Bride."

Another addition is entirely new to Ravinia, though not entirely to Chicago. It is a Bohemian opera to be sung in German; in other words, Friedrich Smetana's "The Bartered Bride." As a matter of history, it was sung at the Auditorium the last time that the Metropolitan company visited Chicago, in April, 1910, and Emmy Destinn, Carl Joern, and Herbert Witherspoon were among the participants. It was also given by a Bohemian company at the Eighth Street theater a few years ago. Otherwise it is remembered chiefly when Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra play its overture.

Mme. Rethberg is to sing the part of Marenka, a performance in which she is rated with success in a number of European opera houses, including that of Prague. It will be something new to her Ravinia admirers, for Marenka is a comedy part. Mr. Chamlee will also appear in this novelty as Hans, Mr. D'Angelo as Kezal, and Mr. Windheim as Wenzel. Some of the most attractive music in the opera is written for the ballet, and here Ruth Page will be featured, who, incidental-

Parent of All Passion Plays Visits Chicago

How Freiburg Rite Came to American Stage.

By Charles Collins.

THE history of the Freiburg Passion Play, which is to be disclosed at the Civic Opera house this evening, has been traced back to the year 1245, when the inhabitants of Baden, Germany, after being saved from an epidemic of the plague, took a vow to act the story of Christ's life and crucifixion at regular intervals. Thus it has a background of nearly seven centuries. Migrants from Baden carried the tradition to Oberammergau four hundred years later. The ritual of Freiburg, in fact, appears to have been the parent of all the Passion Plays that at one time or another have been scattered widely among the devout peasantry of the German states.

The present production, led by Freiburgers whose family legend is steeped in Passion Play lore, has been in the United States since August, 1928, and during that time it has appeared in eighteen cities. The American tour grew out of the enthusiasm of a Mr. Krug, a rich citizen of St. Joseph, Mo. A civic stadium or "bowl" had been built there, and Mr. Krug, a Freiburger by birth, decided that the Passion players of his old home should be persuaded to dedicate it. His diplomacy was successful, and the drama went on tour, for the first time in its history. The result of the ten days' performance in St. Joseph was amazing—103,860 people attended. Since then this group of players, led by the Fassnacht family, has been on pilgrimage in this country.

Not a Pantomime.

About a dozen Freiburgers, most of them of the Fassnacht clan, are the nucleus of the company and act the principal rôles. The minor parts are played by people who have been engaged on this side of the Atlantic. The crowds for the episodes of pageantry are supernumeraries, of course, recruited and trained locally. The costuming and stage settings come from the workshops of the Freiburg burgesses and tradesmen, for whom the technical phases of this ritualistic drama are a labor of love and reverence.

The Freiburg Passion Play uses dialogue; the Oberammergau Passion Play is given entirely in pantomime. That is the only marked difference between them. The manuscript was translated into English for the American appearances, and the Fassnacht family has studied the language devoutly, for they have the art spirit as well as the religious impulse. The play depicts the last seven days in the life of Christ, as told in the scriptures of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John.

This is the background of the Frei-

Benefit Brings Out Brilliant Gotham Crowd

By Joan King.

NEW YORK, May 3.—[Special.]—Although the close of the current musical season has been anticipated hereabout for several weeks, practically all its chief interpreters having checked out for the summer, the last few days have produced some of the year's most interesting events. Among these was a "double bill" at the Metropolitan Grand Opera house, sponsored by that most enterprising of pioneers in the rhythmic field, the League of Composers.

The occasion was a benefit for the National Music league and a composers' fund, the program quite the most ambitious of the league's decidedly ambitious career. Important works by the two most formidable of the modernists, Schoenberg and Stravinsky, were offered. The first was an opera by Schoenberg called "Die Glueckliche Hand" [The Hand of Fate], the second, "Le Sacre du Printemps" [The Rites of Spring] by Stravinsky. The former was heard for the first time; the latter, previously known to America only in its concert form.

House Sold Out at $15 Per.

The evening was noteworthy in more than one respect. In the first place, the League of Composers had the assistance of no less formidable a batonist than Leopold Stokowski, his Philadelphians, a chorus from the Curtis Institute of Music, and Robert Edmund Jones, Nicholas Roerich, Leonide Massine, and Rouben Mamoulian to take charge of settings and directions. Then, too, although tickets were $15 apiece, the house was sold out days in advance, and when the audience assembled it turned out to include "all the best people in town," including musicians, artists, impresarios, dramatists, and social leaders.

According to a speech made by Mr Stokowski before the curtain, these two pieces illustrate the work in artistic directions which he and a "certain number of my colleagues are doing." These directions are "the synthesis in the theater, on the basis of rhythmical polyphony, of all its resources of drama, music, lighting, the dance, etc., in new ways that accord with modern thinking and will eventuate, it is hoped, in an American form of art."

The Schoenberg drama is simple. A man emerges from darkness, a chimera astride him, its talons in his neck. He has an apparition of a wom

Eva Le Gallienne in Lively Revival of 'Romeo and Juliet'

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Revelling again in the freedom of her position as head of the Civic Repertory theater, Eva Le Gallienne has boldly prepared her own version of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" for production as the fifth and last play of her current season.

What is more to the point, Miss Le Gallienne has achieved success with the production, herself playing a Juliet which several of her professional critics have insisted is the best Juliet of her time.

In this I think they sway slightly to the side of a gallant generosity. I like the Le Gallienne Juliet very much, but I doubt that if it were played in direct competition with that of Jane Cowl, or could have been so played a half dozen years ago, it would have been considered the better of the two. Or the equal of the impetuous yet gentle maid that Miss Cowl created.

There is no other, however, that compares favorably with it. Nor any other recent revival of the tragedy that matches in interest that which the priestess of the Civic theater has directed.

Its interest lies largely in its youth and eagerness. It has little of the distinction of the older Shakespearean revivals, and none of the scenic beauty of the best of them. Its people are journeymen histrions, for the most part, blessed with no more than a fair average of talent. Naturally they lack the poise that experience with the classics gives and, pictorially, they are of a nondescript and quite unimpressive character.

Restores Important Scenes.

But they are young and they are eager. Being beholden to neither tradition nor commercial managers, they are content to play Shakespeare in 14th street as though he were a new author whose work was being taken up for the first time by this particular stock company.

The changes Miss Le Gallienne has made in the acting version are more important in the matter of the restorations of text than in the cutting. Wherever she has thought the plot and story could be improved by putting back scenes that are usually discarded, she has put them back. Get out your text books, Shakespeareans, and I will tell you of these changes:

She has cut the prologue, "Two households, both alike in dignity."

She opens with a salvo of drums, thus, as her chief apologist, Oliver Sayler, says, setting the tone, temper and pace of this "fighting play." Two drummers march in, coming from the orchestra pit, a la Reinhardt, and disappear up a flight of steps marking a side hill street in Verona.

She cuts the third scene of the first act, wherein the nurse recalls Juliet's age as that of just under 14 and her mother warns her of the Count Paris' proposal and of his coming to the feast.

It is as well not to mention the matter of any modern Juliet's age, so I suppose this bit is well cut, though it does weaken Juliet's sudden interest in Romeo, as opposed to Paris. Miss Le Gallienne argues that the gist of the scene is later repeated.

Improvement in Second Act.

The second act is played practically complete, with the restoration of the early lines of Benvolio and Mercutio, after they have lost sight of Romeo. As the scene is set, the Capulet garden wall is at back, with the balcony down front. Romeo leaps the wall and is silhouetted effectively against it in the moonlight while his pursuers shout their gibes at him from the other side.

This gives character to Mercutio's "conjuring" speech ("I conjure thee by Rosalind's bright eyes, by her high forehead and her scarlet lips," etc.) and leads nicely into Romeo's resumption of the scene when they are gone, with: "He jests at scars that never felt a wound."

In the third act Miss Le Gallienne plays all the first scene in place of cutting it, as some do, at the end of Difference of Opinion Makes Contest Lively

"Some say, compared to Bononcini
That Mynheer Handel's but a ninny.
Others aver that to him Handel
Is scarcely fit to hold a candle . . ."

SO wrote John Byrom of Lancashire along in 1720, when the feud between Handel and a rival composer, Bononcini, was raging merrily. It was a feud in which all the people took sides, one that caused much glee among the journalists of the day, and the verse quoted seems apropos to our contest, for the votes coming in prove that the star beloved by one ardent fan is simply less than the dust in the eyes of another.

Well, it's difference of opinion that gives doctors, dentists, and lawyers work, sells cold creams, calls for naval parleys; sends you dashing to the mail box with your vote and makes life generally interesting.

This election, which is to crown a new king and queen of moviedom, demonstrates forcibly the fact that most people go to the movies, take a deep interest in them, and think intelligently on the twin subjects of pictures and the people who play in them. The fans' response to our call to the POLLING PLACE has been enthusiastic and untiring. It has certainly made one critic sit up and take notice. There must be no sleeping around this desk, if I know what's good for me. Well—so be it. Let's all keep our eyes and ears open and form a big, watchful, appreciative, constructively critical league destined to boost along the industry that gives us so much enjoyment.

The contest continues. Just how long it will lies in the laps of the gods—same really being you . . . for when you show signs of weakening—hand gets too tired to write and you can't find a pencil, etc., etc., we'll call it a day. SO—vote, for the night is coming . . . !

Here's the ballot. You'll find THE COUNT in tomorrow's TRIBUNE.

Mary M. Minter Visits Filmdom; Away One Year

But Isn't Interested in Movie Contracts.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — [Special Correspondence.] — Mary Miles Minter, former film luminary whose light was shaded by her connection with the Taylor murder mystery of 1922 and by her subsequent court actions against her mother for the purpose of securing some of the money Mary earned while under age, recently returned to Hollywood and announced that she is totally uninterested in pursuing a further dramatic career.

To friends she confesses that she pines for a normal life, that of wife and mother, but that to date she has not been able to make up her mind. Some months ago the name of the star was coupled with that of the Hungarian tenor, Josef Diskay, but Miss Minter admits that while she felt highly honored by the attentions of Diskay, she did not feel they were temperamentally suited to each other.

Regains Health After Year.

Miss Minter, who is now 28, younger than some of the reigning favorites in Hollywood, has undergone a year's treatment to build up her health, which she lost through worry and too rapid reducing. Restored, and slender, she is much the same beautiful girl of her heyday. Following her short visit here she intends to return to the Sansome sanitarium at Santa Barbara.

As to her money affairs with her mother, Mary still feels she was right in demanding an accounting from her parent of the vast sums she earned as a minor, and while she received some financial settlement on which she is living at present, she feels her original views and actions were justified.

German Star Introduced.

Josef Von Sternburg, the "enfant terrible" of the industry, has been at it again. Von Sternburg, he of the black shirts and no neckties, and numerous other idiosyncrasies, left a wake of sharp comment after he acted as master of ceremonies at a luncheon to introduce the new star, Marline Dietrich, to the press.

Miss Dietrich is a beautiful blonde from Berlin, whom Von Sternburg directed in a foreign-made picture for Paramount. Miss Dietrich sat, quiet and lovely, at the festal board, in a blue frock trimmed in pink, with pink crêpe slippers to match and a huge white off the forehead straw hat. Her only comment when introduced was: "I am so sorry that I cannot just sit and look at you instead of you all being here to sit and look at me."

After this modest speech Von Sternburg spoke of his find, and here was the buried barb that made all the women, magazine and newspaper writ-

THEY LEARNED ABOUT WOMEN.
MEN WITHOUT WOMEN.
SUCH MEN ARE DANGEROUS.
LADIES OF LEISURE.
ONLY THE BRAVE.
THE ROGUE SONG.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Wondering what movie you'll go see today? Well, maybe some of those listed above are playing at your neighborhood theaters. In case they are, and you've forgotten the original lowdown we gave you on 'em—here's repeating:

"THEY LEARNED ABOUT WOMEN."—"is full of sure fire entertainment values, meaning songs, baseball games, snappy dialogue, love interest, laughs . . . It has been mighty well directed, photographed, and recorded and boasts one of those casts you like to have around. . . . Bessie Love is right there in the foreground giving all she has, and you know what Bessie has to give? PLENTY!"

(Picture featured Van and Schenck, you know, as a couple of Big League ball players.)

"MEN WITHOUT WOMEN" scored because—"it 'gets' you, from salty start to smashing finish. It achieves its effects, not through the horror of human beings entrapped under the sea, but through its keen and instinctive analyses of the characters of those trapped humans, at that moment when all masks slip aside and men reveal themselves for what they are . . . an everlasting credit to John Ford, who made 'The Iron Horse,' 'Four Sons,' and many other worthy films . . . dialogue by James K. McGuinness is magnificent . . . suspense is awful . . The finish is surprising, powerful, deeply and tenderly moving . . . acting is uniformly fine . . . With all its tragedy 'Men Without Women' is not devoid of fun. You will find it sporting some robust comedy, presented with vigor and sparkle . . . Don't let anything keep you from seeing 'Men Without Women.' It's one of the Great Sound Cinemas of the Day."

"SUCH MEN ARE DANGEROUS." I found "mighty good entertainment," principally because of the characterization of Warner Baxter, who "achieved a triumph in makeup that has never been exceeded even by Lon Chaney. The story, by Elinor Glyn—and the best she has ever written—is far-fetched but decidedly interesting . . . Mr. Baxter is an artist and no mistake about it. Albert Conti gives a flawless performance . . . Photography is fine and sets and costumes are lavish and pleasing to the eye. There's a gorgeous wedding scene! . . ."

"LADIES OF LEISURE"—"adapted from the Belasco stage play by Milton Herbert Gropper, is not the sensational mess the ballyhooing it's getting might lead you to believe it, but is, instead, the keen and sympathetic study of a human soul that gropes its way from darkness to light. It tells the story of a girl who never had a chance; was thrown one, seized it and clung to it desperately, with what results the picture shall show you . . . This talker does for Barbara Stanwyck what 'In Old Arizona' did for Warner Baxter. It makes a good player a great one. There has rarely been on stage or screen a more believable and appealing figure than her Kay Arnold . . . The story carries you from one intensely human situation to another, never losing its grip on your sympathy and imagination. Nobody ever 'falls down' in this picture.

"The playing is fine throughout and the direction's great. Dialogue is always natural and spontaneously delivered—ESPECIALLY by Miss Stanwyck. (I seem to like her) . . . Staging is excellent; photography beyond reproach and the production is generous with laughs, tears and suspense . . . . 'Ladies of Leisure' merits your attendance. It bears the trademark—Genuine."

"ONLY THE BRAVE" I liked a lot. To quote from the original review: "This civil war romance comes as a refreshing change in film diet. . . . You will find it clean, interesting, picturesque; shot through with humor and excellently acted, directed, photographed, and recorded. Your hearts will quite go out to the featured players, Mary Brian and Gary Cooper, who have a splendid supporting cast in which the best player is William Le Maire. He portrays a lackadaisical, philosophical sentry, giving a garrulous and droll utterance of his innermost thoughts. You'll grin broadly for this gentleman—if you don't laugh right out loud—and I think you'll l. r. o. l. . . .

"The story unreels with a sort of spicy langour that charms. Here and there it whips itself into a fret of action, but in the main it is an engagingly casual production with a sort of cocked-eyebrow-tongue-in-cheek-aspect."

"THE ROGUE SONG."—"With Lawrence Tibbett classifies as excellent entertainment. Without him, despite lovely coloring, some fine scenery, and several bits of expert acting the piece would be but an anemic and meandering affair . . . but—Mr. Tibbett is there with the glorious voice that has made him renowned on the Metropolitan stage. Lawrence Tibbett is there, and he is—besides being a singer—a polished and convincing actor. . . . There are a number of stimulating choruses and an impressive wailing number by the gypsy women. You will enjoy 'The Rogue Song' and it will make you

"Les Huguenots" Promised.

The French wing will likewise be augmented by "Les Huguenots," of which an important part will be given. Mme. Gall made a new reputation for herself with this opera in Paris last winter. She will be opposite Mr. Martinelli, which in itself makes a rather remarkable combination. Mr. Danise and Mr. Rothier also have important parts.

But why go further? Here is the complete list from which the summer's attractions will be selected. They gave something like thirty-five works last summer and there is no reason to believe that they will fall much short of it this year.

Novelties and Revivals: "Anima Allegra," "L'Amico Fritz," "La Campana Sommersa [The Sunken Bell]," "Le Chemineau," "L'Elisir d'Amore," "L'Heure Espagnole," "Les Huguenots" [in part], "La Navarraise," "La Rondine," "La Vida Breve," "Mignon," "The Bartered Bride" [in German], "The Secret of Suzanne."

Standard répertoire: "Aida," "Andrea Chenier," "Ballo in Maschera," "The Barber of Seville," "Carmen," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Don Pasquale," "Faust," "Fedora," "Fra Diavolo," "Il Trovatore," "La Boheme," "La Juive," "L'Amore Dei Tre Re," "Lohengrin," "Louise," "Lucia," "Madame Butterfly," "Manon" [Massenet], "Manon Lescaut," "Marouf," "Martha," "Pagliacci," "Rigoletto," "Romeo and Juliet," "Samson and Delilah," "The Tales of Hoffman," "Thais," "Tosca," "La Traviata."

As was remarked above, save your dates.

Sparkling Operetta.

Meanwhile the light opera wing of the Civic Opera company—its principal need is to have a specific name—having done well in matters of both art and box office with "The Bohemian Girl," now turns its attention to the second item in its répertoire, "The Chimes of Normandy."

This is one of the most attractive operetta scores ever written. Its music sparkles and there are tunes in every one's memory today, though that one may not know their source. It can be confidently recommended. Hilda Burke, Irene Pavloska, and Barre Hill are entering the company this week, all members of the grand opera division. Miss Burke will share the rôle of Germaine with Lois Johnston. The complete cast follows:

Serpolette	Irene Pavloska
Germaine	Hilda Burke, Lois Johnston
Gertrude	Helen Freund
Jeanne	Harriet Bingham
Suzanne	Ruth Bellinger
Henri, Marquis of Corneville	Barre Hill
Jean Grenicheux	Chauncey Parsons
Gaspard	Herbert Gould
The Bailli	Mark Daniels
The Registrar	Robert Dunville
The Assessor	William Scholtz
The Notary	Bertram Peacock

In connection with Music week, which begins today with special musical services in the churches of some 2,500 cities of the United States, C. M. Tremaine, secretary of the national Music week committee, sends the following statement:

"Just as each year the Music week is made a medium for advancing some one particular idea, the 1930 celebration will serve as a reminder that it is wise to preserve a continuity of musical activity throughout one's life if that life is to remain fully enriched. Indeed, the phrase 'from eight to eighty' is not too inclusive to indicate the scope of personal participation in music which the Music week is to stimulate. The celebration is to remind us that there are no age limits in music—that music is the real fountain of youth.

"Such a reminder is very necessary just at the present time, when, despite the increased music making among our people, there is still a great wastage of the musical talents developed among the younger generation. As Dr. Erskine has expressed it, too many of our young people, after they have left school, go through 'the great American ritual of dropping their music.' The interests of adult education and recreation therefore justify certain constructive steps toward bridging over the hiatus between the musical training of our children and the proper functioning of that training in their adult life. The projectors of the Music week, while devoting no less attention than before to participation by the public schools, are addressing themselves to this task of providing a stimulus to adult music making such as will cause our people more generally to 'get the music habit.'"

Music Notes.

One of the unusual musical events of the week will be a recital of the marimba-celeste played by Clair Omar Musser at Orchestra hall on Friday evening. This is an instrument of percussion, derived from the xylophone and glockenspiel, and played by rubber mallets of differing kinds. It is described as being of special design, having a range of eighty-seven notes in two manuals, and creating its tone from wood and metal alloy. Sustained tones, volume, and auxiliary tremolo are controlled by foot pedals and electric excitation. It is predicted that one will be able to hear deep organ tones, also the staccato of the cembalom and the delicate color of the harp. Annabel Robbins, pianist, and twenty-two members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will assist.

As its contribution toward Music week the Chicago Bach chorus will give a concert at Orchestra hall on Wednesday under the direction of Sigfrid Prager. An elaborate program is offered, including cantatas, or excerpts from cantatas, of Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Lent, and Easter, and concluding with the chorus, "Worthy Is the Lamb That Was Slain." Five soloists and an orchestra of forty-five from the Chicago Symphony orchestra will add their services.

This afternoon Orchestra hall will house the annual festival of the Civic Music association. Combined children's choruses of 1,000 voices directed by Felix Borowski will sing folk songs of six different nations, sacred songs, operatic excerpts, and songs by modern classic composers. The Civic Orchestra of Chicago, directed by Eric DeLamarter and Frank Polesny, will play works by Wagner, Liszt, Lacombe and Saint-Saëns.

That the spring music season may seem to continue in health and vitality, the Marshall Field & Company Choral society, Edgar Nelson, conductor, and the Chicago Business Men's orchestra, Clarence Evans, conductor, will offer entertainment on Thursday night, the one at the Civic Opera house, the other at Orchestra hall. Lawrence Tibbett, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be the soloist with the Field organization. He will sing an aria, as yet unnamed, a group of songs, also unnnamed, and appear in a scene of nine excerpts from Mendelssohn's "Elijah" with the chorus.

The orchestra offers Tchaikowsky's Fifth Symphony as its chief number, and Mrs. Avern Scolnik, professionally known as Amy Neill, a violinist of high merit, as soloist. She will play the D'Ambrosio Concerto in B minor.

Eight chorales, several of which are arrangements by Henry J. Weber, former conductor of the Civic Opera company, will be sung by a chorus of 150 in connection with the presentation of the "Passion Play" by the Freiburg players at the Civic Opera house, beginning tonight. In addition the chorus will sing "God So Loved the World" from Stainer's "Resurrection," Mozart's "Ave Verum," and one of the Bach chorales. The group has been recruited from churches of Chicago and the suburbs, and is directed by Charles Demorest.

Pupils of the Hull House Music school, the oldest settlement music school in America, will sing Reinecke's "Elfrieda and the Swans" next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Bowen hall. It is part of the program of the fortieth anniversary celebration of the settlement. The performance will be directed by Miss Eleanor Smith, who founded the school four years after the foundation of the settlement. On Sunday afternoon, a week from today there will be a concert by the Chicago Woman's Symphony orchestra. Ebba Sundstrom will conduct, and the soloists will be three pupils of the music school.

The three winners in the annual scholarship contest by the Chicago Woman's Musical club are Maurice Monitz, violin; Ethel Gibbon, piano; and Beatrice Beardmore, voice.

Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa went back to his former organization, the United States Marine band, after an absence of thirty-six years, on April 26, and conducted a new march of his own during the dinner of the Gridiron club in Washington. He calls it "The Royal Welsh Fusiliers March," the name being taken from the fact that this regiment was closely allied with the U. S. marines during the Boxer war in China in 1900. A handsomely bound copy of the score of the march is to be presented soon by Ambassador Dawes in London to the present commanding officer of the Welsh Fusiliers.

SOLOIST

[Koehne Photo.]

She may possibly be more easily recognized by the musical world under the name of Amy Neill, brilliant soloist, first violin of her own string quartet, and first class musician generally. Under either name she is announced to be the soloist with the Chicago Business Men's orchestra at Orchestra hall Thursday night, at which time she will play the D'Ambrosio concerto in B minor.

IN AND OF OPERETTA

IRENE PAVLOSKA.
[Moffett Photo.]

TRANSFERRING for the time being from the grand to the light opera wing of the Civic Opera company, she will appear during the week in the part of Serpolette in "The Chimes of Normandy" at the Civic theater. She is well known as a singing-actress in the opera company, and she is especially good as a comedian. Wherefore everything looks favorable for the role.

PRIMA DONNA

BERNA DEANE.

"Nina Rosa" is now in its eighteenth week at the Great Northern theater, and is making a runaway race for the season's record in length of run. Berna Deane, prima donna of this operetta, could hardly have been called a veteran when the engagement began, but she may now be [illegible] her service stripes.

French Light Opera Retains Its Popularity

"THE Chimes of Normandy," by Robert Planquette, which will open tomorrow night at the Civic theater, will hold the boards for two weeks. It will be followed by the Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "The Gondoliers," which will open Monday, May 19.

"The Chimes of Normandy" was first produced in Paris at the Folies Dramatiques on April 19, 1877. It scored a sensational success, being the first of over 2,000 performances in that city alone, and on Oct. 27 of that year it was brought out in New York at the Fifth Avenue theater; Hooley's theater housed the first Chicago production, which opened Dec. 10, 1877, for a run of fourteen performances. Other seasons in which "The Chimes of Normandy" was featured included a week's engagement at Christmas time of 1878 and several performances by the Emma Abbott company, the first in January, 1879, and again in April of 1879.

Emma Abbott returned in December of the same year. About this time several juvenile companies were touring and one of them included three performances of "The Chimes of Normandy" in its répertoire during September, 1880. The same month Emma Abbott's company came again to give "Il Trovatore," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Maritana," "Romeo and Juliet," "Carmen," and "The Chimes of Normandy."

Included by Many Companies.

In December of the same year, the famous old Boston Ideals company was in Chicago for its first engagement and sang two performances of "The Chimes." The company returned to Chicago on several occasions during the next decade as did the Emma Abbott, Melville's Light Opera and the Hess-Acme company, and always included "The Chimes" among their offerings.

In May of 1885, Chicago heard its first performance of "The Chimes of Normandy" in French when Maurice Grau's old French Opera company made its second visit to Chicago. From that time until the present day "The Chimes" has often been featured in the répertoire of visiting light opera companies such as the Bostonians, the Castle Square company, etc.

The scene of "The Chimes of Normandy" is laid at and near Corneville in Normandy and the period is the middle of the seventeenth century. The work is played in three acts and five scenes, the first act being divided into three scenes. The opening picture represents the beach at Corneville; the second scene, on the road to the fair, and the third scene, the fair at Corneville. Act II is played in a hall in the castle of Corneville and Act III in the gardens of the castle.

The story deals with the adventures of Germaine, the foundling; Serpolette, the good-for-nothing, and their friends. Henri, Marquis of Corneville, who has been an exile since childhood owing to the civil war, returns to his ancestral home for the great annual fair, which is being celebrated in the village that receives its name from his chateau. It is one of the old fashioned villages of the seventeenth century.

Opens with Village Gossips.

The curtain rises on an assemblage of village gossips discussing scandal and small talk. Serpolette is the topic of conversation among the belles of Corneville. She comes in just in time to turn the tables on the others and change their taunts into expressions of rage. Gaspard, the old miser, wishes to marry his niece, Germaine, to the principal magistrate of the district, the Bailli. The arrangement does not suit Germaine, nor is she enamored of a young fisherman named Jean Grenicheux, who pretends that he has saved her from drowning on a certain occasion. To escape the power of old Gaspard, Germaine takes advantage of the privileges of the fair [a similar scene to that in the second scene of "Martha"] and becomes the servant of the marquis. Her example is followed by Grenicheux and Serpolette.

The second act is taken up with the supernatural visitors who have made the castle of Corneville so long an object of dread. Henri determines to find out the real character of these ghostly visitors, and discovers that it is all the work of the old miser, who has concealed his treasures in the chateau. The discovery drives Gaspard crazy, especially when he hears the bells of the chateau ringing for the first time since the flight of the old marquis.

Return to Ancestral Home.

The third act represents the grand fête given in honor of the return of Henri to his ancestral home. Serpolette arrives as a marchioness, as some papers found in the chateau indicate that she is the lost heiress. The miser, however, recovers his reason, and shows that Germaine is the true marchioness.

Evelyn Chapman of the Chicago Civic Opera ballet has been chosen for the solo dance in the ballet in the last act. She will be assisted by Misses Corrigan, Davis, Finholt, Nugent, Smith, Vaughn and Warren and Messrs. Abbott, Foley, Meroff and Strechneff. Assignments for the first week for the rôle of Germaine are as follows: Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights, Hilda Burke. Tuesday, Thursday nights and Saturday matinée, Lois Johnston.

Parent of All Passion Plays Visits Chicago

ow Freiburg Rite Came to American Stage.

By Charles Collins.

Passion Play in its relation to American theater. Its arrival in icago is a matter of widespread inest. This city has seen a few detional dramas of the type, but they re small scale, amateur productions. Freiburg people should have ecraft and the authentic touch, eredity and tradition count for thing.

Laughing Russian.

he story of Eugenie Leontovich, r of "Candle Light" and gayest of acting girls who have come out Russia to naturalize themselves re American audiences, is brief; back of it is an historical epic t fills libraries with its chronicles. ind her, in short, there is the s of Russia's decline and fall into munism.

This attractive young actress was of the myriad leaves driven pacally across the world by the Red ado of bolshevism. The French olution sent its emigrés into Engd, Germany, and the American nies; but the Russian revolution g its fugitives across the five conts and the seven seas. So in tovich you may read a footnote what was probably the greatest disl of peoples in recorded history. is among the small percentage of y ones.

fter the débâcle, when she found elf reduced from comfortable cirstances to desperate poverty and ed as an enemy of the state for reason at all, she made her way Paris. She had stage experience, she went into a little show called Revue Russe. She became its but that didn't mean much. The t of going hungry and shabby still sued her. An American impre noted her talent, however, and a ract for a Broadway musical show ght her to New York. It failed, the wolf was still at her door.

She asked the Shuberts for a job a chorus girl, an understudy or an tra woman"—anything to keep alive while she was learning Eng. She got it, and became a chorus l in the Number 3 company of lossom Time," playing one-night ds through the south. The next son, after she had become fluent English, she was given a leading t in another touring "Blossom e" company.

Then, because of her accent, which continental and therefore somet Gallic in suggestion, she was n the character of Mrs. Pepys [a chwoman born, if you remember immortal dairy] in "And So to " She made so much of an apntly tepid part that the Shuberts sformed her into a star over , after the piece opened in Chi. The drama called "Fires of th Spring" followed. Her rôle an impersonation of Sarah Bernt and she played it cleverly, but play was too faulty to carry her

This brings the fair Leontovich, proves that Russia can produce hing soubrettes as well as mortragediennes, up to "Candle ht" and her flourishing present. York playgoers know nothing ut her, but Chicago first-nighters that the asterisk over her dressdoor has been clearly earned. She spirited, merry, and winsome. There more laughter in Leontovich than a freight-car load of dismal comears.

ging "Blue Danube."

My colleague, Mr. Stevens, and I er about many aspects of the theain spite of the published theories Siegfried Wagener, play inspector the Sonntag Post. One of them is e score of "A Wonderful Night."

I said I heard bits of "The Blue ube Waltz" in it and Mr. Stevens d I didn't. I said I knew it didn't ing in the "Fledermaus" score, t that it was quoted in this protion. Mr. Stevens retorted that his for music was better than mine, se he can play the banjo and I n't sing, either in the bath tub or rain. I lunged back with, "Why is that people who attend symphony chestra concerts can't tell one melfrom another?" Mr. Stevens anged color and the subject.

As if to settle this acrimonious conversy, there comes to my desk the port of a mysterious researcher ose purpose in life just now is to that all matters relating to 'A Wonderful Night" are exploited in int. He, too, has heard strains of "The Blue Danube" in this piece, has been running its history to rth. He has been delving into libraries, ransacking the files, and askmusicians questions like an inring reporter.

CONFESSIONAL

DOROTHY SANDS AND SYLVIA FIELD.

Irish Dramatist on Faculties of Summer Schools

By Hugh Curran.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN.—The courses of theatrical instruction in American universities are to be strengthened this year by a series of lectures by Lennox Robinson, who in addition to being one of the leading authors of the Irish dramatic movement is a director and producer at the Abbey theater, London.

During the next four months Mr. Robinson will be touring the United States, but mainly he will be concerned with the drama classes in three universities. He has left Dublin and is not expected back at the Abbey until the reopening of the theater for the autumn season.

At the University of Michigan Mr. Robinson will give a series of lectures on the technical processes of play production, and will illustrate these lectures with practical work, producing some of his own plays. From Michigan he will journey to Amherst, and then to the University of Montana, at each of which there will be a program but slightly varied from that at Michigan.

Studied Under Barker.

Before he became director of the Abbey theater Mr. Robinson studied stagecraft and play production with Granville Barker, and he has worked with George Bernard Shaw and Barrie in the first productions of several of their plays. For many years he has been the producer at the Abbey theater.

Robinson's play, "The Round Table," has just been presented at the Gansevoort theater in New York under the direction of Prof. Somerville of New York university, with Margaret Wycherly in the part of Daisy Drennan. When the director of the drama school at Amherst read his "Ever the Twain" he cabled for permission to stage it immediately. This play deals with the doings of a little group of English and Irish artists on a visit to the United States to lecture, to act, and to sing. It will be interesting to see how American people receive a play which satirizes their desire for "culture" purveyed by Europeans.

"What is to happen at the Abbey while you are away?" Mr. Robinson was asked on the eve of his departure from Dublin.

New Plays Planned.

"O, Lady Gregory will be here, and Starkie will be back from America in a few weeks. Several new plays will be staged, the first of which will be George Shiels' comedy, 'The New Gossoon.' I think it is the best play Shiels has given us; it contrasts the older generation with the much discussed 'modern' boy and girl, and should be good entertainment. Then, there will be that unusual thing, an Irish play written by a Frenchman: a play about Ireland of a century ago by the vice consul at Dublin, who is known as a novelist under the name of André Mervil. There will be a new ballet by Dr. Larchet and Lady Gregory, based on a poem by Mrs. J. J. O'Neill, and Miss Teresa Deevy, whose 'The Reapers' showed much promise, will soon have a new play ready.

"In July it is proposed to stage a 'mystery' play [nothing medieval, but more in the school of Edgar Wallace] by Maj. Bryan Cooper. This play is to be called 'Let the Credit Go!' T. C. Murray, Rutherford Mayne, Brinsley MacNamara, and one or two of the older playwrights will have plays ready for production in the autumn season."

A Classic Hit.

Philadelphia's production of "Lysistrata" is a great hit there. As for the play's metropolitan future, it might be recorded that the Philadelphia premiere was attended by those two somewhat different producers, Theresa Helburn and J. J. Shubert. Miss Helburn's presence is explained by the fact that the Theater Guild has had the play on its schedule for some time. As for Mr. Shubert, he is said to be anxious to bring the present production to New York when it has concluded its Philadelphia engagement.

Passion Play

THE Freiburg Passion Play, given in English, will begin an engagement at the Civic Opera house tonight, under the auspices of charities. The company of 350 is headed by members of the Fassnacht family, which has been presenting the drama of the last seven days in the life of Christ in Freiburg, Germany, for several generations. The tradition of the Freiburg ritual traces back to the year 1264, and thus it antedates the more widely known Passion Play of Oberammergau by several centuries.

Georg Fassnacht Jr. will appear in the rôle of the Christus; Georg Fassnacht Sr., manager of the company, plays Judas Iscariot; Augusta Fassnacht is the Madonna, and Betty Schumann-Fassnacht represents Mary Magdalene. A chorus of 150 singers, recruited from the choirs of Chicago churches, will sing under the direction of Charles Demorest, organist of St. Paul's Episcopal church. The chorals were arranged by J. Henri Weber, assistant conductor of the Chicago Civic opera.

The Freiburg Passion Play has never been given outside of Germany, or in any other language except German, until this tour began. The leaders of the organization consented to appear in the United States only under the auspices of charity, with the stipulation that the entire net proceeds of the ticket sale should be used in philanthropic work. The Charlotte Cushman club and the Chicago Foot hospital will be among the beneficiaries of the engagement. On Sunday, May 11, there will be a special matinée sponsored by the German societies of the city, the proceeds of which will be sent to the German Red Cross.

Theater News.

"Berkeley Square" will end a successful run at the Lyceum theater, New York, May 24. Leslie Howard will go to California to make "Outward Bound" for the films, and after a vacation in England he will go on tour with "Berkeley Square" in the fall.

Le Gallienne as Juliet Is Winning Favor

By Burns Mantle.

the duel in which Romeo slays the fiery Tybalt.

This brings back the Capulets to lament and curse the death of their kinsman and brings on the prince to hear the story and pronounce sentence of banishment upon the flown Romeo.

Juliet's soliloquy to the night, beginning "Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds," has been cut. It only retarded the action, says Miss Le Gallienne. It includes, as you are not likely to remember, the pious prayer:

"Come, gentle night; come, loving black-browed night,
Give me Romeo; and when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night
And pay no worship to the garish sun."

Which always has seemed to me a trifle extreme on Juliet's part. If Romeo could have heard her suggest his being cut up as little stars, he might have definitely changed his mind and ruined the play.

Another scene put back into the third act is the fourth, which goes to show that Paris is getting worried because no progress is made so far as Juliet's answer to his proposal is concerned. And Paris is certainly entitled to worry.

Puts Back Two Scenes.

The second and fourth scenes of the fourth act, which are seldom played, are put back to show the progress that is being made toward the wedding with Paris; and the fifth scene, in which the unhappy girl is discovered dead, as they believe, by her distracted nurse and parents, is played up to the entrance of the musicians, at which point this actress tired of its wailing and cut it.

She has put in the scene between Friar Laurence and Friar John in the fifth act, which she finds is not often played, though I seem to remember it in most of the acting versions I have seen. It is that scene in which Friar John, having been sent to Mantua to warn Romeo that his Juliet is but asleep in the tomb, returns to report that he was unable to get the letter through. Its omission would certainly be missed by a generation not familiar with the play.

And, finally, this newest of the Juliets has replaced the ending of the play, in place of bringing the curtain down on Juliet's death and the lines:

"O, happy dagger!
This is thy sheath; there rust and let me die!"

she plays it to the end, with the prince and the Montagues, the Capulets, and the good Friar Laurence, which is, in fact, more important than it seems, probably because many of us have never seen it played.

"By thus acceding to the whims of stars as the star-crossed lovers," writes Mr. Sayler, "the producer cheats the playwright of the major message of his tragedy—that out of tragedy comes the reconciliation of the warring families; the purgation which all tragedy is supposed to achieve."

Miss Le Gallienne Is Impetuous.

The playing, as noted, is eager if not distinguished. Miss Le Gallienne is ardent beyond the expectations of her best friends, achieving a simulation of passion in the early scenes that all but topple her out of the balcony upon her pretty blonde head. Yes, she plays this Juliet as a chestnut blonde, and very pretty, too.

Her speech is measured and eloquent, and by adding a suggestion of such soul suffering as only actresses trained in the Russian and Ibsenic drama know, she intensifies Juliet's misery, yet without giving her too mature a cast.

Donald Cameron is the Romeo; earnest, but not inspired. A young man named Edward Bromberg dies well as Mercutio, but otherwise is a little sad. The veteran J. Sayre Crawley is the Friar Laurence and has helped with the staging, and Leonore Roberts is a hit as the nurse.

The scenery is modern, half sets against a blue velvet background. The balcony set is reversible. When it is turned around you see the stairway by which Juliet mounts to the balcony. I have always worried a little about the hidden ladder Juliet was forced to use; so this scene is a help. Aline Bernstein designed it.

Another Sex Play Appears.

There has not been much else this week. A comedy drama called "Virtue's Bed" restores the sentimental harlot to the drama and does it, surprisingly enough, rather well. Courtenay Savage wrote it.

This lady is one who was born of stern and rockbound parents in New England. Seeking life as a dancer in New York, she was shanghaied and sold into sin down Africa way.

Marrying a poor soldier out of pity, she finds herself, after his death, heir to much money and an honorable name. She goes to London, behaves herself a little better than any of her neighbors, establishes her respectability, etc., and then—the exposure.

Her fair-money friends quit her, of course, but she has the satisfaction of revealing them as so many hypocrites who in their private lives are little better than she was as a public wanton.

Save for the age of its Tanqueray theme, the piece is interesting and is doing well at bargain rates.

A melodrama that has been carefully builded on so many facts as have been brought out about the Rothstein murder mystery, and then even more carefully labeled "entirely fictitious," is called "Room 349." Mark Linder, the "Diamond Lil" author, wrote it. This play's principal interest is the presence in the cast of Inez Norton, Rothstein's common law wife, who went to court to protect her right to a part of the gambler's estate. The story, I assume, is largely hers. It seeks to prove that Rothstein was a quarrelsome but a generous racketeer; that he truly loved his Inez; that they were about to marry and get away from "all this," and that he was shot by a gunman from the fire escape and not by a card player in the game with him.

FLIRTATION SCENE

ARCHIE LEACH AND MARY McCOY.

"A WONDERFUL NIGHT," the operetta at the Grand Opera House, is founded upon the tradition that life in Vienna fifty years ago was frisky with flirtations and ardent with amours. Here is a camera view of Archie Leach, as an incorrigible philanderer in a quiet evening at home with Mary McCoy, the soubrette housemaid.

Hassard Short Plans Revues; News of Stage

HASSARD SHORT, recently returned to New York from Hollywood movie lots, announces that he will reënter the "legitimate" production field shortly, sponsoring an intimate revue and a comedy. Mr. Short directed the Music Box Revue and was associated with Sam H. Harris in the production of "Cradle Snatchers." His new revue, he declares, will feature two motion picture stars, and the comedy will be by Russell Medcraft, co-author of "Cradle Snatchers."

They are about to put on another "Greenwich Village Follies" in New York, and that typical village product, James Barton, will be the chief comic. Mr. Barton has been a stranger to the musical comedy stage for a number of seasons, although vaudeville has known him both well and favorably. He is one of the more temperamental stars and a cluster of anecdotes has sprung up around him. The old firm of Jones & Green will put on the "Village" show, although the last one was done by the Shuberts.

The word from Europe is that William Bolitha is ill and accordingly the London production of his play has been indefinitely deferred. In the circumstances it has been turned over to Maurice Browne, the newly risen giant among London producers, and it will be launched in London in the fall with its leading rôle played by Colin Clice, who was London's Captain Stanhope in "Journey's End." So far as is known the plans still call for a New York production next season.

Mr. Wilfred's Clavilux will figure in the new "Vanities." . . . Ruth Draper will end her New York season tonight. . . . "Lady Clara" will call it a not so long engagement at the Booth, New York, this week, and "Nancy's Private Affair" will leave Broadway next Saturday, headed for Chicago.

Messrs. Connolly and Swanstrom will produce "Princess Charming" in the early fall whether or not Evelyn Laye appears in it. Those who saw it in London a few seasons ago report that it was extremely English and that it will need the revision that the American producers are certain to give it.

Chic Sale's "So This Is Paris!" does not seem to be intended for New York just at present. It will go to Chicago next. Incidentally New York is annoyed because it isn't going to see Chicago's "Nina Rosa" until next season. When finally it does turn up on Broadway, Ethelind Terry will have the prima donna part.

The play called "A Graceful Generation" will be tested in stock out in Jamaica, N. Y., soon. It's author is Knowles Entrikin, who used to fool with Little Theaters and things like that in Chicago and elsewhere, and it has to do with the old Mississippi river days. The play is being tried out on behalf of the Messrs. Brady and Wiman.

"Maid in France," a comedy by Jack Larric, will be produced in New York in May, according to Laura D. Wilck. Another play due to open on Broadway in May, under the management of Lionel A. and Jack Hyman, is "Let and Sublet," by Martha Stanley.

Paul Streger, who has been inactive as a producer since last season, has acquired for fall production a comedy called "Ann," by Frank Mitchell Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnson. Mr. Dazey wrote "Peter Weston," in which the late Frank Keenan appeared, and is co-author with Jim Tully of "Black Boy."

◆

"Rome Haul," Walter D. Edmond's novel, has been dramatized by Frank B. Elser. It is announced for fall production by Bela Blau, Inc.

Shaw's "The Apple Cart" will end its run at the Alvin theater, New York, this week. It will go on tour next season with Tom Powers, Claude Rains, and Violet Kemble Cooper still in its cast.

B'way Openings

TWO new plays are all that the New York stage can stir up this week for the excitement of the first-nighters. Here is the Manhattan schedule:

"Lost Sheep"—Tomorrow night at the Selwyn theater. This is a comedy by Belford Forrest, who does not seem to have figured in the theater before, and one of its producers is Jack Donahue, of "Sons of Guns," who obviously cannot be present at the premiere. The chief players will be Cecilia Loftus, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Rex O'Malley, Harry McNaughton, Hugh Buckler, and A. P. Kaye.

"Ada Beats the Drum"—Thursday night at the John Golden theater. In this piece Mary Boland will come back to New York after an absence that seems to have stretched over several seasons. The play, originally the work of John Kirkpatrick, has been revised by Geoffrey Kerr. The players, besides Miss Boland, will include Nydia Westman, George Barbier, and Edgar Stehli.

Miscellaneous events:

N. V. A. benefit—Tonight at the Metropolitan Opera house. Part of a drive by the National Variety Artists to raise money for stricken and destitute actors.

"Stepping Sisters"—Will be transferred from the Waldorf theater to the Royale tomorrow.

Civic Repertory program—Tomorrow and Friday nights and Thursday afternoon, "Romeo and Juliet"; Tuesday and Saturday nights, "The Sea Gull"; Wednesday night, "The Women Have Their Way"; Thursday night, "The Living Corpse"; Saturday afternoon, "Peter Pan."

Theater Guild

THE Theater Guild has signed Franchot Tone to be a member of its acting company. Mr. Tone has acted, for a large part of the current season, with Guild companies. He was with Katherine Cornell in "The Age of Innocence" and earlier this season in "Cross Roads." From that he went into the production of "Red Rust," made by the Theater Guild studio. He later succeeded Douglass Montgomery in "Meteor." At present he is playing in "Hotel Universe."

"Wings Over Europe," the Robert Nichols-Maurice Browne play which the Theater Guild produced last season, has recently been staged in Frankfort, Germany, and achieved a success. The Frankfort production will be followed by others in Europe. Maurice Browne will produce it himself in England some time during the coming season.

Dr. Edmond Pauker, acting for the Georg Martun Verlag of Vienna, has purchased the central European rights to Philip Barry's new play "Hotel Universe," recently staged by the Theater Guild. The play will be produced soon in several mid-European cities.

A group of young players who have been connected with the Theater Guild are assembling material and a cast for a new edition of "Garrick Gaieties." Philip Loeb, Sterling Holloway, and Hildegarde Halliday of the previous "Garrick Gaieties" are interested in the new edition.

The Guild's two "Strange Interludes" troupes will be within commuting distance of each other a week hence. Judith Anderson and her colleagues will be seen in Newark, while Elisabeth Risdon's company will be playing in Brooklyn. Over in Brooklyn they would like to start the play at 6 o'clock, instead of 5:30, presumably because it takes quite a while to get to Brooklyn even if you live there, but it is doubtful if the Guild will agree to so heretical a change.

"The Garrick Gaieties" and "The Grand Street Follies" seem to be combining into one entertainment—anyhow Albert Carroll will be in the new "Garrick Gaities." The new "Gaities" has not begun as an official Theater Guild production, but it is likely to be one before it is all over. The show will be ready, by the way, in another three weeks. It will go into a Theater Guild house in New York. There will be a general shifting of Guild plays along about that time.

[To the dramatic editor:]

Chicago, April 29.—Speaking of "The Time, the Place, and the Girl" in a recent issue of THE TRIBUNE, you stated: "If it ever got to New York (which is doubtful), you may be sure that it was sneered at vigorously as a manifestation of the inferior culture of the tribes west of the Alleghenies."

I believe if you will examine the records you will find that "The Time, the Place, and the Girl" played at Daly's theater, New York, for four weeks or more. Otto Henkel was agent and Charles Goettler, Trixie Friganza's ex-husband, was manager. It then toured New England.

Chicago, April 28.—For fifteen years the Players' club of the Chicago Hebrew institute, directed by Lester Alden, was busy putting on one act, two act and three act plays, and although no prizes were ever won by them it has been the means of building character and also extending the knowledge of the theater and its cultural associations. Mr. Alden left the Players' club some years ago to return to the stage. His work is being carried on at the Jewish People's institute by Charles Freeman, formerly a pupil of Mr. Alden's. In order that the associations formed under the tutelage of Mr. Alden be kept together, an alumni was formed a few months ago. One of its purposes was to assist Mr. Freeman in furthering the work and with this in mind the alumni will present the play "Happy Go Lucky" at the Jewish People's institute Sunday.

Our honorary membership includes Fritz Leiber, Burns Mantle, Grant Mitchell, William Hodge, Grace George, Constance Collier, Francine Larrimore, Charlotte Granville, and Katharine Cornell.

Each active member must attend six matinées a year. We meet at the Palmer house for matinée breakfast on the first Wednesday of the month, where we entertain our friends from the theaters. Civic Theater Cause Finds Another Ally

THE staging of Aristophanes' "Lysistrata" by the Philadelphia Theater association marks the genesis of an art theater in that city. The idea was fostered by the late Dr. Horace Howard Furness Jr., an outstanding Shakespearean scholar and a patron of the theater.

"Lysistrata" was supervised in every detail by Dr. Furness before his sudden death. Norman Bel-Geddes was chosen as stage director and scenic artist. Leo Ornstein, the pianist, composer and musical authority, was commissioned to compose the overture and incidental music. The adaptation of the classic Greek comedy was made by Gilbert Seldes, writer and dramatic critic.

"Lysistrata" had its premiere at the Walnut Street theater of Philadelphia last Monday night. Fay Bainter has the title rôle. Other well known players in the cast are Ernest Truex, Miriam Hopkins, Hortense Alden, Hope Emerson, Albert Von Dekker, Sydney Greenstreet, and Eric Dressler.

The production may be sent to New York after the Philadelphia run.

Schumann-Heink in Concert.

What was called "one of the best song recitals of the season" by Gotham's eminent musical critics was given by Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink a few days ago at Town hall. The contralto, who will be 69 years of age in two months, billed her recital as "intimate" and her "first and only in New York this season." The intimate note, however, was only preserved in so far as the hall itself was concerned, for, for the first time this year, the stage of Town hall was filled with chairs to accommodate just a few more of those who besieged the box office.

"Lascia Ch'io Pianga" from Handel's "Rinaldo," Schubert's "Du Bist die Ruh," "Wohn," "Die Allmacht," Beethoven's "Ich Liebe Dich," Liszt's "Es Muss Ein Wunderbares Sein," Wagner's "Träume," and Hildach's "Im Lenz" were the first offerings.

The progress was then broken by a violin solo and various speeches complimentary to Mme. Schumann-Heink, and concluded with numbers by Rose, Mary Turner, Salter, Raisbach, and Delibes.

Another opera singer of former days—Mme. Alda, just resigned from the Metropolitan ranks, it will be recalled—entertained a concert audience during the week. This was on the occasion of a morning recital by the Harlem Philharmonic society at the Hotel Astor and was Mme. Frances Alda's first appearance here since her retirement.

She sang Mimi's opening aria from "Bohême," a group of three songs, and with Richard Bonelli a duet from Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

French Anglers Mourn Presence of Alpine Dams

GRENOBLE, France.—(AP)—The anglers of France are up in arms against the march of progress, in the form of water power development in the Alps, which they say is death to the trout.

All down the valleys of the Romanche and Drac rivers, from the foothills of the Alps to Grenoble, there are water power installations which furnish the energy for electric metallurgical and electrical chemical establishments, the first of which frightens the trout and the second of which pours out waste that kills him.

Economic Progress Rules.

But sport must give way to economic progress, say the people of Grenoble, and the water power development is going on at a formidable rate.

Walter E. Edge, the American ambassador, was here recently and was shown the most recent and the most important scheme for harnessing the water power of the Alps, at Chambon. This village of the valley of the Romanche is destined to disappear within two years under 240 feet of water.

A storage dam 390 feet high is being built at Chambon to regulate the flow to the various power plants further along the valley and give them a steady supply the year round.

Will Transfer Village.

This dam, which will cost $2,400,000, will increase the power of the installations in the valley by 70,000,000 kilowatt hours annually. It is being built by a mixed company of private capitalists and public departments. It will be finished in 1932.

The village of Chambon and its 200 inhabitants will be transferred to a higher point, which will cost something more. But the enterprise will be profitable just the same, since it will enable glove factories further down stream to work full time, and will permit the establishment of new chemical and metellurgical works.

Thus it will increase immensely the economic activity and wealth of the region, though it will intensify the anguish of the trout fishermen.

Recruits' Defects Alarm Portuguese

LISBON.—(AP)—Portuguese recruits drafted for service in 1929 gave staggering evidence of their physical inferiority.

All told, 8,062 conscripts were found to have curvature of the spine, 3,778 were unequally developed, 24,525 showed signs of degeneracy, 8,020 were undersized, and 35,993 were afflicted with bronchial troubles. Nearly all these cases were rejected.

Public buildings were plastered with bills revealing these startling facts and exhorting the new generation to take plenty of exercise in the open air.

PRINCE DANILO

DONALD BRIAN.

NEARLY twenty-five years have passed since Donald Brian made his reputation in "The Merry Widow," but the revival of this world-famous operetta at the Majestic theater proves that he hasn't aged in the meantime. He is still a Danilo capable of waltzing the tantalizing Sonia off her feet. This is an up-to-date picture of Mr. Brian laughing at the theory that they never come back.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

"WATERLOO BRIDGE" was Robert Sherwood's offering last season and the devotees of that gay and gaudy piece, "The Road to Rome," and of that ironic whimsy, "The Queen's Husband," were a little baffled to encounter a play whose chief characteristic was a sentiment and, at times, a sentimentality which the statisticians might say was after the mode of the 1930 gowns. And they would not be so far wrong. The breezy, easy, casual short skirts and flying hair of the period that produced "The Road to Rome" with its nice naughtiness gave way, more quickly in Mr. Sherwood's case, perhaps, than in the case of other dramatists, to the so-called "feminine" draperies and lolleries.

ROBT. E. SHERWOOD

We are still, however, interested in what the jazz period frankly called "tarts" in our literature, if they are sentimentalized enough and romanticized. Such a one is the heroine of "Waterloo Bridge." But the hero is the most important character, a sweet, goofy, tender, bemazed he-man of a boy, a soldier on leave for the first time, who mistakes the social standing of the girl whom he meets on Waterloo bridge. That boy, as played by Glenn Hunter, was one of the events of the theatrical season in New York. It was a fine piece of acting and it raised a text none too brilliant almost to the heights.

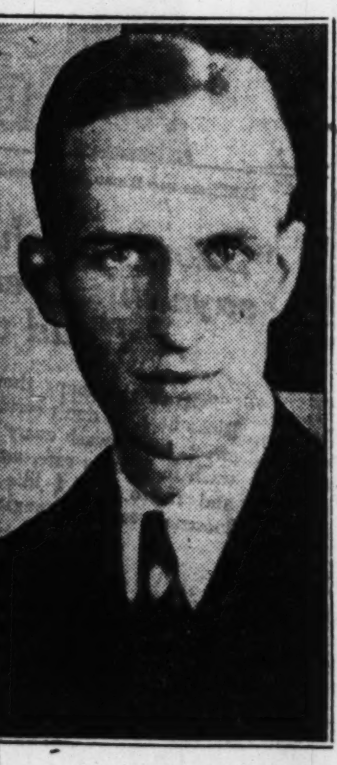
To the residents of the hinterland "Waterloo Bridge" comes as text without any glamours of interpretation, and it is in reading an interesting, an attractive, but in no wise a soul stirring drama. It has moments of tenderness and of pathos, but others of bathos. Its really touching sentiments are sometimes followed by sentimentalities. But it has charm, and if only for the picture of Roy it is a library piece. It is published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

There is, naturally, much discussion about how much Roark Bradford's "Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun" suggested Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures." The programs read, "The Green Pastures," by Marc Connelly, suggested by Roark Bradford's, etc. There are the Bradford enthusiasts who point, among other things, to the incident of Noah and his attempts to cache two "kags of likker" on the ark. There are probably statisticians somewhere who have compared the two and have counted the words that grew originally in Mr. Bradford's garden.

There are Connelly enthusiasts who proclaim loudly that, as Jonathan Daniels says, "Mr. Connelly has added imagination and feeling to Mr. Bradford's keen surface observation of the ludicrous, with the result that he has made literature out of a very superior kind of vaudeville." To our mind, neither side has all of the right. Roark Bradford's work has in it much pathos, much tenderness, much of the deep feeling of "The Green Pastures." It has not, in any place, either in his short stories (which are not recordings like "Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun" and "Ol' King David an' the Philistine Boys," but creative works of art) any spiritual concept like God's having to suffer, too, as he does at the end of "The Green Pastures."

But the deep core of religion in the lives of the race is as inherent in Mr. Bradford as Mr. Connelly. It doesn't really matter who is most responsible for "The Green Pastures." It is a superb work of art in its own right. Mr. Bradford refused to go to New York for the opening, which may be interpreted as one wishes. He has also modestly refused to accept any of the kudos. On the other hand, "The Green Pastures" is not considered eligible for the Pulitzer prize, as it is looked upon as a dramatization of previously published material.

"STOCK" STAR



JOHN WILLARDE.

Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" will be given by the company at the Kedzie theater this week, with its dinner intermission, its double stream of dialogue, and all its other peculiarities. This is an unusual undertaking for a neighborhood stock company, and John Willarde, the leading man, is wearing the serious expression of a Theater Guild actor.

Make Last Search for Men Missing from World War

LONDON.—(AP)—One last appeal is to be made to the allied governments to locate some of the army of missing men who disappeared between 1914 and 1918.

The Prisoners of War Support association is asking veterans of the various countries to organize campaigns of search to see if the fate of such prisoners of war as have not returned to their homes can be determined.

Nearly 48,000 men are missed by France and 8,000 by Great Britain. Italy, by energetic search, has traced all but 5,000 of the soldiers who did not return. The figures for Russia and the split up Austro-Hungarian empire are not known, but a large registered figure is shown by Germany, where relatives are still waiting for 24,000 men.

German official circles assume that many prisoners of war sent to Siberia first postponed travel through Russia during the hectic days of revolution and then abandoned intention to return.

Many of these men married under assumed names and cannot return because of possible bigamy charges.

Numerous prisoners were shot trying to escape from war time prison compounds and as they had removed all identification marks, there is no blame attached to any government for failure to record these deaths.

Finally there are the tragic cases of men who never came back because hardships destroyed their memories.

Slams the Fair Sex.

"To say that Miss Dietrich is beautiful is to say what is self-evident," said Von Sternburg. "While directing Miss Dietrich in her film in Germany I for the first time felt my inefficiency as a director, because I felt I could not get on to the screen half the talent and charm of Miss Dietrich. In addition to her beauty and talent, Miss Dietrich has that rare thing in woman—brain."

One could almost say that from that day on Mr. Von Sternburg was a marked man, as the magazines and film columns are written largely by women in Hollywood. Of course, many of these women have a large sense of humor and laughed just as heartily as the men when Von Sternburg had his say.

Polly Moran Wise-Cracks.

Polly Moran, the bane of Bill Haines' life, for he says he always is thinking of Polly when he is with other women, was pensively devouring her third helping of pie at the M-G-M studio restaurant, a blue bow atop her golden curls and a tidy apron concealing her figure. Everybody was discussing the recent murder sensation, the dual deaths of Mrs. Guy Bates Post and Mrs. Doris Palmer at nearby Laguna Beach.

"When I am found shot," said Polly, wiping the whipped cream carefully out of the corners of her eyes and taking cognizance of the conversation, "I intend to see that it will be with some man."

The enormous local success of Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front," which had its premiere at the Carthay Circle this week, is being discussed on all sides. Everything that has been said has been laudatory.

The film preserves the stark realism of the book; it is not entertainment any more than the book was, but it is the most sincere anti-war message yet delivered to the public.

Brazilians Prefer Modern American Goods to British

SAO PAULO, Brazil.—(AP)—British business men here are alarmed that imports of American goods through the port of Santos in the last calendar year were twice those of British goods.

With politics out of the way, the coffee situation clearing, and negotiations for a foreign loan going forward steadily, commercial houses here believe that business will pick up considerably in the next six months.

British imports are steadily losing ground to American articles, while Germany is making a strong bid to wrest even second place from the English, and the monthly journal of the British chamber of commerce has taken a pessimistic view of the situation.

"Th phenomenal increase in the number of motor car and accessories entering the port during the first nine months of the year will have helped to increase the value of imported American goods," says this journal. "On the other hand, as we have had occasion to point out in the past, it is wrong to suppose that the predominant position now held by America is due to the exceptionally large imports of half a dozen articles. The unpalatable fact is that the American manufacturer is catering for modern demands more than the British manufacturer."

College Nears Completion.

SOFIA, Bulgaria.—(AP)—Work is proceeding rapidly on the American college at Simeonovo, about six miles from this capital. Buildings for the girls are already in use and those for the boys are far advanced. The curriculum is a combination of studies in Bulgarian high schools and American junior colleges.

HEADLINER

IRENE FRANKLIN.

The program of vaudeville at the Palace theater this week has Irene Franklin, the singing comedienne, as its star. She has held high rank as an entertainer for years; in fact, she could be called one of the best known redheads in the "show business." She writes her own lyrics, and brings an entirely new program for this engagement.

PROMISING GIRL

FRANCES NEVINS.

ONCE in a while, in "The Little Show," the revue at the Selwyn, a chorus girl steps out of the ranks to lead a number and so becomes a principal. Among these prima donnas of the future is a smiling lass named Frances Nevins, who is the captain of the Dutch ballad called "Hut in Hoboken." Everyone who has seen "The Little Show" remembers her.

VOICE OF THE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Her Reasons Why.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am voting for Joan Crawford for queen because I think she has "It." I like her acting and I think she is sweet.

I am voting for Gary Cooper for king because there is something fascinating about him. I don't know what it is, but there is something about him I like. He is a cowboy and I have always wanted to go out west and live on a ranch and be a cow girl.

I hope my reasons are sufficient.

Yours truly,

SYLVIA LEVIN.

[Editor's note: Indeed they are!].

Likes Ramon Navarro.

Dear Mae: Ramon Novarro is the most outstanding in moviedom. His stage personality and supreme dramatic qualities, combined with nonchalantly typical masculine attributes, as symbolized in Mars and Apollo, assure him predominance above others.

With my highest respects.

JOSEPH C. KRAUS.

Editor's note: German, is the answer to your question, not printed here. Right?

From Student's Viewpoint.

Dear Miss Tinée: I write you giving a viewpoint of the movies from a different angle than one I have ever seen in your column. I am a student at the University of Michigan. The lighter forms of amusement appeal to us. Humor or sex appeal are in great demand at Ann Arbor, and "Baron" Butterfield, the local cinema magnate, does his best to provide us with a maximum of both. It's trash, but I'm afraid we like it.

However, such fine movies as "The Lady Lies," "Disraeli," and "This Thing Called Love" all are enthusiastically supported. Arliss and Chatterton certainly have set a high standard for the Gilberts and Swansons to shoot at—artists, both of them—the former two, I mean.

It has been said that the more you are educated the longer it takes you to say something. It certainly has taken me long enough to get down to the fact that I wished to vote for Nancy Carroll and Jack Oakie. I'd better stop right now or I'll put in Arliss and Chatterton. Incidentally, all four are of the "post-talkie" era.

One more crack. I think most of the actresses of Hollywood are suffering from acute cases of inflated ego. With the exception of a bare half dozen (Chatterton, Colbert, Carroll, Zazu Pitts, Marjorie White—well, who's the other one?) the whole bunch of them are strutting clothes-horses with less brains than the average movie fan. We're morons, I guess.

Hoping that I haven't taken too much of your time and that you agree with me, privately, even, if you don't dare say so publicly, I remain one of your "regulars,"

EDWARD J. MCCORMICK.

P. S.—Who says that Janet Gaynor or Charles Farrell can sing—or, for that matter, that the silent, shuffling Swede, Greta Garbo, can act?

Ruth and Richard.

Dear Mae: You certainly are the most persistent person. Every morning I buy the "Trib." and every morning you are there, asking for votes. My conscience has been bothering me, so here is mine, along with a note.

Ruth Chatterton is my pick for queen. We pick our favorites from folk we secretly would like to be a replica of. She can act, and is cast in pictures so true to life. A pretty face does not attract me half as much as a clever woman. And Ruth appeals to my sense of attractiveness.

Richard Barthlemess is my pick for king. He does not appear overzealous. Also, his acting is always so appealing. Not being too good looking he fits in most any rôle they give him. His pictures, also, are true to life. That is the only reason I pay money to see movies. I like the human side of life.

At last! Success! My conscience is clear.

EVE SMITH.

Editor's note: Now, you SEE! It pays persistent for to be!

Obeying the Urge.

My dear Mae Tinée: Seems that I have the "urge" to write you. I have often wondered what kind of people waste their time writing to a movie critic and now I know. It is just plain nuts like myself. I am not what is generally known as a rabid movie fan, but I do enjoy a really good picture and lately we have so few fine pictures.

Conrad Nagel is, I think, one of the best bets in the talking pictures. His voice seems to be just about the right quality for the "mike" to reproduce pleasantly. He was good in "Glorious Betsy." But it is not good actors and actresses that movies need, but good stories. Some of the stories they cast (and miscast) some of our best actors and actresses in are enough to disgust any one.

Now, as to the vote for the queen: I think (as if it matters what I think) that Greta Garbo should wear that crown, since hearing her voice. What is it about that woman that grips a person so? She certainly isn't a raving beauty, but she certainly can act and has just a lot of "it."

The two votes I am enclosing are my own and my husband's. He insisted on voting for his favorite, Ford Sterling, although I told him any one could guess his age by that, as Sterling is such an old timer.

Very sincerely yours,

DORIS EGGERT.

Editor's Note: Glad you got the urge. (I like Ford Sterling, too.)

VARIETY REPORTS THUS from Schenectady, N. Y.:

"Every morning at Proctor's local theater, General Electric engineers are experimenting with Television. At present a screen 7 x 7 feet is being used, with a screen 12 x 12 preparing to follow.

"Theater's stage hands observing the tests want to join the projection machine operators' union, fearing their stage services will not be required at some time in the future. They say that from what has been seen so far it won't be long, maybe, before a 12 act program taken in New York may be Televisioned to 2,000 or more theaters."

(It won't be long now!)

"Oil" Whisper Throws Germans Into Excitement

Say Output Will Rival America's.

HANOVER, Germany.—(AP)—"Oil!" Some one whispered the magic syllable and threw northwestern Germany into a fever of discussion about petroleum and the chances of finding new pools under German soil.

Word that an American company had acquired concessions or leases on 1,000,000 acres in Oldenburg, Mecklenburg, Hanover, Brunswick, and Schleswig-Holstein was what started the excitement. As a result many Germans have learned for the first time that Germans have been dipping or pumping oil out of the ground for 400 years. The quantity produced, however, has been negligible compared with the flood poured into the world market by American and Mexican wells. The entire German output last year amounted to only 100,000 tons (about 750,000 barrels), worth in hard cash about 1 per cent of the annual oil production of California and supplying only 5 per cent of Germany's own oil needs.

Geologists on Scene.

But now come geologists from America with the theory that northwestern Germany is one of the richest potential oil fields in the world, and that with American deep drilling methods the German production could be made to rival that of California or Texas.

That is strong language, and the reaction in some German quarters has been loud laughter. In others, however, the possibility of tremendous increase in the country's oil output is conceded and the government is assailed for allowing Americans to crowd in instead of helping inadequately financed German companies to carry on the necessary exploratory drilling. This, however, is by no means the generally accepted view. There are plenty of observers who predict that the venturesome Americans will have no better luck than their German predecessors. If they have more money to spend, it will take a little longer to sink it. Others object to all this new enthusiasm from abroad.

"Northwestern Germany has had enough shortlived oil booms," they assert. "Too many people have lost their savings in ill fated oil ventures. Why stir up another period of speculation destined to end in the same old way? If Germans haven't been able to turn the trick, how do these Americans hope to do it?"

Some Progress Made.

The answer of "these Americans" is that Germany's oil industry has been almost strangled by lack of capital, lack of up to date drilling methods and equipment, and a general unwillingness to risk time, money and technical brains on oil. In other words, oil has been the industrial orphan of Germany for many years; while in America it has been alternately and sometimes simultaneously the favorite son and spoiled child.

Even in the face of its handicaps, however, the German industry has made a little progress. Back in the seventeenth century the petroleum "industry" was carried on by villagers who collected the greasy scum off a pond near Wietze, northeast of Hanover, and sold it as axle grease. It was not until about 75 years ago that attempts were made to bore for oil, and not until 1903 that it was found in commercial quantities. In 1913 the annual production, exclusive of Alsace-Lorraine, was 71,000 tons; last year it reached 100,000 tons for the first time.

The wells from which this oil is pumped lie principally in Wietze, enhagen and Oberg; the two former being northeast of Hanover and the latter a few miles west of Brunswick. The wells average only 1,000 to 1,500 feet in depth, and the derricks are old style tripods, scattered and contrasting strongly with the forests of steel towers that mark bonanza fields in America.

Solution Waits on Time.

According to geologists of the North European Oil company, the American concern whose leasing activity caused all the excitement here, the existing German wells are tapping only four of the 56 salt domes in northwestern Germany. "Is it reasonable to suppose," they ask, "that these four are the only domes worth exploring?"

The question will be answered one way or another in a year or two. The Americans have begun drilling at ttdorf, near Hamburg and are preparing to drill at Hordorf, near Brunswick. Chester Naramore, president of the concern, has been supervising operations on this side for several months.

GOT HER MAN?

Fannie Brice is the lady wearing the Al Jolson smile. She's on the screen of the United Artists' theater in "Be Yourself."

"UNCLE DUDLEY"

THOMAS W. ROSS

A VETERAN of many long Chicago runs is Thomas W. Ross, who plays the title role of "Your Uncle Dudley," at the Playhouse. Back in the Mauve Decade, when he was a lad, he thrived in a race-track melodrama called "Checkers." Later he came along in "The New Henrietta," "The Fortune Hunter," and many another easily remembered show. The marvel of it is that he still looks fairly young.

My Best Joke

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Tribune.

Reasoning It Out.

Installment Collector: See here, you're several installments behind on your piano.

Purchaser: Well, the company advertises, "Pay as You Play."

Collector: What's that got to do with it?

Purchaser: I play quite poorly.

R. L.

Misunderstood.

"Why do you keep lions at the telephone office?"

"Why do you ask that question, Mary?"

"Well, when I call up my daddy sometimes the telephone girl says, 'The lion is busy'." F. D.

An Exception.

The teacher of a grammar class explained the following, "Words ending in 'ous' mean full, as joyous means full of joy. Vigorous means full of vigor. Now will some one give me another example?"

Little Jimmy raised his hand, "Pious," he answered. S. C. H.

A Tactful Answer.

"Do you think I'm such a bad golf player, Ephriam?" asked an inexperienced golfer of his colored caddy.

"Well, sah, ah wouldn't say dat, sah, but ah've suhtainly seen places on dese heah links today dat ah've nebbah seen befo'," was Ephriam's observation. M. A.

Conveying the Information.

Professor—I say, your tubular air container has lost its rotundity.

Motorist—I don't quite——

Professor—The cylindrical apparatus which supports your vehicle is no longer inflated.

Motorist—But——

Professor—The elastic fabric surrounding the circular frame whose successive revolutions bear you onward in space has not retained its pristine roundness.

Small boy—Hey, mister! You got a flat tire.

D. J.

The Reason Why.

Summer boarder: "Why is that pig always trying to get in my room; has he taken a fancy to me?"

Second summer boarder [cautiously]: "It's his room during the winter.

M. D. J.

Had Other Plans.

Teacher, to the class: "Which of you children would like to go to heaven today?"

All the pupils raised their hands except Johnny.

Teacher: "Well Johnny, don't you wan't to go to heaven?"

Johnny: "My mother told me to come right home after school." L. M.

Settled That Matter.

Rastus had just had an airplane ride. As he was climbing out of the plane he turned to the pilot and said:

"Thanks, suh, fo' the two rides."

"Two rides?" asked the pilot. "What do you mean—two rides?"

"Mah fust one and mah last one," Rastus replied.

Sell Antiques to Evade Swedish Law

STOCKHOLM.—(AP)—Fearing legislation against the export of Swedish antiques, owners of many private art collections are selling them off to foreign buyers.

Herman Rasch, a widely known collector, is going to the continent to arrange for the sale of a collection valued at $670,000. Mr. Rasch recently sold a painting by Bruno Liljefors, famous Swedish animal painter, to the Brooklyn museum.

Another large Swedish picture collection will be offered for sale at a Berlin art gallery by Birger Svenonius, Stockholm lawyer.

INSCRUTABLE

John Boles will, it is announced, appear in person this week at the Woods theater, which is showing his latest starring altalker, "Captain of the Guards." (Looks here as if he knew something YOU'D like to know—only not for the world would he tell you.)

Buy 6,000 Cherry Trees.

NANKING.—(AP)—The Chinese nationalist government has purchased 6,000 Japanese cherry trees to plant around the tomb of Sun Yat-Sen in an arrangement similar to that of the cherry trees around the tidal basin in Washington.

Brace Crumbling Walls of Venetian Treasure House

VENICE.—(AP)—Alarming cracks in the façade of the Ca' d'Oro, one of the beautiful palaces facing the Grand canal, warned city authorities that immediate steps must be taken to prevent the exquisite structure from crumbling.

The foundation has been surrounded by a cofferdam, leaving the piles on which the palace is built uncovered.

Engineers say the weakening of the Ca' d'Oro was discovered just in time. To have waited longer would have doomed the gem of the fifteenth century.

The repairs will occupy several months, but will not prevent tourists from seeing the treasures within the palace. These include the "Venus" of Titian, the "San Sebastian" of Mantegna, and the "Portrait of a Gentleman," by Van Dyck. Then there are precious Tuscan primitives, Flemish tapestries, and Turkish and Persian carpets.

IN A CROSS ROADS PUZZLE

LILA LEE and Edythe Chapman are featured in "Double Cross Roads," which you are permitted to see at the Monroe theater this week. The picture is an all-talking melodrama—and this is a scene from it.

MORE VOICE OF THE FAN

Calls Film Miscast.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have read with interest "Culturia's" letter and I agree with her. "Sunnyside Up" should never have been intended for Janet Gaynor or Charles Farrell. Both of them have no singing voices; they would never make hits as musical comedy stars.

I liked the "City Girl" immensely, but I was disappointed because it was so short. Did the censors order it cut? I can't see why. Mary Duncan and Charles Farrell were great. Direction, acting and photography couldn't be beat.

If the producers keep on miscasting the players as they did in "Sunnyside Up," we'll probably see Greta Garbo, Warner Baxter, and Ronald Colman singing and dancing in musical comedies.

Why don't they start filming something that's true to life? We're all fed up on these airplane, jazz, wild party, murder case, and society pictures. Also, it seems that no talking picture can me complete without having something "smutty" included.

I heard Charley Chaplin was not interested in talkies. If "A Woman of Paris" was filmed as a talkie, it should go over big.

Yours truly,
PALMA LENARE.

An Error Somewhere.

Dear Miss Tinée: I wonder why you allow United Artists theater to say on the front of their theater "Four stars in a four star picture" when you only gave it three stars.

This is not right, and misleads the public. Can't you put a stop to it?

A READER.

Editor's note: When in doubt, give us a ring. [Telephone ring.] Maybe the management counted wrong.

Short 'n Snappy.

Dear Miss Tinée: Why do I like Miss Gaynor and Mr. Farrell? Foolish question. 'Cause I just saw "Sunny Side Up," and what's more, remained for the second showing [I'm not Scotch either, ha, ha], and if there was a third the chances are I'd still be there. You said short 'en snappy so, so long.

MARIE V. SHANAHAN.

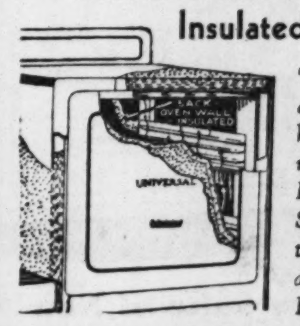
How Universal Oven is Insulated



The sides, back, top and door of oven are heavily insulated with highest grade Filtered RockWool. Super-metal containers eliminate any possibility of the RockWool shifting.

New Universal Insulation reduces exterior oven heat 45 per cent —Saves oven gas

Last summer, when you lighted the oven, the kitchen temperature used to climb to an unbearable point. Do you remember?

Of course you do. Streams of perspiration trickled down your face and back. Your face became flushed. And your heart pounded under the torturing heat.

And no wonder! The average outside temperature of your oven at that time was 185 degrees. Think of what that means! Only on the coldest days is the water in your radiators heated to 185 degrees.

Universal has perfected a new Insulated Oven which eliminates this waste and suffering. The insulation keeps the heat inside the oven where it belongs.

Tests made with an inside oven temperature of 350 degrees prove the average outside temperature of a Universal Insulated Oven to be only 101.25 degrees. Compare this with the average outside temperature of 185 degrees for your old-fashioned, uninsulated oven.

The Universal Insulated Oven also saves oven gas. Reduces the time needed to heat the oven. Maintains a much more uniform temperature in all parts of the oven. And retains the heat two and a half times longer.

Secure one of these new Insulated Universal Ranges and enjoy a cooler kitchen this summer.

Universal In-a-Drawer Broiler makes healthful broiling amazingly easy
Pulls in and out like a drawer

Another wonderful improvement of the Universal Insulated Gas Range is its patented In-a-Drawer Broiler.

This new feature makes the preparation of savory, nourishing broiled foods easier and safer than frying.

The In-a-Drawer Broiler pulls in and out like a drawer. It moves on roller bearings. At a touch of the finger, the entire broiler rolls into view. There is no bending or stooping.

Fashionables Abandon Gotham to Answer Call of Gay Paris

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, May 3.—[Special.]—This has been a busy week. In fact, starting out with such attractions as a partial eclipse, the Charity Carnival and the blowing up of the Vanderbilt yacht, it gave promise of being an extraordinary week.

However, while it started well and continued none too badly, the warm weather, come at last, has made every one conscious of the fact that the proper thing to do is to prepare to abandon New York. Such a sailing list as there is! One can truthfully say that three out of every four people with whom one is acquainted are sailing, this summer. Between now and the Fourth of July the exodus will continue at a rate that promises to leave the city as deserted as Mr. Goldsmith's well known village.

Just why every one should choose to go abroad this year is puzzling. It isn't as if a frightfully successful southern season set the precedent. On the contrary, the Florida season was as far from being a successful one as was the New York season. Both put up a great and brave front, but there is no denying that Palm Beach languished for lack of patronage this last winter.

Throng the Ritz Bar.

Paris, on the other hand, is gay and growing gayer. The list of notables thronging the Ritz bar for the afternoon aperitif grows ever larger and in a few weeks the number of plane flights from London to Paris and to the Riviera will be augmented by our notables taking the shortest line between appointments.

Of course the town giggled a bit over the blowing up of the Vanderbilt yacht, Winchester. There wasn't much of a surprise in the yacht blowing up, since it seems such craft have habits of amazing ingeniousness, but the amusement came from the fact that Mrs. Vanderbilt spent most of last Monday telling all her friends over the telephone that it was the most fortunate thing in the world that the accident occurred on Monday.

"Do you know," she told a friend, "on Sunday we were sitting on the deck directly over the spot where the explosion occurred. Just think!" I dare say there really isn't anything to smirk about, but a lot of people who know Grace Vanderbilt are tittering, none the less.

Genevieve Fox Plights Troth.

I think all of us were frightfully glad this week to learn that Genevieve Fox had plighted her troth to Quincy S. Cabot, son of the Francis H. Cabots of town and La Malbaie, Quebec.

Genevieve has been of importance since her debut in '26 because she represents the third generation of the Clan O'Brien, headed by lovable old Morgan J. and including as it does such famous figures—in a news sense—as Esmond O'Brien, without whom no affair would be complete; Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, who was Katherine Mackay, and by association, Mrs. Kenneth's sister, Ellin, now the still unforgiven Mrs. Irving Berlin.

The O'Brien clan makes Southampton its headquarters and Genevieve, a splendid young athlete, made her debut at Mille Fiore, the villa of Former Justice O'Brien, in the sleepy Long Island colony. Her mother, Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, born, of course, O'Brien, is one of the most energetic hostesses of Southampton and New York, and Genevieve herself, a good tennis player, golfer and swimmer, has long been a light of the colony. Her sister, Constance, married William Barclay Harding, while her younger sister, Cathleen, recently made her debut.

Quincy Cabot is Groton and Harvard, which his names would imply. He is a brother of Maud Cabot, George Cabot, and F. Higginson Cabot Jr., who married Currie Mathews. The wedding of Genevieve and Quincy is to take place in June with Southampton as the scene.

Carnival Dress Rehearsal.

The early part of the week was all Charity Carnival. Monday was given over to the dress rehearsal, which was an opportunity for all of us to let off the energy the warm weather had suddenly endowed us with.

Every one turned up at the Garden, which was shut tight from the outside; so the only entrance was by a small door. Quite a laugh was caused when one top-hatted gentleman, whose name I shan't repeat, asked a street urchin how he could get in and the lad looked at him and queried, "You're lookin' for the employés' entrance, ain't you, mister?" He was slain immediately by a look. But nevertheless, the employés' entrance at Madison Square Garden was the only way in on Monday.

Tuesday was another matter. One could hardly get near the main entrance. Cameras flashed in the yellow of powder glare, crowds blocked the sidewalk so that we had to submit to the ministrations of the policemen on duty and since the Honorable Mr. Whalen, our police commissioner, was present, the Garden was fairly besieged by motorcycle officers and inspectors in gold and blue.

Once inside it was different; I will say that the Charity Carnivals in aid of the Judson Health Center have given New York its moments of color. Roses, cherry, and peach blossoms were all about making a fairyland of the scene of the pageant, "Romance." The arena proper was centered by a huge platform on which the various episodes of the pageant took place and the long beams of colored lights were reflected by the calm surface of a pool of water.

Contrast in Costumes.

It was gloriously noisy. As ever, all the participants who were not on the scene at the moment sat in the

Short Terms on Continent Send Sub-Debs Home

By Mildred Jaklon.

THE about-to-be debutantes who have been studying in Europe this winter are soon to be "fetched home," as the continental educational systems provide for shorter terms than the American ones. Some of the maidens have been at fashionable finishing schools, and some have been studying independently in Paris, under the tutelage of chaperons.

Beatrice Kirk, daughter of the Walter R. Kirks, Elsa Armour, the A. Watson Armours' bud, and Helen Blair, the William McCormick Blairs' ditto, have been in Paris being privately tutored, and are to return the end of this month with Mr. and Mrs. Armour, who sailed early in April to get them. Miss Kirk and Miss Armour are to have a coming out ball at the Blackstone during Christmas week.

At Miss Nixon's in Florence.

The Gustav F. Swifts, whose Geraldine, has been at Miss Nixon's at Florence, Italy, for the season, sailed at the same time as the Armours. They will pick up Geraldine and travel for several months, to return in midsummer.

Marian Wright, daughter of the William Van Doren Wrights, is another of next winter's debutantes who has been getting the advantages of European study. She has been at Mlle. Le Boucher's school in Paris, and the Wrights have already joined her in that metropolis. They are to go on a motor tour, probably accompanied by the Stephen Wrights and Brier Wright, who have been living and studying and working in Paris, and also by their other daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Anderton Jr., who left recently to join them.

Mrs. Edward Hasler of Lake Forest has gone to England to visit some of her late husband's relatives, and will join her daughter, Constance, who has been at Mlle. Le Boucher's, too. Miss Constance is to have a debut in the garden of her mother's place in Lake Forest.

Traveling and Shopping.

The James Offields' child, Bettey, and Mrs. A. Harris Whiting's Eleanor have been rooming together at the same school, and Mrs. Offield sails in a few days to "collect" them and to take them for some traveling and, later, some shopping for debutante clothes.

Mrs. W. Edwin Stanley left sometime ago to be with her daughter, Miss Helen Stanley, who has been doing her lessons in Paris, and they are sailing for this country on May 17 with the younger sister, Barbara, who has been at Lausanne at school.

Sarah Wood, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood, has been at Miss Risser's in Rome, and her mother and sister, Frances, who came out last winter, left several weeks ago for Italy.

MAIDS and matrons who are involved in one thing or another of interest to society are Mrs. Cornelius Crane, who before her marriage last fall was Mrs. Cathalene Parker Browning, and who has been sojourning with Mr. Crane at Coronado Beach, Cal.; Miss Katherine Drake, Miss Mary Fortune, Miss Margaret Carr, Miss Jean Purcell, and Miss Jeanette Peterkin, who are concerned with the success of the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids' annual benefit, a dinner-dance to take place on Friday evening, May 16, at the Bal Tabarin; Miss Helen Bournique, president of the Junior League and one of the delegates to the recent annual convention of the national league in New York, and Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr., who is president of the Lake Forest-Lake Bluff

By Mme. X.

MAY 4, is it? Well, that is the date of two once famous, but now almost forgotten, dates in Chicago's history, the anarchist massacre on Haymarket square in 1886 and the murder of Dr. Cronin five or six years later. April and May are apt to be months of more than unusually exciting events. Perhaps this is because, as in all nature, there springs up a greater vitality in mankind which manifests itself in various ways.

The battle of Lexington, the opening engagement of the revolutionary war, took place April 19, 1775, and many other great conflicts began in the three spring months. It was in April, 1917, that we joined the world war.

The bloody anarchist massacre was followed by a summer devoted to the trial of the nine men directly connected with the historic event. That venerable figure, Judge Gary, presided at the trial with a stern authority not present in today's court cases. The hearings were conducted in the old Criminal court building on Dearborn and Ohio streets. He lived in a white stone house on Ontario street and used to walk to and from the court twice a day unattended by any guard, though almost daily threats of violence were sent him through the mails. [There were no telephones in those days.]

Matters of History.

The results of that trial are matters of history. The punishments of that group of Red conspirators were duly administered. One committed suicide and the rest were either hung or imprisoned with long sentences, and Red anarchy was banished from Chicago for the succeeding decades. Even now it is not popular here, though it flourishes in other parts of the land. All hail to that fine old patriarch, Judge Gary! We may well wish there were more like him today.

Even in the short interval between that date and the Cronin murder, court authority weakened, and the result of that trial was not nearly so complete a judicial victory as its historic predecessor. The latter was a gangster matter. The gang, however, was not composed of the same nationalities as those we wrestle with today. It was Hibernian and was known as the Clan-Na-Gael. The gang dissolved after the trial and has ceased to trouble us simple hearted Americans. Let us wish ourselves as good luck out of the present difficulties made by others of alien origin.

The date, May 4, will always be one of significance to Chicago.

Bad Reputation Spreads.

Apropos of Chicago gangsters, it is interesting to note that, as society's cohorts gather from the south, the west, and other winter rendezvous and exchange news and views on experiences, there is one subject on which they are quite unanimous and that is the view of Chicago entertained by outsiders. It seems that we are becoming a city to be avoided. Easterners going to the Pacific coast, or to nearer Rocky mountain resorts, in increasing numbers sidestep this city and go by St. Louis or any other route that enables them to escape the perils of what is almost universally considered the most dangerous metropolis in the country.

No, I am not exaggerating. It is to be heard on all sides. I myself found it was impossible to combat or change the opinion of many whom I met either in Florida or southern California, on this question. What this means in the way of loss to our business world, to our shops, hotels, taxi cabs and so on, it is impossible to overestimate. We are becoming anathema to the rest of the U. S. A.

An instance of our status was given me by a red haired lad about 10 years of age with whom I had a brief interchange of views down at Miami. I was standing on the deck of a well known yacht, A. B. Dick's Chieftain, which was laying up at the main dock there. The youngster came up selling papers. I asked him a few questions about himself and he concluded the conversation by saying: "I know why you're down here."

On my inquiring "Why?" he swiftly replied, "To get away from them Chicago gangsters." It was in vain that I tried to disabuse him. The idea was firmly implanted in his mind.

And when a member of the X family retailed a recent experience that came to him in his office I began to think that that red haired lad was not far from wrong in his impression of my native city. This near relative has an office in a big building downtown. A rather squalid looking mortal came to his desk last week and asked him to buy some tickets to what he said was a policemen's ball. He said that almost every one in the building had bought some. Not caring to join his neighbors in this sort of blackmail this relative still declined, whereupon the ticket seller retired with the words, "Don't blame me if anything happens to you."

Was blackmail ever more open? Yet, if that ticket seller spoke the truth, most of the occupants of that large office building preferred to pay it rather than kick the insolent solicitor out.

People Fear Chicago.

Yes, I know I am writing what is supposed to be a society col., but this matter concerns society folk as much as it does the rest of the community. Many of our prominent people are interested in promoting the proposed Century of Progress exposition to be held here in 1933. Can they expect anything but failure for it unless present conditions are radically changed? Who will risk their lives to come to the fair?

Far off in Syria, down in the south-

MRS. GEORGE BACON MOORE.
[Grinsted Photo.]

THE marriage of Miss Alice Jeanne McKeown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. McKeown of Winnetka, to George Bacon Moore of Boston took place on April 26 at the Winnetka Congregational church. After a wedding journey in the south Mr. and Mrs. Moore will reside at 45 Fenwick road, Waban, Mass.

MISS MARY CATHERINE PACKHAM
[Carlos Photo.]

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES M. PACKHAM of Evanston announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Catherine, to Vereker Tufnell Peacocke of Los Angeles, Cal. The wedding will take place in the near future.

ernmost tip of Patagonia, out in the south sea islands, up in the Arctic regions, all over the civilized world, our city's name is the synonym for violence and evil doing. I mentioned Syria first because Frank Loesch told me of talking with a Syrian camel driver who asked him if Chicago was as dangerous as reported. It was not for this brave citizen, whose daily mail is laden with threatening letters, to deny this.

There are many cases of horrid attack and robbery that never get into the papers or into public records. Eric Gerstenberg, father of Miss Alice Gerstenberg, well known in our art circles, was the victim of thugs last winter when he was returning to his home on Lake Shore drive. On Elm street, within a few hundred feet of the drive, he was knocked on the head and choked by men he never even saw, who robbed him of all in his pockets and left him unconscious on the snow. No, they were never found, nor was the matter reported to the public. Why pick out one such incident when its kind was of daily occurrence?

To our aid in this conspicuously evil condition of things a body of citizens is now organized—to wit: the crime commission, with Frank J. Loesch, that intrepid fighter of the powers of evil, at its head. It has undertaken to rid the city of its worst enemies. This is a gigantic and uphill task, nor does this commission receive as much help from the community as it should. Had it larger sums at its command, its work could be expedited enormously. All those citizens who cannot give of their time should support it financially. (I've not been asked to make this plea, but I know that any organization like this never has enough support to enable it to carry out all it might in the way of swift retribution.)

Bureau Fights Crime.

Indirectly, that famous (no, infamous) St. Valentine's day massacre was responsible for establishing in Chicago a remarkable anti-crime organization, the new scientific crime detection bureau, which is a part of Northwestern university's curriculum. This is under the direction of Col. Calvin Goddard, a trained expert in ballistics, or the science of bullets. And here is the road traveled from that day, Feb. 14, 1929, when the six men were murdered in the garage on North Clark street, to this recent addition to the Northwestern university. Dr. Bundesen, county coroner, decided that so outrageous a crime should be handled by an extra intelligent jury, so he called to his service such a body of men as had never before been gathered for a similar task.

Among them was Burt A. Massee, vice president of the Colgate-Palm-Olive-Peet company, who was made foreman of the jury. He, realizing the importance of his job, obtained from his lawyer an opinion that it was legal for this jury to hire expert aid in solving the crime, and, hearing that Col. Calvin Goddard of New York, an ex-officer in our army, was a specialist on firearms and bullets, Mr. Massee sought him out, and, as there was no public money available for the purpose, himself defrayed his expenses and pay to come out here and make a study of the seventy empty shells and other evidences of the crime.

So successful was the colonel, as far as his special task went, that Mr. Massee conceived the idea that in a crime ridden city like ours a man of this training and caliber might well find much to occupy him. So he conceived the plan of a scientific crime detection bureau which should have charge of the business of ferreting out criminals. It would have been fatal to have this under any governmental control, ridden with politics, as are most of our enterprises for public benefit, so it was proposed to put this enterprise under the aegis of one of our great universities.

Northwestern accepted the responsibility, and the Scientific Crime Detection Laboratory of Chicago was installed on East Ohio street under the direction of Col. Goddard. It is the first of its kind in the country, and all other of our great cities are watching its results with keen interest. At the expense of Mr. Massee, Col. Goddard spent last summer studying the handling of crime detection in European centers, where they are far ahead of us in the successful treatment of this all important problem of modern life. So much so, in fact, that our crime statistics amaze and horrify them in England and on the continent.

Just think of what it means to us that while in Vienna there were only five murders in 1929, in this country there were 400. Vienna may be only a quarter as large as Chicago, but the proportion of crime there is one-hundred times as large as ours.

Interested in Lie Detector.

Col. Goddard is a quiet, self-contained young man of a good eastern family. He was born in Baltimore, though his father is of well known New York stock. The colonel is a graduate of Johns Hopkins university. He served in the United States army during the world war. He has a wife and two children, whom he will bring to Chicago in the autumn.

His chief Chicago connections are the Edward L. Ryersons. He is deeply interested in his work, especially its latest appliance, the sphygmomanometer [long word, that]. This is a lie detector which has been developed and brought here by Leonarde Keeler, a young man 23 years old. It is, according to its sponsors, almost entirely correct in its indication as to whether the person under observation is speaking truth or falsehood.

An accused person can refuse to be so tested, but if he does, he immediately lays himself open to more than suspicion—to practical certainty as to his guilt. If he should pass through the ordeal safely he will have little more trouble. How simple a way for an innocent person to save himself the expense and trouble of a trial!

This crime detection bureau is starting a new and extremely interesting publication, "The American Journal of Police Science." It is published by Northwestern University Press, and its first number, which the X family has read, is as thrilling a piece of literature as has come our way since the old days of Sherlock Holmes.

If anything can make us a city fit for such a world party as that proposed to be given in 1933 it will be the work being done by this scientific crime detection bureau. But it must be supported in its task by every decent element in Chicago, both morally and financially. And it's your job and mine and our neighbors to see that these men working in that Ohio street laboratory, and the good citizens on the crime commission, and all others who are laboring to clean up the city are aided in every possible way. Those of the decent element who sit up and say that there is no way to rid ourselves of the wicked load riding us [and I've heard them say this on every side, in fashionable clubs, in tranquil homes and everywhere that so-called "smart folk" meet], that the powers that be in the city hall are too powerful to be ousted, and so on, for such as they our present government is not bad, but really too good. Nor are the big tax dodgers without their responsibility for present conditions.

Meanwhile, Chicagoans would better see themselves as others see them, inhabitants of a city which will be increasingly shunned by the rest of the world. That path avoiding us and taking in St. Louis is growing daily wider and better paved for the increasing throngs that choose it. There is no worse curse than that of being shunned by your kind, outcast, degraded.

My fellow men, your business, your clubs, your sports, your many interesting occupations are as nothing in importance to this business of cleaning up Chicago. My fellow women, your new fashions, your afternoon bridge games, your domestic concerns are as nothing compared with your duties as citizens in a community that the entire world declares is unfit for its position as fourth great city on the globe today. I have not exaggerated or over stressed our present condition. Our great institutions, our museums, libraries, universities, musical enterprises are all smirched with our crime record. What are you going to do about it?

Yet what wonderful things have been done for Chicago and Chicagoans! I was told recently that our forest preserve, that fine reservation of wild nature that encircles the city, if laid out in one piece, would measure half a mile in width and 105 miles in length. Did ever a city set aside such a spacious pleasure ground for its citizens? To be sure, these same citizens are so ill mannered that they have in a few years destroyed almost all the natural wild flower growth that was once so abundant in these native woodlands. Any time in the year when flowers flourish you can see vandals tearing them up by the roots along the country roads only to fling them out of their cars a little later to die in ugly messiness. Nowhere in Germany or France or any other country in Europe will you see such bad manners.

Poses for Spanish Portrait.

Among the many travelers who gathered this year at Seville, in Spain, to take part in its Easter celebrations were Mrs. R. T. Crane Jr. with her daughter, Miss Florence Crane. Mrs. Crane went to Spain not only to be present at what is one of the most beautiful festivals in Europe but also to have her daughter's portrait painted by that great artist, Zuloaga. It will be interesting to see what this famous painter will do with the exquisite blonde loveliness of this charming young girl. His usual type is the more flamboyant Spanish señorita.

The Cranes are returning in June to their Chicago mansion, where Mr. Crane is going to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the great company which his father, the late R. T. Crane, began here in 1855. He is planning to give a great ball at his handsome Gothic house on the Lake Shore drive, to which he is inviting all the employés of his company, some of whom are coming from great distances. Twelve hundred are expected. The house and grounds will be thrown open to them, and it promises to be a memorable occasion for all of those associated with this, one of the city's most notable enterprises. In addition, Mr. Crane is cutting a big and luscious melon into slices for his employés.

Mrs. Sabin Entertained.

Last Monday was dedicated especially to the entertainment of Mrs. Charles Sabin by the Chicago members of the anti-prohibition society which she started in New York a year or so ago and which has spread to cover the entire country and to include in its membership over 130,000 women.

A luncheon was given for her at the Casino and was followed later by a reception in the same festive setting. Mrs. Joseph Cudahy and her cousin, Mrs. Wirt Morton, were more or less in charge of the afternoon, while Mrs. Leslie Wheeler is temporary chairman of the Chicago group of women in charge of organizing a local body to join the large and rapidly increasing national movement against the prohibition amendment. Others present that day, at either the luncheon or the afternoon meeting, besides those already mentioned, were the Mesdames Charles G. King, William H. Mitchell, Charles H. Schweppe, Frank Hibbard, Kent Clow, George R. Nichols, Arthur Cable, William J. Chalmers, Morris L. Johnston, Arthur A. Small, R. R. McCormick, Samuel Insull Jr., and E. R. Graham.

Mrs. Wheeler represented Chicago at the big meeting held in Cleveland a fortnight ago, wherein the best means of organizing the anti-prohibition forces in the country were discussed and a nation-wide society was started. Up to the time of this gathering there were 100,000 registered antis. Within a few days this number was increased to 30,000 more. The drys are so well organized that any movement to unseat them must be equally strongly united.

To this work Mrs. Sabin has dedicated herself. She is a charming, well bred New York society woman, not at all the type to carry a banner of reform across this wide continent. For this very reason what she has to say sounds more natural and reasonable than the loud, shrill cry of the professional reformer. There is no hysterical reverberation in her call to the rest of her sex to save the country. She represents the calm common sense of those who have studied the effect of the present law and see in its present aspect a terrible menace to us and our civilization.

When, after ten years of trial of the eighteenth amendment, the Bellevue hospital in New York (an institution that corresponds to our county hospital) reports a great many more deaths from alcoholism than it ever had before, it doesn't seem as if our "noble experiment" were succeeding. So this quiet, well dressed, charmingly mannered New York woman is calling her sisters of all outlooks in life to consider if there isn't some better way of achieving temperance and sobriety than the one now being tried out by a body of fanatics. It is a matter of interest that the most determined antagonists met by the anti-prohibitionists are the bootleggers whose monstrous industry is being threatened by Mrs. Sabin and her increasingly formidable cohorts. The old saying that you can judge a man by his friends is even better rendered by saying that you can judge a cause by its enemies.

Lectures on Writing.

I am asked to call your attention to a course of lectures by Jean Toomer which begins Wednesday at 645 North Michigan avenue. His general topic is "The Psychology and Craft of Writing." His first lecture will be on "The Writer and the Literary Life." His sponsors are Baker Brownell of Northwestern university and Ferdinand Schevill and Edward Sapir of the University of Chicago.

Others interested in his lectures are the Mesdames John R. Winterbotham Jr., Theron Cooper, A. A. Carpenter, Morris L. Johnston, Howard Linn, Walter Paepcke, Chauncey Blair, Philip Maher, Russell Walcott, Miss Jeannette Pratt, and the Messrs. Llewellyn Jones, Arthur Meeker Jr., and William S. Moore.

A gay little Viennese comedy is "Candle Light," now being given at the Princess theater by a clever company. It smacks of that sophisticated but semi-extinguished European capital. Those who know their Vienna wonder how much has been deleted to adapt it to our more puritan atmosphere. Enough has been left in, however, to be most amusing to its present audiences. If you want a merry evening, go to see it.

TAG DAY FOR AGED AND ADULT CHARITIES

More Than 3,500 Women Will Work in Annual Drive Tomorrow

By Roberta Nangle.

THE thirteenth annual tag day for the benefit of the Chicago Federation of Aged and Adult Charities will take place tomorrow. Officers of the federation have been preparing for weeks for this one day appeal to Chicago's generosity and are now offering up a final prayer for good weather.

More than 3,500 women have been enlisted to distribute the small cardboard tags and it is hoped that the day's work will net $100,000 for the forty charities of the federation. The receipts of last year's tag day totaled $94,593.

Authorized by City Council.

The Aged and Adult Charities' benefit is one of the annual tag days authorized by the city council. Eacn organization will have workers stationed downtown, in residential districts, and on all important streets. Chicagoans usually respond nobly to the solicitation of tag day workers, but there are always a few skeptics who profess doubt as to the ultimate disposal of the funds collected.

Hence, the federation has asked us to remind those who may hesitate to drop a coin into a tagger's box tomorrow that the services performed by the workers of the charities involved are entirely voluntary and gratuitous, that not one cent is paid to any officer or worker, and that the total proceeds of the tag day are distributed to the philanthropic institutions in the Federation of Aged and Adult Charities.

Many Organizations Aided.

The organizations constituting the federation include: Augustana Central home, Augustana Home for the Aged, Baptist Old People's home, Bethany home, Beulah Home and Maternity hospital, Big Sisters, Bohemian Charitable association, Bohemian Old People's home, British Old People's home, Church Home for Aged Persons, Chicago Home for the Friendless, Chicago Christian Industrial league, Cathedral Shelter, Danish Old People's home, Deaconess and Woman's home, Evangelical Orphan and Old People's home, Florence Crittenton Anchorage, Goodwill Industries of Chicago, Home for Aged Colored People, Holland home, House of the Good Shepherd, Immanuel Woman's home, Norwegian Lutheran Bethseda home; Norwegian Old People's home, Paulist Fathers, Phyllis Wheatley home, Presbyterian home, Protectorate of the Catholic Women's league, Resurrection Day Nursery and Girls' home, Sarah Hackett Stevenson memorial, St. Joseph's Home for the Aged and Crippled, St. Joseph's Home for the Friendless, Scottish Old People's home, Swedish Baptist Home for the Aged, Swedish Covenant Old People's home, Swedish Societies' Old People's home, St. Elizabeth's hospital, Susanna Wesley home, Western German Baptist Old People's home, and Woman's Church Federation Protectorate.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE Parko club was nearing the end of a busy all day session. Several of the members were talking at once. The president resorted to her gavel.

"Ladies, will you please address the chair, one at a time, so we can all hear?" she begged. "Just a few minutes more and we'll adjourn. Mrs. Stalie has the floor."

"I don't understand about this progressive league business," Mrs. Stalie complained. "Who are they and what do they want of us? I'm all at sea in regard to the matter."

"She's a regular sailor, always at sea about something or other," the social chairman whispered to the department chairman who was sitting next to her at the back of the room.

"I would suggest that the civics chairman explain the matter again for the benefit of those who did not hear the discussion this morning," offered the secretary.

"Our secretary's suggestions are always good," voiced the president. "Will the civics chairman explain?"

"There's diplomacy for you," mouthed the department chairman to the social chairman.

The civics chairman explained.

"They ask for two things," restated the president. "Our endorsement of their good roads program for this county and that your president attend a dinner they are giving in the near future—sit at the speakers' table and say a few words. This I shall be glad to do if the club so wishes."

"Always taking on more work," murmured the social chairman.

"Yes, I know," returned the department chairman. "I asked her the other day how in the world she managed to do it all, and her answer was: 'It just means I have to work a little longer.' What do you think of that?"

The business of the day finished, the president declared the club adjourned.

"I've known presidents, and more presidents," said the social chairman, as she and the department chairman started for the door, "but I've never known one before who could stay good natured and polite to the very end of an all day session as ours does."

Question.

"Is it customary for a member of a committee to notify the chairman when she is unable to attend a meeting.

MEMBER."

Reply.

It is the courteous thing to do.

Institute Adds New Courses

Offers Practical Training Designed to Aid Students in Earning a Living from Some Form of Art.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE new Industrial Art school of the Art institute greatly enlarges the field of training that the young man or young woman, wishing to make a living through some form of art work, may enter. A circular just issued by the school gives a list of the subjects that require special training in design. They include interior decoration, architectural sculpture, furniture, lighting fixtures, textiles of all kinds, carpets and rugs, wall paper, ceramics, glassware, ornamental hardware, household utilities, gold and silver ware, metal work of all kinds, leather work, toys, stage design, typography, art direction for advertising agencies, bookbinding, lettering and decoration, book design, book illustration and wood block making.

In the department of sculpture and architectural sculpture, the training consists of designs for decorative building materials, such as terra cotta, brick or stone, portraiture, figure work, etc. In the drawing and painting departments the student is taught portrait, mural and landscape painting, lithography, etching, illustration, fashion illustration and cartoon drawing. A teacher's training course is given to teachers and supervisors of art in grade schools, high schools, normal schools, etc. The instruction given also leads to college teaching, art criticism for newspapers and magazines, and museum work and lecturing.

These paragraphs from an Art institute news letter of several weeks ago have been blistering my typewriter in vain efforts for publicity ever since they came to hand. At last they are seeing the light of day and we feel much better for it. One other profession which this new additional art school should instruct in, is that of salesmanship for paintings.

Difficulties of Creative Worker.

Do you realize how difficult it is for the creative worker to dispose of his own work? Modesty forbids him pushing himself. All the artist can do, having achieved his picture, is to try its luck at exhibitions where, if it hangs, it is up before the more critical judgment of a public that thinks several times before spending its dollars upon a luxury.

In a rightly constituted world, pictures and sculpture would not be luxuries. They would be necessities. Even today that feeling is coming into force. Walls without pictures are bare and cold. Photographs and prints scarcely meet the requirements of people with any pretention to taste. They want color and interest and something well done to delight the mind as well as the eye. They are looking for paintings. Some of them haunt the galleries; a few of them search out the artist in his studio. A young man or woman trained in salesmanship and in a knowledge of art is greatly needed as an introductory motif between the painter and sculptor and the man and woman who can buy what they want if they see it.

It would be an original career and a novel profession. One would have to be up on his [or her] toes most of the time. It would be intensely thrilling, vividly exciting. One would need to be a little of a mind reader, more of a character reader. One would have to possess tact and a power of subtle suggestion. One would have to know when to speak decisively, domineer over the timid purse, and one would have to know when to tread lightly, just faintly pointing the path that might be followed with resulting pleasure or profit. It would be a gay career and carpeted with the appreciation of men and women who cannot do this selling for themselves. It is, at all events, another suggestion for the Industrial Art school when planning to enlarge its comprehensive curriculum.

Society of Medalists.

The Society of Medalists, with headquarters at the Art Center, 65 East 56th street, New York, has announced that the first medal for its members is just ready. The society took its being from the fact that certain people thought the art of the medal was insufficiently appreciated, and so the association was formed to be operated as a nonprofit making organization, with a desired membership [which has nearly been reached] of one thousand members and annual dues of $8. This annual fee merely covers the cost of providing the two medals issued each year to every member. It is a unique and pleasant and inexpensive way of keeping in touch with the finest work of some of our most celebrated contemporary artists. The first medal has been designed and executed by Laura Garden Fraser, sculptor. The second medal will be the work of Paul Manship.

Through membership in this society it is now possible for the first time for people in general to receive copies of the medallic arts, as most medals are issued by associations or organizations for awards and commemorative occasions which do not allow their sale to any one else. If any one should care to join the Society of Medalists information may be secured from headquarters at 65 East 56th street, New York.

Sculpture in White Soap.

The sixth annual competition for prizes offered by the Procter & Gamble Co. for sculpture, using white soap as a medium, is on. The results will be exhibited first in New York and then we shall hope to see a part of the exhibit at the Art institute, as was done last spring.

More than 175 nationally known American sculptors will exhibit their works at the sixth national exhibition of sculpture in the open air, to be held in Rittenhouse Square, Philadelphia, under the auspices of the Philadelphia art alliance from May 13 to June 10. Lorado Taft, Chicago's famous sculptor, will deliver an address at the formal reception on "Our American Sculpture and Sculptors."

The second international exhibit by the Chicago Camera club was opened to the public in gallery G59 of the Art institute on Thursday.

There opened last Thursday in the Art institute an exhibition of contemporary Belgian art, including painting, the graphic arts and sculpture. Also in galleries G 52-G 60 an exhibit of sculpture by Mario Korbel was put on view.

Another important opening of last week is the exhibit of paintings and etchings by Marguerite Kirmse in the Carson Pirie Scott galleries. On May 10 a brilliant exhibit of paintings by John A. Spelman is scheduled to open in these galleries.

Further Inducement Made.

The drive for subscribers for next season to the Goodman plays is still going on successfully. A further inducement is made to subscribers in the news that for those who are members of the Art institute a $2 reduction in season prices is made. For instance the $14 seats are $12 to a member and the $10 seats are $8. These prices are for the series of eight plays which will be produced next year by the Goodman players.

Esau J. Halow went through town some ten days ago on his way to holding a one man exhibit of his paintings at Jackson, Mich. He is a young Syrian modernist, and his work is facile and delicate, imaginative and extraordinarily beautiful.

The Lakeside Press, whose galleries have given us two interesting exhibitions this spring, announce the impending publication of illustrated editions of four famous American books. The "Moby Dick" is magnificently illustrated by Rockwell Kent; "Tales," by Edgar Allan Poe, is illustrated by W. A. Dwiggins; "Two Years Before the Mast," by Edward A. Wilson; and "Walden," by Rudolph Ruzicka.

Todros Geller has just published a new volume of wood cuts. The appearance of his book was feasted last Thursday evening with a reception and exhibit in his studio on the eighth floor of 59 East Adams street.

News of Art and Artists.

Joseph P. Birren is holding a successful one man show of twenty-one paintings in the Newhouse galleries of St. Louis.

An exhibition of paintings by Norman B. Wright, one of the younger Chicago artists, is on view in the gallery of the National Academy of Art, 230 East Ohio street. Mr. Wright has exhibited for the last two years with the Chicago painters and sculptors at the Art institute, and last summer with the southern Vermont artists at Manchester, Vt. He has studied in Paris at the Academie Collarossi and the Academie de la Grande Chaumiere, and he is engaged now in advanced work, under Hubert Ropp of the National Academy of Art. His portrait "Emily" was one of the charming paintings in the Chicago artists show this last winter at the Art institute. Many of the paintings in the current exhibit are the results of a March honeymoon in Jamaica, a delightful combination of circumstances.

An exhibit of paintings by Arnold Blanch is the May offering at the Walden-Dudensing galleries. Mr. Blanch won the Norman Wait Harris silver medal and $500 last year at the Art institute. He is a modernist and a member of the Woodstock colony of artists in New York state.

Three Man Show at Revell's.

The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is sponsoring a three man show in the Revell gallery. Benjamin J. Beck, John McDonnell, and Charles Minghi are the artists. Of the three, Mr. Beck's paintings are by far the most decorative and pleasurable. One can get a thrill from the marines of Charles Minghi. Rolling water and surging surf are always exciting subjects, but possibly the marines must yield first place to "Cracker," the white cat, and to the paintings of fruit by Mr. Beck.

"Cracker" is a particularly attractive picture. She is a pretty ladylike cat with huge eyes and orange patches blossoming in the long white of her coat. She watches with instinctive unconcern the possible antics of a pair of blue glass birds that preen themselves just a little ahead of her on the window seat.

"Chinese Vase," "Russian Urn," "White Swan," "Tulips," "Flowers"—each of these various paintings is decorative and effective. The fruit is particularly well painted. "Morning" is in the mood of a Stark Davis canvas, but lacks the emphatic vitality which stamps the Stark Davis birds. This rooster is a bit artificial with a comb of red flannel and an appearance of having been bought on 5th avenue, rather than having arrived at maturity via the commonplace incubator and brooder. It is more toy than bird.

John McDonnell strikes a happy note in "Peaceful Sunday" and the "Covered Bridge." His painting is a little soft, a little too pretty. One would like to bite on gristle for a change; too much mush is rather irritating. The pastel "The Pose" is particularly a red flag to a bull. The lady is delicately tinted, but she would be the better for a stern course in reducing.

Charles Minghi is a pupil of Leon Lundmark and, like Lundmark, is devoted to the sea in all its moods. Particularly good are the "Gull Rocks," "Eventide," "Receding Wave," "The "Lookout," and "Mid-Atlantic." The water has a feeling of reality that is exciting and the white crested waves roll and break against rocks as solid as themselves and as beautiful. The little group of marine paintings is extremely worth while.

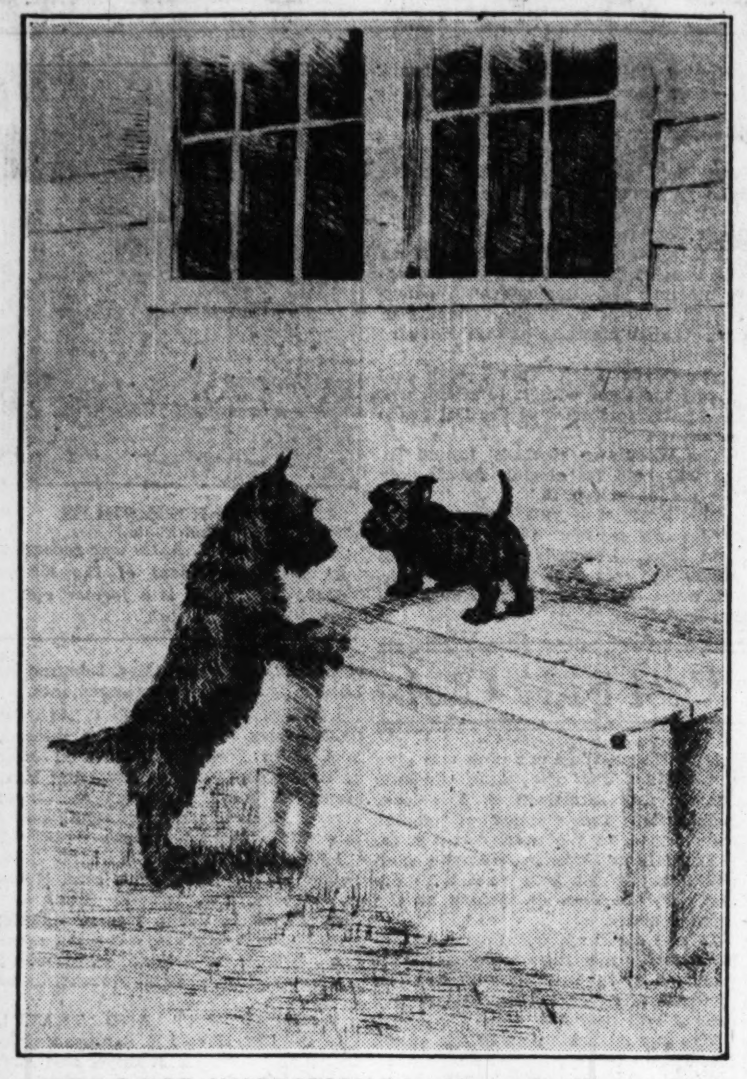
Picturesque Chicago.

The first annual Pictorial Chicago and Chicagoland salon, held in the narcissus room at Marshall Field's, has been a great success. It closes May 7. Those who have not seen the exhibit should go. The photographs give in a clever and interesting way a comprehensive story of the possibilities and opportunities found in Chicago.

It is good every so often to come up against some such check to the universal opinion that Chicago is little better than a playground for grafters, racketeers, and crime. We have a great many things to be proud of. The photographs tell it more graphically than words, so it is far better to ask you to go and look at the prints rather than try to describe any of them here. Prizes were awarded to M. Gurrie, R. W. Trowbridge, H. K. Shigeta, John Skara, Bertram Dorien Basabe, Godfrey Lundberg, Leonard Purin, Elaine Kern, and Alfons Weber.



"UP FOR INSPECTION," by Marguerite Kirmse, from the one-man show of her paintings and etchings, which are on view at the Carson Pirie Scott galleries. The exhibition opened last Wednesday with a reception at which the artist was present. Marguerite Kermse is by long odds the ablest portrayer of dogs we have today. Her portraits in black and white and color of dogs of all breeds are little short of marvelous. She has an inimitable ability to show a pup's wet muzzle, or the rough coat of a wire hair, or the aristocratic beauty of a wolfhound, in a way that places her in the lead of contemporary artists interested along similar lines.

arena seats with the rest of us and the contrast between the evening frocks of the audience and the medieval costumes of the nonworking actresses was startling to say the least.

Every one in town was at the Garden, from Mrs. Edward F. Hutton and the earl and countess of Gosford, who were with the countess' mother, Mrs. Arthur B. Chaflin, to Mr. Ziegfeld's choicest glories, who came in shortly after midnight.

There were four groups to the Romance Pageant: The Romance of the Gods, depicting Venus crowned as queen of Romance; the Romance of Light; the Romance of History, and the Romance of Love, the latter being a glorified wedding ceremony with some of the loveliest costumes I have ever seen.

Then there was a Midway, with chances to be taken on everything, dancing before and after the pageant, minor quarrels, pretty program salesgirls, youths from Princeton and New Haven and the inevitable men-about-town looking as bored as ever. In fact, it was a huge success.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Esmond P. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Biddle Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Francesca Carey, Julia Hoyt, Mrs. Eugene Ong, Major General and Mrs. Hanson Ely, Mrs. James B. Mabon Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss, Commodore and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman and millions, it would seem, of others.

Princess Miguel de Fraganza is back in New York after a short stay here. She will return later with her daughter, Nateja, to open her villa.

Notables Arrive at White Sulphur

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 3.—[Special.]— The colony here is in full residence. Musicales, tennis, and golf, not to mention riding, occupy the time of the notables.

Lady Abdy's Hat Outdoes Horses at Longchamps

Chicagoans Present at the Races.

By May Birkhead.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris dearly loves a spectacle, and at the moment the Longchamps races and painters' showings are among the springtime manifestations. A summery sunshine and an excellent Sunday card drew a tremendous racing throng, which, while enjoying the sport, reveled in the handsome draperies donned for the occasion by nature, not mentioning the brilliant display of frocks, the warm weather allowing coats to be laid aside. Murmurs were heard against brimless hats and caps, so much the vogue, which furnish no protection for the eyes from the pitiless rays of the sun.

Lady Abdy's new spring hat caused more comment than the horses. "Have you seen Lady Abdy's hat?" was the frequent form of greeting. The postage stamp affair covering a tiny spot on the side of her head somewhat suggested the funny round boxes worn by the London bellhops. It was also like the gobs' caps worn by sailors on one ear.

Noted for Eccentric Costumes.

Lady Abdy's costumes, especially the millinery, are usually worth seeing, as she is often named with the fifteen most chic and most eccentrically dressed women in Paris. She is of Russian birth and the divorced wife of Lord Robert Abdy, who has an antique shop here. She has often visited New York, where she is as well known for her chic costumes as in Paris.

Among the Chicagoans seen at Longchamps was Mrs. Paul Healy, who is here for the summer after first visiting London; also Robert Ross, with his wife, who has just arrived from the south after several weeks in Cannes. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey are here for a few days, and Frederick A. Pool, who has been fishing in Scotland; also Mrs. Honoré Palmer, who never misses the Sunday races and is usually successful betting on the ponies. Another Chicagoan now in Paris is Charles Shepard Reed, who is planning to motor through Spain and southwestern France. Mr. Reed is sailing early in June, returning to his summer home at Ottawa, Ill.

Arrivals and Departures.

Mrs. Frederick Kent Copeland has just sailed after several months in Europe. Bruce MacLeish, with his wife, his daughter, Jean, and his son, Hugh, who are in a party with Mrs. Ralph Brown and her son, landed in Naples April 15 and are now touring southern France in a private car. They will arrive May 8 in Paris, where they have engaged an apartment at the Hotel Rhin.

M. Haddon MacLean has just arrived from Naples after traveling leisurely through southern Europe. George R. Carr is here for a few days on his way to Madrid. He will go first to Cannes and then to Madrid on May 4 to attend an international railway congress. Miss Rue Winterbotham, who has been in Paris for the winter studying painting, has now gone to London to meet her father, John H. Winterbotham.

When Chicago Was Young

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

By Herma Clark.

Chicago, Jan. 5, 1872.

DEAR JULIA:

Christmas is over and I must not delay longer in thanking you for your lovely presents. Little Martha had a happy time, in spite of the fact that Christmas gifts from us had to be very simple. In general, the children of Chicago were well remembered, for the world is still sending money to us. The wonderful generosity of America and Europe to us in this disaster reminds me of that verse of Whittier's. His is almost the only poem of any merit inspired by the fire. I love the lines:

"Ah! Not in vain the flames that tossed
Above thy dreadful holocaust.
The Christ again has preached through thee
The lesson of Humanity."

You would be perfectly amazed at the speed with which Chicago is being rebuilt. The work has progressed steadily, interrupted only by one or two days of exceptionally cold weather. The principal nucleus of building on the south side is in the vicinity of Nixon's block, corner of La Salle and Monroe streets. Improvements are going on rapidly on Water street, too. Addison Ballard's building at 277 and 279 Wabash avenue, of brick with stone facings, will be finished the first of March, and is to be occupied by Gage Brothers. Mr. Scammon is building a five story brick with basement on Wabash avenue near Congress street, to cost $50,000. Leander McCormick is putting up a large building on the corner of Lake street and Wabash avenue, and Potter Palmer is getting the iron for his new hotel building on State street. I mention these buildings, because you will recognize the names of the owners, and realize that Chicago's own citizens have great confidence in the rebirth of the city.

Then we find, too, that many residences are being rebuilt. I saw in THE TRIBUNE today that the McCaggs, the Perry H. Smiths, and the I. N. Arnolds have the plans for their houses ready.

Did I tell you that Mr. Robert T. Lincoln, son of the President, has decided to remain in Chicago? He is such a fine man and an excellent lawyer. His office now is on Congress street.

Many churches are moving south. St. Paul's Universalist on Wabash avenue is to be sold, and the congregation will probably go quite far out—to 18th street. Trinity Episcopal church, now on Jackson street, is to be sold, and will be rebuilt somewhere farther south. The Sisters of Mercy will rebuild their seminary, which stood on Wabash avenue and Madison street, going out to the corner of Wabash avenue and 29th street. The bishop of the Catholic church, who formerly had his residence at the corner of Michigan avenue and Madison street, is to build on the grounds of the old Catholic cemetery on the lake shore, just south of Lincoln park. Such are some of the changes going on.

We had a little visit from our friend, John Howard Bryant of Princeton, Ill., this week. "Uncle John," as little Martha always calls him, is going south for the remainder of the winter, accompanied by his brother, William Cullen Bryant, the well known poet of New York, and the latter's daughter. The poet has been visiting in Princeton, where most of his brothers and sisters live. They came out from Massachusetts with a colony almost thirty years ago, and settled in that lovely spot. "Uncle John" has invited us down for a visit in Princeton this summer and I hope we can go.

Did you see the Grand Duke Alexis, when he was in New York? Of course, Chicago was not in a position to entertain him properly, but a "pump handle levee" was held for him at his hotel, and, as Will was on Mayor Medill's reception committee, I went over and took my place in the procession of citizens, masculine and feminine, who filed past and greeted him. He must have been much bored. Indeed, his blonde countenance showed this, at times. He is just a boy—only twenty-two—and it must have been tiresome to greet perfect strangers, and to go on shaking hands for hours.

I must tell you of one of Chicago's prominent citizens who joined the procession passing the grand duke, and who kept his hands in his pockets all the time. His greeting to the distinguished guest was: "Good afternoon, Duke." He wasn't going to bow the knee to a titled visitor. He would show him what one of nature's noblemen was like.

The papers speak of our ungraceful public manners, and I suppose the strictures are in a measure deserved, but, for the most part, our citizenry did themselves proud. The dresses of the ladies were not elaborate, of course. I saw Mrs. Cyrus McCormick as she shook hands with the grand duke. She has such grace and such a lovely smile, I am sure he must have been impressed by her. She wore a black silk, trimmed with numerous ruffles of the same material, and her niece, Miss Shields, had a similar gown. One lady, whom I didn't recognize, wore an opera coat with trimming of cherry colored silk over a black gown. It was quite dressy.

The grand duke has gone now, to hunt buffalo in the west under the guidance of Gen. Sheridan. He will see many aspects of our great country.

We attended the wedding last evening of Miss Carrie Otis at Grace Episcopal church. She married Mr. Meacham of New York. Dr. Clinton Locke performed the ceremony. The bride lost most of her trousseau in the fire, and I believe the wedding had to be postponed a little.

I must close now. We all send best wishes for the New Year

With love,
Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND,

Footnotes

Mrs. James B. Keogh of New York is a daughter of Addison Ballard. Her son, William B. Derby, lives in Chicago.

The late Hall McCormick, Hamilton McCormick, and Mrs. McCormick-Goodhart were children of Leander McCormick.

The name of the prominent citizen who refused to shake hands with the grand duke is a secret.

Joseph Medill had been elected mayor in November, 1871.

Dr. Clinton Locke was father of Mrs. Frederick Hatton, the writer of many plays.

Princeton, Ill., still seems to the writer the "loveliest village of the plain." Many well known Chicagoans hail from this town. Mrs. James C. Ames, Mrs. Frederick Holstman, Mrs. Bowman C. Lingle, and Miss Helen Kendall are former Princetonians, as are Charles G. Cushing and Conrad Spens. Other former residents of Princeton are General and Mrs. D. J. Foster, Mrs. Harry Benedict, Miss Margaret Kyle, John Palmer, and Mrs. Austin Bryant Reeve. Mrs. Reeve spends much time in the lovely old Stevens homestead in Princeton.

MISS MARY E. JACKSON.

Mr. and Mrs. Corwill Jackson of Evanston announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Evelyn, to George Bergen Davis of Kenilworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Carl Davis of Kalamazoo, Mich. The wedding will take place in the fall.

ENGAGED.

MISS PAULINE J. WHITE.
[Reick photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Charles White of Glencoe have announced the engagement of their daughter, Pauline Jeannette, to Dr. Homer B. Porritt of Pontiac, Mich. Miss White is a graduate of Northwestern university and a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority. Dr. Porritt is a graduate of the University of Michigan and is on the oral surgery staff of the University hospital at Ann Arbor. He is a member of Pi Kappa Phi and Delta Sigma Delta fraternities. The wedding will take place in June.

In the Feminine Realm

Mrs. Irene Tucker was recently reelected mayor of Bassett, Ia., for six years without opposition. The city has five councilwomen.

Miss Virginia Murray, head of the women's division of the newly created bureau of crime prevention of the police department of New York City, has organized similar bureaus in Detroit, Cleveland, and Atlanta.

Dr. Sarah Wilbur, nearly 78, one of the leading women physicians of Springfield, Mass., is retiring from active practice, after 42 years of service. She has ushered hundreds of babies into the world.

One of the newest members of the Caterpillar club is Miss Mildred Kauffman, holder of the women's world record of 46 inside loops. She fell 8,200 feet with the aid of a parachute when catapulted from her plane while attempting to break her loop record at the Buffalo, N. Y., airport.

Mme. Fausta V. Mengarini, famous Italian woman sculptor, is the only artist ever commissioned by Premier Mussolini to do his likeness in marble. She is at work on a design for a gigantic lighthouse which will be located in the port of Massaua, on the Red sea.

Episcopalians' Building Plans Call for Million

Chicago and Suburban Churches Improved.

BUILDING and improvement work costing more than $1,500,000 is in prospect during the coming year among Episcopal churches of Chicago and suburbs, says a summary issued from the office of Bishop S. M. Griswold. The program projected for the year compares favorably with previous years, it was stated.

Among the outstanding projects listed are the following:

Christ church, Winnetka, is planning a new group of buildings to cost $375,000. The group includes chapel, parish house, and ten room rectory. A new site has been purchased for the group at a cost of approximately $100,000. The plant is expected to be completed by the fall of 1931.

Emmanuel church, Rockford, will shortly start a new $200,000 church edifice, for which Ralph Adams Cram of Boston has drawn plans. The structure will be of limestone in Gothic style, and will complete a building program begun some years ago.

Western Theological seminary, Evanston, will complete its new $750,000 plant this year. A dormitory unit costing approximately $150,000 is the immediate work to be undertaken.

St. Paul's church, Riverside, is to add a new parish house to its plant, at a cost of about $65,000.

Church of the Mediator, Morgan Park, is constructing a new $75,000 church plant.

The Jenny Lind Memorial church, St. Ansgarius' Swedish, is under way and will cost approximately $65,000.

Emmanuel church, La Grange, has plans for a $100,000 parish house, which will complete the group of structures started six years ago. John N. Tilton is the architect. Plans for a new $150,000 church for All Saint's parish, Ravenswood, are being drawn.

Improvements costing more than $25,000 will be made in the interior of St. James' cathedral, Cass and Huron streets, during the summer. Christ church, Waukegan, is planning similar improvements to cost approximately $35,000. The interior of the nave will be remodeled, redecorated, and new interior furniture will be provided.

[Koehne-Williams Photo.]

For the first time in thirty-three years, or since the installation of the Rev. Norman B. Barr as pastor of the congregation of Olivet institute, a pastor is to be installed. At special services tonight at Olivet church, 1441 Cleveland avenue, the Rev. Malcolm A. Matheson will be made associate pastor of the church.

The Rev. Mr. Matheson was graduated from the Presbyterian Theological seminary in 1926 and after a successful pastorate at the Kelvyn Park Presbyterian church he came to the Olivet institute last November as associate superintendent. At a recent meeting of the congregation of the institute he was elected to the office of associate pastor. Before studying for the ministry the Rev. Mr. Matheson had a business training.

The A Cappella choir of Beloit college will render a program tonight at the First Congregational church, Oak Park.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO CHURCHES

The Rev. J. Alfred Nansen will preach his farewell sermon today before the congregation of the Grace Evangelical Community church, Kimball and Wrightwood avenues, where he has just completed the seven year term set as the maximum for continuous service in one congregation by denominational rules. During this period his congregation has grown by the addition of more than 500 new members and has become the leading church of the denomination in the Chicago area. The church was remodeled, enlarged, and decorated; a pipe organ installed; a $46,000 community service unit added, as well as a $16,000 parsonage acquired during his term of service.

Not only was the Rev. Mr. Nansen a well known figure in the Logan Square community but he was also prominent in Chicago's interdenominational life. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Chicago Church federation and ministerial counselor to the Chicago Christian Endeavor union. His leadership in his own denomination has been exercised as president of the Illinois state board of religious education.

The Standard Bearers of the Woodlawn Methodist Episcopal church held a "slumber party" Friday evening at the home of their counselor, Mrs. W. J. Sykes, 7203 Constance avenue.

Miss Lucile Lee will be consecrated as a missionary nurse for service in India this morning at Pilgrim Congregational church, Oak Park. Dr. Alden H. Clark, who was a missionary in India for twenty-five years, will deliver the sermon.

Dr. Emerson O. Bradshaw, secretary of the Chicago council of religious education, announces that a training school for teachers and leaders in vacation religious schools will begin Tuesday night in the council's rooms, Tower building, 6 North Michigan avenue. The classes will continue on Tuesday and Thursday evenings during the next three weeks.

The annual reunion dinner of the Alumni Acolytical association and ladies' auxiliary of Holy Family Jesuit church will be held at the Palmer house May 14.

A school of missions will open Wednesday night at the Lake View Presbyterian church and will continue each Wednesday night through May. In announcing the school of missions the Rev. Leslie G. Whitcomb, pastor, stated that the opening meeting will hold especial interest due to discussion of the situation in India. The Rev. and Mrs. E. Graham Parker, who have been missionaries in India since 1923, will face questions Wednesday night which bear on the need and value of missionary effort in that country. On succeeding Wednesday evenings the story of missionary effort in China, Africa, and Chicago will be told by well known leaders.

Interesting titles of sermons in Chicago pulpits today include, "Pearls in the Sea," this morning, by the Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, Rogers Park Congregational church; "The Thief in Our Church," tonight, by the Rev. Dr. Fuller, Garfield Park, Baptist church; "Jews Without Money," this morning, by Rabbi Gerson B. Levi, Temple Isaiah and Israel.

Dean F. C. Grant of the Western Theological seminary, Evanston, announces a lecture by the Rev. John Rathbone Oliver, M. D., of Johns Hopkins university, on "Psychiatry in the Service of the Soul," Friday evening at 11 in the Anderson memorial chapel.

Dr. Louis L. Mann, who came from Yale at 33 to succeed Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch as spiritual leader of Sinai congregation, 47th street and Grand boulevard, will give the principal address before the Chicago Sunday Evening club tonight. Rabbi Mann's subject will be "Whither Religion?" He is professor of oriental languages at the University of Chicago.

From 7 to 7:30 the Chicago Scottish Choral union will give a program of religious music, madrigals and folk songs. Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, will resume the informal Bible talks in the series "Tales of the Road," and the doors will be closed from 7:30 to 7:55 during this talk.

Marriage and Health

EVERY man and woman looks forward to a happy marriage. More marriages would continue happy if greater consideration were given to the things which promote happiness. God health is of the utmost importance. While one cannot make the positive assertion that marriage should not take place unless both are in perfect health, physicians advocate thorough medical examinations for social diseases before all marriages.

Of the diseases which threaten the happiness of marriage, social diseases are outstanding. The unhappiness wrought by these diseases can hardly be appreciated. Marriage should never be entered into by any one suffering from such an infection.

Unfortunately social diseases are often acquired innocently, especially by married women, and can exist without the knowledge of the individual. A thorough medical examination provides protection against this possibility.

In some states thorough medical examination for social diseases preceding all marriages are required by law, and as further evidence of its importance an increasing number of clergymen hesitate to perform the marriage ceremony without a "clean bill of health".

These measures have been adopted not only in the interests of happy marriages, but to prevent as far as possible the large percentage of babies which die at birth or live on with crippled minds and bodies because of a social disease.

A happy marriage and healthy children are life's most precious possessions. Do not trust them to chance. Make sure that you are free from a social disease before you marry.

A thorough medical examination including blood and other laboratory tests will provide this assurance. If you have been so unfortunate as to acquire a social disease, seek good medical attention at once and continue treatment until every trace of the disease has been destroyed. Do not marry without your physician's consent.

Good medical attention is available within your ability to pay. See your Doctor or come to the Public Health Institute. The Institute was organized by public spirited citizens to aid in the prevention and control of social disease. Operated not for profit, good medical service is within reach of all. State registered physicians administer all treatments in private individual treatment rooms. Treatment is available to those without funds through the Institute or charitable dispensary clinics.

Announcement . . . This advertisement has been submitted to and approved by the Medical Advisory Board which has been formed at the invitation of the Trustees. It is published by a health agency established for public service to inform the public of the dangers of social disease, of the importance of securing good medical care, and of the facilities whereby this can be obtained.

Simple Rules Aid in Getting Church News

Contributors Can Help by Following Them.

By the Rev. John Evans.

SPACE for the classified church notices on this page is donated by THE TRIBUNE. Several requests are made of contributors which will aid in the routine of handling the announcements. First, please write the notices on postal cards. Second, please do not combine material for the classified column with such announcements as might be used by the editor in other columns of the religious section. If contributors have announcements bearing on church activities, such announcements should be made in a letter. The regular postal card should be reserved for classified announcements.

While certain sorts of announcements bearing on church activities are printed in the news columns of this page, the editor would like to point out that an announcement is not news. An announcement in the main, is advertising matter. News is generally the story of something that has happened or is happening. The fact that such and such a church is going to hold a missionary rally next Sunday is purely advertising and not news. If, at the rally, $100,000 is raised and a dozen people offer themselves for missionary service in foreign fields, it would be news.

Great numbers of requests come to news writers' desks asking free space to announce or advertise bazaars, musicals, rallys, evangelistic services, novenas, missions, and other church activities. Some of these announcements have some news interest, but in the main they are advertising matter. On the other hand, it is relatively rare when a news writer gets a report after the announced event takes place which helps him in writing news. The real news begins when the announced event begins—if the event turns out to be as important as the announcement indicated.

Chicago's Fellowship of Faiths presents the Sunday evening program tonight at Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, 64th and Paulina streets. The subject is: "Christianity, Confucianism, Hinduism, Judaism, Mohammedanism, Teaching Peace and Brotherhood."

Dr. John Thompson, pastor First Methodist church, speaks for Christianity. A Chinese student, Horace Yu, speaks for Confucianism. Chandra Dharma Sena Gooneratne of India, speaks for Hinduism. Rabbi Jacob Singer of Temple Mizpah, speaks for Judaism. Mohammedanism is represented by Sufi Mutiur Rahman Bengalee. Dr. John H. De Lacey, pastor of Thoburn church, presides. The Moslem call to prayer will be given. There will also be Hindu chants and Christian, Jewish and universal hymns.

The Rev. John J. Laffey, Catholic chaplain at Mooseheart, whose mass is broadcast over WJJD every Sunday morning at 7:30, will be the speaker at the May day devotions at the Holy Name cathedral, this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The devotions will be opened by a procession, in which all the sodalities and societies of the cathedral parish will participate. The procession will be led by the cathedral altar boys, followed by the Boy Scouts, the school boys, girls, the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, the Married Ladies' sodality, the Archconfraternity of the Holy Rosary, the Junior Holy Name society, the St. Vincent de Paul society, and the Senior Holy Name society. The girls of the eighth grade of the Holy Name cathedral parish school will lead the procession and will have charge of the crowning of the statue of the Blessed Virgin.

Father Laffey will preach a special sermon on vocations.

The Rev. Peter Crumbley, former Roman Catholic chaplain of the state prison, Joliet, will conduct a mission beginning today and closing May 18 at St. Justin's Catholic church, S. Honore and 71st streets. Father Crumbley will be assisted by Father Leander of Santa Barbara, Cal. The Rev. Joseph Morrison, pastor of St. Justin's, made this announcement.

A memorial service for artists will be held this afternoon at 4:30 at St. Stephen's Episcopal church, known as "The Little Church at the End of the Road," 3533 North Albany avenue. This was announced by the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker.

Growing With Chicago

THIS month finds work starting on a new 500-room section of the Morrison Hotel. The site is now being prepared on the Madison Street frontage.

Subleases Continue Low Rate Policy

The new building will maintain on a broader scale the present policy of transferring to the guests the benefit of the saving derived from high subrental values. The rate-scale throughout the hotel is far lower than warranted by the unexcelled service and equipment.

Rooms $2.50 Up, Each With Bath

Every room is outside, with bath, running ice-water, telephone, bed-head lamp, and Servidor; the last-named affords valet service without contact with employes. A housekeeper is stationed on every floor, and garage service is of exceptional merit.
